Mujib Unmoved on War Trials

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

DACCA — Bangladesh will insist on trying "several hundred" Pakistanis for alleged war crimes, Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman said Thursday in an exclusive interview. "And if Pakistan tries to keep back Bengalis from coming home in retaliation, that will make no difference," he added.

"We will hold open tribunals — anyone can come and watch them." Mujib said that he would "reject any attempt to bargain innocent people against war criminals. We shall not try innocent people. And the rest of the Pakistani soldiers can go home as far as we are concerned."

Five lawyers have already been named as prosecutors for the war crimes tribunal.

The prime minister said he intends to transform the present constituent assembly — composed of members elected last year — into a parliament that will run its full five-year course. "We have been elected for five years and it will take a long time to rebulid our shattered administration and economy. We need time for that." He added with a smile, "if anyone really wants elections they can have them at any time."

Talking over tea and sweets in the former presidential palace here, which he used as an official residence though he continues to sleep in his own house, Mujib showed few signs of strain or of the inordinately long hours he keeps. He was optimistic to the point of euphoria, belittling every problem that was raised.

Of the beleaguered 800,000 Biharis, most of whom now live in overcrowded camps in which food is running out, he said: "I allow the Red Cross to visit them and look after them. My own people are complaining about it and want me to give priority to them."

He said 7,000 Biharis had already been given work in a Dacca factory. Of their future: "We shall accept as citizens any of them who wish to remain as Bangladeshis. All the rest will be allowed to go." But no exit permits have been issued to Biharis so far. Sheikh Mujib expressed no doubts that Bangladesh would be able to maintain its political and economic independence. "Our closest link is not with Russia or even India but with Britain. We have already started sending jute to Dundee (in Scotland) in our own ships from our own ports.

"It was no accident that Britain was the first country I visited." Economic domination by India, which is feared by many Bangladeshis "cannot happen because for one thing 8 per cent of foreign trade has now been nationalized our trade with India is essentially on a barter basis," he noted.

He said the country would now be importing coal and other raw materials from India at a fraction of the price that Pakistan used to pay China. "If you call that domination, then we like it," he said.

He claimed armed robberies — still a daily occurence in most rural regions — are "no worse than they were in the old regime," and that "anyone can now move freely and without fear anywhere in the country." Explaining his recently reported statement that Naxalites (extreme Maoist communists) should be "shot on sight," he said he had not meant real Nazalites but "robbers who pretend to be revolutionaries."

CDC Ready To Purchase Gov't Firms

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Development Corp. is ready to negotiate acquisition of Crown-owned Polymer Corp. and the Crown's 45-percent interest in Panarctic Oils Ltd., "as soon as the government is ready dto do so," CDC chairman H. Anthony Hampson said Friday.

"I must emphasize that both the government and ourselves are anxious to arrive at realistic and fair prices for any Crown corporations bought," Mr. Hampson told the Personnel Association of Toronto.

"This could be an encouraging and constructive precedent under which certain enterprises — whether new or existing — might move out from under government ownership in future when there is no longer any good reason for them to remain there."

The CDC was launched by Parliament last year with an initial capitalization of $100 million and options on Polymer, Eldorado Nuclear Ltd., Northern Transportation Ltd., and the government's holdings in Panarctic.

BIRD NAMES GET TYPO TREATMENT

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — What is a typo? It's when a word supposed to be spelled one way turns up in print anotyer wya. Like that!

Such was the case when writer Natalie Kelly correctly spelled the names of 50 birds, but as Foster's Daily Democrat said, "this is what we did:

"Turned a great cormorant into a great cornernut; called the horned grebe a hoone grebe; impolitely treated the common goldeneye as a common goldemaye; indiscreetly slandered the surf scoter and the common scoter, calling them the surf seater and common sector; injudiciously maligned the common grackle as the common crackle; and just plain miserably termed the house sparrow the mouse sparrow."

CARPENTERS RALLY

VANCOUVER — As many as 400 carpenters are expected to attend a rally today to protest "unrealistic" bargaining by the construction industry.

A spokesman for the carpenters said they would assemble at the courthouse and parade around the Hotel Vancouver, where the Construction Labor Relations Association is meeting.

'NIXON WOULD DISOBEY COURT'

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Governor Ronald Reagan says U.S. President Nixon was prepared to disobey if the U.S. Supreme Court ordered him to halt the Amchitka nuclear test in Alaska in November.

The court did not order a halt to the controversial underground test, which was held in the Aleutians, despite objections from environmentalists who feared an earthquake. None occurred.

"The president said to me, 'Even if the Supreme Court ruled that I could not do it I have determined that as commander-in-chief it is my responsibility and I am going to do it anyway'," Reagan told the California Republican Assembly Saturday night.

IWA Seeks Logging Death Probe

The International Woodworkers of America said today it will ask the attorney-general for an investigation into the death of a Sooke logger March 21.

District coroner Eugene Murphy ruled Thursday night that the death of Peter Fulton Hill, 62, was accidental and attached no blame to the employer, Tripp Creek Logging Co.

Hill was struck by a falling snag, part of a dead tree in the area in which he and other loggers were working.

Victoria IWA president Murray Drew cited a section of the accident prevention regulations of the Workmen's Compensation Act, which reads: "When practicable, snags shall be felled before falling the live trees, and snags shall be felled into open areas."

He said Hill's death was the third similar one recently in the area.

BLUE LIGHTS FOR POLICE

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The rotating red lights on the rooftops of Washington State police patrol cars will be changed to blue April 17.

Spot and grill lights will still be red until motorists get used to the blue lights and learn to recognize them, Furseth said. Then they will be changed too.

Furseth said blue lights shine farther in poor weather and do not blend with tail lights of cars ahead at an accident scene.

DISPUTE CANCELS CHESS MATCH

AMSTERDAM (Reuter) — The World Chess Federation cancelled Thursday the world championship match in Belgrade between Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union and the United States challenger Bobby Fischer after a long dispute with Fischer over financial terms.

Belgrade was to have been the site for the first half of the championship match from June 22 to July 8. The second half was fixed for Reykjavik, Iceland.

Terms for the match were originally agreed on March 31, but Fischer was reported to have subsequently sought a larger financial share, including a share of television and film fees.

New Terror Wave Launched by IRA

BELFAST (CP) — About 30 terrorist bomb explosions rocked Northern Ireland Thursday night and today in the worst guerrilla offensive since Britain took over direct control of Ulster exactly three weeks ago.

Few parts of Ulster's six counties escaped blasts during the last 24 hours of bombings that left one civilian dead, eight injured and an estimated $2.6 million in property damage.

The costliest blast damaged a dozen buses in a depot in central Belfast Thursday. The wave of bombings continued through the night and into today.

Security officials blamed the bombings on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

IMPOSE BAN

Security forces reacted to the bombing wave by announcing that as of Monday a large part of Belfast's city centre will be sealed off to all traffic from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The traffic ban is designed to cut down the number of bombs left in parked cars.

Shops and factories in the area were ordered to take deliveries before 11 a.m. The ban runs Monday through Saturday.

Belfast police theorized that IRA had intensified its bombing campaign probably as a result of a new shipment of gelignite. About 1,000 pounds of gelignite were used in the latest blasts, police said.

The casualty toll included one dead woman, whose home was turned into an inferno by a time bomb, and one man, two women, three soldiers and two police officers wounded.

The death list after 32 months of violence stood at 301.

Former prime minister Brian Faulkner claimed the British government was averting its eyes from IRA aggression.

In his most trenchant blast at London yet, Faulkner declared: "The British government seems determined to give the gunmen and the bombers a free hand."

Faulkner was hitting at British army policy of containing IRA strongholds like Londonderry's Bogside and Creggan districts and the Falls and Ardoyne in Belfast. He wants the troops to pierce the concrete and steel barricades flung round the enclaves and weed the outlaws out.

The army believes the task would need thousands of soldiers and could result in terrible bloodshed. Tens of thousands of Roman Catholic civilians live in the sealed-off areas.

YOUTHS CHARGED

Meanwhile, two teen-age youths were charged today with assaulting a pregnant Belfast mother who was beaten and hounded from her home by a masked gang.

A court ordered William Hanna, 19, and Daniel McCashin, 17, held in custody on charges of causing grievous bodily harm to Philomena McGucken.

Both were arrested by British troops in Belfast early today.

DRINK LAW JUNE 1

British Columbia's new get-tough laws for drinking drivers will go into effect June 1.

Amendments to the Motor Vehicle Act passed at the last legislative session will enable the motor vehicle branch to require heavy drinkers with bad driving records to demonstrate they have changed their habits.

The new legislation makes mandatory a one month licence suspension on first conviction for impaired driving and at least six months' suspension on second conviction.

The "at least" provision will allow the branch to hold back a licence for longer periods.

Cong Rockets Blast Saigon

Times News Services

South Vietnamese paratroopers flown into action by helicopter today drove North Vietnamese troops out of An Loc, 60 miles above Saigon, but the Communist offensive rolled on elsewhere and Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airbase came under fire tonight.

Military sources said Communist gunners fired three rockets at Tan Son Nhut on the northwestern outskirts of Saigon but missed the sprawling base itself and killed 11 civilians and wounded four when the explosives hit a market place.

It was the first attack on the Saigon area since the Communists launched their offensive March 30 and the first since last Dec. 20 when a small rocket attack hit inside the city and wounded a number of persons.

With the North Vietnamese offensive in its 16th day, the South Vietnamese command reported a total of 107 Communist attacks across the country between 6 a.m. Thursday and 6 a.m. today. It was the highest number for a 24-hour period since the 1968 Tet offensive, and 60 were rocket and mortar attacks.

Coming from the south, a government armored column of 40 tanks and 20,000 soldiers moving along Route 13 from Saigon to relieve An Loc was stalled again today. The South Vietnamese force has not moved more than about six miles in the last three days.

It has been pounded by constant rocket and mortar fire by northern troops on both sides of the road where it now is halted about 11 miles south of An Loc.

Meanwhile President Nixon has sent a major general on his White House staff to Vietnam to assess the military situation. But Nixon's press officer said the mission did not mean the president has any increased misgivings about the battle.

NIXON, PM TALK TRADE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon agreed today to review their positions in the trade dispute between the countries, with a view to getting the deadlocked discussions started again.

Ron Ziegler, White House press secretary, told reporters after the morning meetings that "the attitude was one of moving toward getting these talks started again."

The prime minister and the president met for an hour and 45 minutes, including a half-hour session with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and William Rogers, U.S. secretary of state.

The president later spent 25 minutes with Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

Addressing a joint sitting of the Canadian Commons and Senate in the crowded green Commons chamber later, Nixon pledged his administration to respect Canada's desire to develop socially and economically in its own way.

He called for a new era in U.S.-Canada relations that spurns "sentimental rhetoric" and recognizes separate identities and significant differences between the two countries.

"Let us recognize once and for all that the only basis for a sound and healthy relationship between our two proud peoples is to find a pattern of economic interaction which is beneficial to both our countries — and which respects Canada's right to chart its own economic course."

The visiting U.S. president also urged Canada to support the United States in efforts "to build a permanent post-war era — an era of lasting peace" in co-operation with China and Russia.

During the two-mile motorcade from Government House, where Nixon is staying, to the parliament complex, small groups of Ottawa residents turned out in curiosity to see the American president whiz by. One city bus driver was seen saluting.

Nixon's appearance was marked by unprecedented security in Ottawa. He walked through a line of scarlet-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police after departing from his limousine on the hill.

The only disruptive incident occurred behind the crowd barriers as Nixon left his limousine to enter the Parliament buildings. A young protester was hauled back by plainclothes RCMP officers when he began yelling, "Pig, pig," in the president's direction.

Avalanche Buries Climbers

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Fifteen Asian climbers have been killed in the worst tragedy in the history of Himalayan exploration.

Four South Koreans, a Japanese cameraman and 10 Napalese Sherpa guides were buried Monday by an avalanche that crashed down on the camp of a South Korean expedition attempting to scale 26,752-foot Mount Manaslu, the world's eighth-tallest peak.

Seven Koreans and two Sherpas survived.

The expedition leader, Jung Jung Sup Kim, was lifted from a glacier by helicopter and flown back to Katmandu along with Hae Yun Byong, a 33-year-old Korean newspaper man in the party, and one of Kim's brothers who was critically injured in the avalanche.

'UN Threatened'

HARRIMAN, N.Y. (UPI) — Arthur Goldberg warns that relations between the United States and the United Nations are so strained that the survival of the world organization is threatened.

"Never, since its creation in 1945, has the United Nations been so downgraded as an important component of American policy as it is today under the present administration," the former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said Thursday.

Strikers Parade Before Bourassa

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Thousands of striking civil servants demonstrated for more than an hour today outside the national assembly buildings in Quebec City, while staff shortages in provincial hospitals posed "a threat to life."

The demonstrating civil servants met outside the building where Premier Robert Bourassa has been staying since the four-day strike started and then moved on to the streets, parking cars across roadways under the eyes of police.

Police said the demonstration was orderly.

The Quebec government described the situation in the hospitals as "serious but not critical" and leaders of the three common front unions which called the walkout said their members would provide essential services.

But Dr. Edouard Henri Letellier, medical director at Charles Lemoyne Hospital in suburban Montreal, said the situation there had deteriorated to the point where it posed "a threat to life." In declaring a state of emergency he cited the rapid drain of such vital supplies as food and the fatigue of those employees still on the job.

The indefinite strike, which followed a 24-hour walkout March 28, has also shut down government offices, hundreds of schools, licence bureaus, courts, highway maintenance, liquor outlets and tax bureaus.

In Toronto, secret negotiations were reported continuing today to end that city's five-day-old civic strike which has resulted in rotting garbage in plastic bags piling up in Toronto parks.

The walkout by 4,000 civic outside workers has halted garbage collection in the city and the boroughs of York and East York since Monday. On Thursday the borough of Scarborough after an emergency council meeting also halted garbage pickups. By Monday collection in North York and Etobicoke may be reduced to once a week.

The behind-the-scenes negotiations were said to be conducted by independent sources trusted by both Local 43 and the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Metro-city bargaining team.

'Nuclear Talks' Stir Japanese

TOKYO (WP) — Despite categorical American denials, opposition charges that the U.S. Navy is secretly negotiating with Japan to establish a "bilateral nuclear force" provoked a national uproar Thursday after Socialist leaders unveiled an alleged Navy cablegram in the Diet (Parliament).

Socialist deputy Yanosuxe Narasaka confronted Prime Minister Eisaku Sato with a copy of a purported secret message from the secretary of the navy to the commander of U.S. naval forces in Japan, urging that negotiations for a bilateral force be pressed "as one of the measures in the prevention of nuclear blackmail by a third power."

Dated Jan. 5, 1972, the alleged document cites "China's efforts to increase her nuclear power and the strengthened naval presence of the Soviet Union in the Pacific" as the key arguments for the proposed force, adding that "with the reduction of the American military in Japan, the importance of mobile and nuclear forces has increased."

An American embassy statement promptly dismissed the cable as "faked." Declaring that "no such message was either sent or received," the embassy said that "there has been no discussion with the government of Japan of any kind, preliminary or otherwise, concerning any kind of military or naval co-operation involving U.S. nuclear weapons."

The socialist charges acquired an aura of ready credibility with the public against the background of Defence Secretary Melvin Laird's controversial visit here last July and the recent appearance of an article in a government-subsidized journal parallelling the purported U.S. plan.

'Toil of Poor' Pays for U.S. Affluence

SANTIAGO (WP) — Chilean President Salvador Allende opened the third U.N. Conference on Trade and Development Thursday with an impassioned denunciation of industrial states for creating a world where "the toil and resources of the poorer nations pay for prosperity of the affluent peoples."

Before 1,500 delegates from 141 nations, Allende singled out the United States, international corporations and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as flagrant perpetrators of "unfair international division of labor, based on a dehumanized concept of mankind."

Playing host to UNCTAD, as the five-week conference is known, Allende offered numerous local examples to document his indictment of the developed world:

"Experience, often a hard taskmaster, has taught us that in order to meet our people's needs and provide each one with the means of full self-realization, it was essential to leave behind the capitalist regime of dependence and forge ahead along a new road, the socialism we are starting to build."

Despite the tough-talking Marxist's picture of a world in which the greedy maintain rigid control, Allende concluded his 70-minute speech by suggesting that over all, conditions are favorable for a new economic order.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim then spoke briefly in what seemed to be an effort at softening the criticisms of the industrial states, whose co-operation is needed if the conference is to achieve its objective of aiding more balanced development.

Allende's only conciliatory move was to avoid in most cases specifically naming the United States in his attacks, though the target was obvious to all.

Said Allende: "This economic, financial and trade order, as prejudicial to the third world as it is so beneficial for the affluent countries, is defended by most of these with bulldog tenacity — through their economic might, through their cultural influence, and, on some occasions, and by some powers, through almost irresistible forms of pressure, through armed interventions which violate all the commitments assumed in the charter of the United Nations."

Later he enumerated U.S. military interventions over the years in this hemisphere and specified economic pressures mounted against Peru and Chile to protect American interests.

As for the international corporations, he said: "They have their own objectives, their own trade policies, their own shipping policies . . . a world of their own."

Allende noted "the plundering indulged in by these consortia, and their powerful corruptive influence on public institutions in rich and poor countries alike," and suggested they were a burden on U.S. taxpayers.

Mujib Unmoved on War Trials

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

DACCA — Bangladesh will insist on trying "several hundred" Pakistanis for alleged war crimes, Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman said Thursday in an exclusive interview. "And if Pakistan tries to keep back Bengalis from coming home in retaliation, that will make no difference," he added.

"We will hold open tribunals — anyone can come and watch them." Mujib said that he would "reject any attempt to bargain innocent people against war criminals. We shall not try innocent people. And the rest of the Pakistani soldiers can go home as far as we are concerned."

Five lawyers have already been named as prosecutors for the war crimes tribunal.

The prime minister said he intends to transform the present constituent assembly — composed of members elected last year — into a parliament that will run its full five-year course. "We have been elected for five years and it will take a long time to rebulid our shattered administration and economy. We need time for that." He added with a smile, "if anyone really wants elections they can have them at any time."

Talking over tea and sweets in the former presidential palace here, which he used as an official residence though he continues to sleep in his own house, Mujib showed few signs of strain or of the inordinately long hours he keeps. He was optimistic to the point of euphoria, belittling every problem that was raised.

Of the beleaguered 800,000 Biharis, most of whom now live in overcrowded camps in which food is running out, he said: "I allow the Red Cross to visit them and look after them. My own people are complaining about it and want me to give priority to them."

He said 7,000 Biharis had already been given work in a Dacca factory. Of their future: "We shall accept as citizens any of them who wish to remain as Bangladeshis. All the rest will be allowed to go." But no exit permits have been issued to Biharis so far. Sheikh Mujib expressed no doubts that Bangladesh would be able to maintain its political and economic independence. "Our closest link is not with Russia or even India but with Britain. We have already started sending jute to Dundee (in Scotland) in our own ships from our own ports.

"It was no accident that Britain was the first country I visited." Economic domination by India, which is feared by many Bangladeshis "cannot happen because for one thing 8 per cent of foreign trade has now been nationalized our trade with India is essentially on a barter basis," he noted.

He said the country would now be importing coal and other raw materials from India at a fraction of the price that Pakistan used to pay China. "If you call that domination, then we like it," he said.

He claimed armed robberies — still a daily occurence in most rural regions — are "no worse than they were in the old regime," and that "anyone can now move freely and without fear anywhere in the country." Explaining his recently reported statement that Naxalites (extreme Maoist communists) should be "shot on sight," he said he had not meant real Nazalites but "robbers who pretend to be revolutionaries."

CDC Ready To Purchase Gov't Firms

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Development Corp. is ready to negotiate acquisition of Crown-owned Polymer Corp. and the Crown's 45-percent interest in Panarctic Oils Ltd., "as soon as the government is ready dto do so," CDC chairman H. Anthony Hampson said Friday.

"I must emphasize that both the government and ourselves are anxious to arrive at realistic and fair prices for any Crown corporations bought," Mr. Hampson told the Personnel Association of Toronto.

"This could be an encouraging and constructive precedent under which certain enterprises — whether new or existing — might move out from under government ownership in future when there is no longer any good reason for them to remain there."

The CDC was launched by Parliament last year with an initial capitalization of $100 million and options on Polymer, Eldorado Nuclear Ltd., Northern Transportation Ltd., and the government's holdings in Panarctic.

BIRD NAMES GET TYPO TREATMENT

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — What is a typo? It's when a word supposed to be spelled one way turns up in print anotyer wya. Like that!

Such was the case when writer Natalie Kelly correctly spelled the names of 50 birds, but as Foster's Daily Democrat said, "this is what we did:

"Turned a great cormorant into a great corniernut; called the horned grebe a hoone grebe; impolitely treated the common goldeneye as a common goldemaye; indiscreetly slandered the surf scoter and the common scoter, calling them the surf seater and common sector; injudiciously maligned the common grackle as the common crackle; and just plain miserably termed the house sparrow the mouse sparrow."

'NIXON WOULD DISOBEY COURT'

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — Governor Ronald Reagan says U.S. President Nixon was prepared to disobey if the U.S. Supreme Court ordered him to halt the Amchitka nuclear test in Alaska in November.

The court did not order a halt to the controversial underground test, which was held in the Aleutians, despite objections from environmentalists who feared an earthquake. None occurred.

"The president said to me, 'Even if the Supreme Court ruled that I could not do it I have determined that as commander-in-chief it is my responsibility and I am going to do it anyway'," Reagan told the California Republican Assembly Saturday night.

IWA Seeks Logging Death Probe

The International Woodworkers' Union said today it will ask the attorney-general for an investigation into the death of a Sooke logger March 21.

District coroner Eugene Murphy ruled Thursday night that the death of Peter Fulton Hill, 62, was accidental and attached no blame to the employer, Tripp Creek Logging Co.

Hill was struck by a falling snag, part of a dead tree in the area in which he and other loggers were working.

Drew cited a section of the accident prevention regulations of the Workmen's Compensation Act, which reads: "When practicable, snags shall be felled before falling the live trees, and snags shall be felled into open areas."

He said Hill's death was the third similar one recently in the area.

BLUE LIGHTS FOR POLICE

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The rotating red lights on the rooftops of Washington State police patrol cars will be changed to blue April 17.

Spot and grill lights will still be red until motorists get used to the blue lights and learn to recognize them, Furseth said. Then they will be changed too.

Furseth said blue lights shine farther in poor weather and do not blend with tail lights of cars ahead at an accident scene.

DISPUTE CANCELS CHESS MATCH

AMSTERDAM (Reuter) — The World Chess Federation cancelled Thursday the world championship match in Belgrade between Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union and the United States challenger Bobby Fischer after a long dispute with Fischer over financial terms.

Belgrade was to have been the site for the first half of the championship match from June 22 to July 8. The second half was fixed for Reykjavik, Iceland.

Terms for the match were originally agreed on March 31, but Fischer was reported to have subsequently sought a larger financial share, including a share of television and film fees.

Nature Study A Rocky Test

WILDLIFE
harold hosford

To paraphrase a well-known television commercial for a popular American alcoholic beverage, a rock is a rock, is a rock, is a rock, until you've tasted geology. Last week the Hosford clan tasted geology. The rocks around Victoria, as well as the Hosfords, may never be the same again.

It wasn't a spur-of-the-moment thing. After all, you can't live for long in a land so well-endowed with rocks as British Columbia is without getting a little curious about where they came from and how they were made. And our curiosity has been building.

It was an article by A. H. Marrion in a fine little publication, The Naturalist's Guide to Victoria, that finally cast the die.

FIRST STEP

Marrion's article really started us looking at rocks the first step towards discovering that they aren't all the same. But you've got to get under the skin, so to speak, to prove this. Old, weathered rocks, rocks that have been exposed to the elements for hundreds of years, generally do look much the same. Behind — or under — that weathered facade you find a whole new world of color and grain, which, if you're forearmed with a guide book, reveals the exciting geological past of southern Vancouver Island.

In Marrion's article the locations of more than 30 geological features in the Victoria, Saanich, Malahat area are described. The list makes an ideal "Cooks Tour" for anyone just starting out.

FOUND THREE

Being of an orderly bent, the Hosfords started at the top of the list and are working down. So far, of the first five features described, we've been able to find three, all fairly close to home and each a paragraph in our tumultuous geologic history.

First was a rather unspectacular hump of reddish brown rock on a small cut of the E and N Railway behind Goldstream Inn. It took a little hammering to get down through the oxidized surface material to expose the natural dark grey, fine-grained, thinly-layered rock beneath, but once there we were looking on what may be the oldest rocks in this area.

Called Leech River schists, these rocks, estimated to be about 300 million years old, were laid down at a time when this part of the earth was covered by a placid sea.

BIGGER, BETTER

With one discovery under our belts, and a few samples for the collection, it was on to bigger and better things. This time the massive wall of rock that skirts Malahat Drive above Finlayson Arm. Here, in great contorted and twisted layers and mounds, is written a chapter of our geologic history marked by titanic volcanic eruptions when lava and ash were spewed over the older rocks to form much of the foundation on which our modern landscape is superimposed.

There, the Malahat and Vancouver volcanic rocks, which today in the Victoria area lie side by side, were actually separated in time by a vast period when limestones accumulated, once again under tranquil seas. But, except in the Duncan area, these softer limestones are long gone, the victims of time and the elements, to leave two great volcanic periods of our history looking as if they had been contemporaries.

VOLCANIC

But among the masses of greenish-grey volcanic rocks we found what, to us at least, was our most interesting discovery. Thanks to a little prompting from Marrion we found the deeply folded and twisted beds of volcanic ash, now turned to rock, which recorded a series of volcanic upheavals.

About a mile south of the Dutch Latch, exposed for any sharp-eyed rockhound to see, was layer upon layer, 1" to 3" thick, of tuff—crystallized volcanic ash—now a pale grey colored rock, delicately shaded with lavender.

Originally laid down in level beds, these layers of tuff now looked more like those curiously curved pieces of multi-colored candy so popular around Christmas — without the color, of course.

So, there you have page one of The Hosfords Go to the Rocks. Ahead, some day, will be visits to places like Gordon Head where on 180 feet of cliff are written a sizable part of the history of glaciation in the Victoria area.

TWISTED LAYERS of rock along the Malahat are graphic evidence of the titanic forces at work on the earth. They were once level layers of volcanic ash. (Harold Hosford photo)

U.S. Aims at Networks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. justice department says it will file suit aimed at breaking up network control over television entertainment programming. The action would rank as one of the government's strongest attacks on prime-time TV shows.

The department said the civil suits will accuse the Columbia Broadcasting System, National Broadcasting Co., American Broadcasting Co. and a related firm with violating anti-trust laws.

The justice department confirmed only that suits will be filed in a few days.

The government intention seems unlikely to have an immediate effect on the programs beamed into millions of homes because of the anticipated lengthy route to a final court settlement.

The justice department said the civil anti-trust suits will charge that the networks "have monopolized and restrained trade in prime-time television entertainment programs."

Department spokesmen said news programming would not be affected.

CBS President Robert Wood said the government apparently wants to hand the program-production role to advertising agencies and motion-picture producers.

The programs involved are the entertainment shows aired between 7:30 and 11 p.m. EST.

ABC said only 10 per cent of its prime-time shows are network-produced and Wood said the figure is 8.2 per cent for CBS. No figures were available for NBC.

Communication System Needed

MONTREAL (CP) — More systematic consultations are needed between Canada and the United States to gain insights into each other's policy thinking, says a report by a committee on U.S.-Canadian problems.

The committee says such an improved system of communication would expose differences "before they had become hardened into irrevocable positions."

The group, called the Canadian-American Committee, and made up of businessmen, labor, agricultural and professional leaders, drafted the report last month and released it today to coincide with President Nixon's visit to Ottawa.

The report says Canada's international economic position has strengthened in the last decade while that of the U.S. has become weaker.

U.S. balance of payments deficit averaged $5 billion in the period 1969-71, while Canada's registered a surplus of more than $1 billion for the same period.

POSITION SOUND?

"In Washington . . . it appears that U.S. officials consider Canada's new surplus position . . . to be soundly based and likely to persist," the report says.

"This presumption, unless clearly disproven by developments, should act against giving special consideration to Canada among developed countries, as had been done occasionally in the past."

Canada is inclined to regard recent balance-of-payments surplusses as temporary "and thus fears a return to traditional large bilateral deficits unless new corrective policies are adopted."

Many of these potential new strains on relations arise over differences in basic viewpoints between Americans and Canadians and, therefore, elected representatives of the two countries should also be involved in consultations.

The committee is sponsored by two nonprofit research organizations, the National Planning Association in the United States and the Private Planning Association of Canada.

The co-chairmen are Robert M. Fowler, president of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, and Augustine R. Marusi, chairman and president of Borden Inc.

LIONS CHECK THEFT

A program to discourage theft and burglary called Operation Identification will be launched Saturday by the Victoria Central Lions Club.

At a $2 fee per day, an engraving tool can be rented from the Lions club to mark items with a driver's licence number. A window decal to show that items have been marked is also provided.

The program was introduced in Monterey, California, in 1963. Since then less than 1-10 of one per cent of those using Operation Identification were tabbed compared to 30 per cent of those without it, officials said.

About 150 cities and communities across Canada have begun the program.

Zoning Hearing Set for Saturday

A revised zoning bylaw for the Outer Gulf Islands will go before a public hearing Saturday.

Copies of the proposed bylaw are available at each community hall on Galiano, Mayne, Pender and Saturna islands.

The hearing will be at 1.30 p.m. in the Pender Islands Recreation and Agricultural Hall on Port Washington Road.

After the hearing, the proposed bylaw will be returned to the Capital Regional District board for consideration.

The New Old Friends

It was interesting that in his arrival speech at the Ottawa airport yesterday President Nixon noted the visit comes midway between his February trip to China and his scheduled drop-in on Moscow in May. He recognized the need, "when we are seeking new relationships with our adversaries," also to look for "better relations with our friends."

Mr. Nixon might also have remarked that his visit comes only a few months after Canada's diplomatic recognition of China, and our agreement with Russia for mutual consultation when required. In both of these international initiatives Canada was far ahead of United States policy, and certainly in the case of Mr. Trudeau's Moscow agreement there was considerable American criticism of so advanced a step.

In a sense, then, Mr. Nixon comes to visit with old friends to whom he does not need to explain his Peking and Moscow overtures, although doubtless Mr. Trudeau will be anxious to receive some first-hand information on the rather enigmatic Peking talks.

But he also will be talking with a Canadian head of government who has gone far beyond his predecessors in establishing an independent Canadian foreign policy. He will be talking with a nation which today finds it necessary to assert its own special needs and directions despite — more accurately because of — the immense weight of friendly United States financial, cultural and trade influence in this country.

This can all be done within the bounds of the special mutual friendship which both countries stress. Certainly there need be no anti-Americanism in our assertion of Canadianism. And Mr. Nixon's statement that in handling differences of opinion "the American-Canadian way should be an example to all the world" is as true today as it ever was.

What is new is that we now openly recognize our differences and there are more of them to recognize. That is inevitable in any relationship involving two countries each of which is taking on more and more domestic and world responsibilities. There will be more differences of opinion on international matters, such as the Vietnam conflict, and still more on continental matters, such as pollution of joint waterways, use of energy resources, encouragement or restriction of trade, and many similar issues.

In his speech of welcome, Governor-General Michener said of the people of both countries, "We are all North Americans." President Nixon was a little more reserved in saying "we have our own separate identities." Both statements are correct. But Governor-General Michener was perhaps speaking a little more generally, for not many Canadians will follow his reference beyond the matter of population to include our land or our resources.

The concept that Canada's resources are also North American will probably be one of the most vital issues on which the two countries will differ in the years ahead, and the outcome will do much to determine the future of Canada as a national entity. Let us hope it will be settled in the "American-Canadian way."

Turn of the Tide

At the University of Toronto, as on other campuses this year, an old trend is re-emerging. Students are showing a restored recognition of their purpose in going to institutions of higher learning. They go, it appears, to take advantage of the formal educational opportunities provided and to study.

This seems to be the explanation for the resounding defeat suffered by the former president of the U of T students' administrative council who sought re-election to that office following his leadership of the group confronting the university officials in a demonstration over access to a new library there. The winner of the election advanced the conviction that his success showed students to be opposed to disruptive tactics.

Parallels will be drawn here and elsewhere over other student elections of relatively recent date — revealing a trend that could do much to restore not only campus stability, but improve relations between students and the communities in university towns.

A New Industry?

The late and highly respected director of the provincial museum, Dr. Clifford Carl, was sceptical of proposals to raise Atlantic lobsters on this coast. Several attempts had completely failed. He felt that the money used for such experiments here would be better spent on the east coast lobster in its native habitat. But with the first phase of a transplanted lobster experiment completed at Fatty Basin in Barkley Sound there is some indication that Dr. Carl's view may have been too conservative.

Under the conditions existing at Fatty Basin the eastern lobsters have thrived through all their life stages, including the delicate larva phase. The next question is the commercial feasibility of large-scale lobster farms. The Fisheries Department can go no further with experiments until an administrative decision is made.

This may be the opportune time for enterprising fishermen and other interested parties to gamble that, with suitable water conditions, they can make a commercial go of it. The demand for lobster is high and current prices match the demand. As an addition to other ocean fishing, the lobster trade could prove a valuable local industry.

Sense Instead of Cliches

OTTAWA: It makes good sense at times to emphasize the obvious, as the small boy demonstrated when he pointed out to unbelieving spectators that the emperor wore no clothes.

In the case of the so-called "industrial strategy," various politicans and advanced thinkers have been victims of the opposite illusion. The emperor, according to their anguished chants, has been out riding — presumably for years — in his bare skin. It has been left for John Turner, in a speech at Toronto, to show that this is arrant nonsense. The emperor's attire is not above criticism; it may be deficient by contemporary fashion standards. But clothed he is and clothed he always was.

If the politicians have been suffering from eye troubles, they can attribute a portion of the blame to scientists in government service. The Science Council of Canada published last October a somewhat lurid essay entitled: Innovation in a Cold Climate: The Dilemma of Canadian Manufacturing. Scientists bring their auras with them when they come to Ottawa and their words are accordingly repeated in reverential tones by the politicians who happen to read them.

'Strategy' Emphasis

In this brief treatise on government and economics (notoriously unscientific fields), the council made frequent references to an "industrial strategy." Sample quotations: "The council concludes that a national industrial strategy is urgently needed and lists some of the components essential to the formulation of this strategy." ... "If both parties (government and industry) are willing to co-operate a national industrial strategy can be formulated to produce substantial economic and social benefits in the years ahead."

It is perhaps logical to conclude that, if we are in urgent need of a national industrial strategy, we do not now have it. To judge from the recent flow of jargon, this certainly is the impression that a number of politicians drew from the council's report. It is doubtless unfair to seize on sentences out of context but in Ottawa any phrase passing into fashionable bureaucratic speech tends to acquire mysterious significance even though it may be utterly devoid of meaning.

The next stage is, of course, for politicians to pledge themselves in all solemnity to provide what we are supposed to lack, in this case an industrial strategy. Plainly, the government is at fault. It should heed the scientists; produce a strategy immediately; pluck it, presumably, out of some cabinet minister's hat.

Mr. Turner had not the slightest difficulty in showing that there has always been a strategy. At one time it was easier to comprehend because the world was a simpler place. In the 19th century, we launched the national policy of tariffs as the complement of the East-West transportation policy. Its purpose was to encourage the development of infant industries (some of which have not stopped squalling from that day to this). For this purpose we also encouraged the inflow of capital investment and immigrants.

JOHN TURNER
... conveys good sense

More recently and particularly since the war, the strategy has been to encourage wider and freer trade. This has been complemented by a great variety of programs intended to assist Canadian producers in taking advantage of market opportunities around the globe.

In general this strategy has been reasonably successful as shown by the pace of development. As Mr. Turner noted, we have increased the percentage of manufactured goods in Canadian exports from 10 in 1950 to 36 today.

From some of the superficial chatter about an industrial strategy it might be supposed that we are quite free to mix in this or that component according to our choice. But we are not, we never were, and neither is any other country. Even the mighty United States had to devalue its currency. As Mr. Turner observed, the national policy was not regarded as ideal even by its authors. It was considered at the time the best available option, given the American closed door. Any government at any time in Canada must adjust existing policy to take account of the realities in the world.

Mr. Turner dislikes the word "strategy," and with reason. As he remarked, it suggests some sort of military operation with everything planned from on high. This may explain its apparent popularity with the NDP. But government does not play such a role in our society and there is little evidence that Canadians expect it to play that role. There is, on the contrary, much criticism that it interferes too much with the producers and consumers who are the prime decision-makers in our economy.

The role of government is more modest, although very important. It can set out general guidelines, it can develop broad policies, it should endeavor to create a general climate of confidence (which it failed regrettably to do in the regime of Mr. Turner's predecessor). But the possibilities open to it for modifying policies are limited — as they would be for any other government with any concern for the general welfare.

No Miracles

There is no miraculous national industrial strategy which can be plucked out of a hat and put to use correcting every defect in society and transforming every Canadian into a contented, prosperous citizen, gloriously independent of the imperfect world.

Furthermore, the adjustments which government can make are not becoming easier, they are becoming increasingly more difficult. The government could readily produce a strategy which would satisfy the shoemakers tomorrow, the problem is that it would anger consumers from coast to coast. But it is not merely a question (as it was to a great extent formerly) of reconciling divergent economic interests. Policy must now accommodate concerns which are not primarily economic and may at least in the short run, burden the economy. The obvious example is protection of the natural environment.

Mr. Turner has made relatively few speeches since becoming minister of finance. But at least he has been using a minimum of words to convey a maximum of good sense. This is a welcome change in Ottawa and a sound example for his cabinet colleagues.

New Road Map to Security

LONDON — European diplomats are coming to the conclusion that the much-talked-about conference on European security and co-operation will concentrate on culture and travel. In the sense that exchanges between East and West might contribute to more relaxed relations, the conference will broach security.

"If, and I repeat if, there are expectations of any achievements, people are looking more to co-operation than anything else," a British Foreign Office source said. Prospects have faded in recent weeks for lowering the military confrontation in Europe through mutual and balanced force reductions between NATO and its eastern counterpart, the Warsaw Pact.

The Soviet Union has shown no interest at all in exploring the field for arms reductions with former NATO Secretary-General Manlio Brosio, sources confirm. The impression in diplomatic circles is that Moscow would prefer to deal directly with the U.S., although President Nixon has repeatedly promised not to negotiate over the heads of European NATO partners.

No Fait Accompli

Reluctance to meet Mr. Brosio for preliminary talks is taken as evidence that the Soviets reject mutual disarmament on a bloc approach. NATO has strongly objected to the country-to-country approach. President Nixon's assurances have allayed recurrent fears that NATO partners might be presented with a fait accompli.

American enthusiasm of a year ago for mutual and balanced force reductions appears to have cooled, from a European viewpoint. The parallel and catalytic Congressional campaign to reduce U.S. forces in Europe unilaterally appears from here to be under control. If the pressure has indeed eased on the president, pressure on him to salvage something under a balancing agreement would also be relaxed.

British sources now expect NATO's attention to shift to other aspects which have been lumped under the heading of security. The spring NATO meeting in Bonn will go through the ritual of expressing disappointment that the Soviets have not seen fit to take up NATO's initiative in the Brosio mission. Member ministers are more likely to let the matter rest than to offer another proposal, like appointing one member country to open exploratory talks.

Lack of progress must be a keen disappointment and a diplomatic setback to the Trudeau government. External Affairs Minister Sharp has placed a high priority on force reductions at successive NATO meetings, making clear that they were the objective of continuing behind the scenes diplomacy. In December he said the government was prepared to devote considerable resources in the form of a battery of disarmament experts to the cause.

As events have worked out cultural counsellors (in no short supply here or in Paris) and travel agents will be in demand much sooner.

MANLIO BRASIO
... no Soviet interest

Preparations for the European co-operation conference, if that is what it is to be, can begin after the successful completion of the Berlin agreements (in effect themselves relaxing travel in Berlin). This has been long-standing NATO policy.

In turn the agreements cannot be successfully completed until the West German Parliament has ratified the treaties between Bonn and Moscow and Poland. Chancellor Brandt is fighting an uphill battle with a tiny majority against a united opposition. Voting takes place early in May. There is a strong possibility that a second vote will be required for constitutional reasons and it would not take place until early June.

It is a real cliff-hanger. The whole process could be completed in time for NATO to decide to open preparations for a conference at its spring meeting. Equally, the German political process may run well into June, raising the possibility of a special later meeting. And the prospect that Mr. Brandt may be defeated cannot be discounted.

If his policy wins out, the treaties are ratified, the Berlin agreement takes force, the conditions for a conference are established, there are still some fundamental questions to be ironed out between the two Germanies.

Western Rights

Talks have been going on for several weeks between Bonn and East Berlin. They are seeking recognition by the East Germans of entrenched Western rights regarding the future of all Germany. The aim is to establish the right of Britain, France and the U.S. to a say in any future move for unification or change of frontiers.

Thus plenty of hurdles remain, even apart from the question of mutual and balanced force reductions. A conference on co-operation can take place in spite of the Brosio setback. NATO has never made one conditional, even if desirable, on the other.

As if to anticipate the very long road to the disarmament table several prominent figures have emphasized the need for maintaining strong conventional forces in the absence of disarmament agreement. British Defence Minister Lord Carrington issued a White Paper detailing increases in Soviet defence spending. NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns expressed concern about the falling rate of NATO spending. Lord Chalfont, former Labor disarmament minister, said conventional forces were the essential alternative to nuclear war, however remote the possibility.

"It should be possible to point out without being suspected of warmongering," Lord Chalfont said, "that the military strength of the potential enemy in Europe is in general more than twice as great as that of the West: and that in certain important aspects its superiority is of the order of three to one."

The president of the British Columbia C. of C. states "the directorate of the British Columbia Chamber of Commerce is in agreement that where deferred assessment and-or taxation has been initially mutually agreed upon between the owner and the local taxing authority, such deferred tax be levied and recovered."

Why bring that up? The elderly hard-up homeowner pays when dead.

However it is further stated: the British Columbia Chamber of Commerce has given detailed consideration to the matter of "retroactive land taxation" and is opposed to the imposition of such a tax as being inequitable and being inflationary in that it would invariably greatly increase the sales price of such land.

'Welcome Aboard'

The display "Welcome Aboard" put on by the Victoria Trollers, Sunday, April 9, 1972, in the Inner Harbor was very aptly named and must surely rank as an example of public relations at its very best.

The boats were smart and clean. The owners and their wives courteous, considerate and very interesting to talk to. It was quite evident that they were proud of their boats and equipment but also they had a loyalty to their chosen occupation that you will find very hard to discover anywhere else these days.

You are proud of your gardens and your flowers, Victoria. You can and should be equally proud of your fishing fleet and the men that man it. I am very pleased to hear that the display is to be repeated next year. — Sea Lover.

We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

HALIFAX — The Canadian government marine agency here received a dispatch at 3:15 p.m. that the Titanic is sinking. The message came via the cable ship Minia, off Cape Race.

It is said the steamers towing the Titanic were endeavoring to get her into shoal water near Cape Race to beach her.

Vice-President Franklin of the White Star Line said at 4 o'clock that he had direct and definite information that all the passengers had been transferred from the Titanic.

The Dead Look So Young

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

DONGHA — Don't go any closer to the river, warned the South Vietnamese ranger as we walked toward the bridge over the Cuaviet. "The VC still shoot at us from the bank on their side."

Outside of this grim warning, the ranger was a happy soldier. In fact, one of many happy soldiers in this town on the Cuaviet River — the northern front line for Hanoi's offensive, which started March 30.

There was a reason for their happiness in Dangha. It was another day of ARVN-style shopping in a town where they didn't have to pay any money. Soldiers walked through the streets, abandoned by everybody but them, with sandbag sacks in their hands.

One "shopper" was busily going through a store. He scanned goods and liquor, putting the choicest items in his sandbag. Two others were struggling to carry a big television set out of a private home. A refrigerator, taken out of another place, stood in the street as the new "owner" looked for a truck to transport it.

Perhaps the most operatic scene was one of two rangers at the tailor shop looking through the pile of new uniforms and other clothing for good fits. It was self-service Tuesday, all the way, as they kept trying on one outfit after another in a scene which looked right out of Gilbert and Sullivan — not the joyless Vietnam war.

There was still plenty of that war around, though. Artillery shells from South Vietnamese batteries just to the rear of Dongha whistled overhead and then went blam-blam on some target beyond the woods on the river bank. The misty rain kept the skies quiet of helicopters and jets.

But right underfoot in Dongha there was hard evidence of recent war. Bodies still lay where they had fallen in the town's alleys and streets; houses hit by mortar or artillery stood headless, their roofs blown off or burned up, and the starving animals whose rightful owners left them as they fled south, cried out for food and comfort. The cries of cats and the soulful protest of a calf seemed to tell the silly humans waging war how unfair it all is.

Just two miles south of the busy looters and dying animals was the forward command post for some of the South Vietnamese armor, which was trying to keep North Vietnamese troops from cutting off Dongha and Quangtri City from the west. The story of how the war was going depended on whom you talked to at the post.

An American adviser said the South Vietnamese armor at the moment was taking on North Vietnamese T-54 tanks. The South Vietnamese officer said his forces had shot up all the Hanoi's tanks the night before; there was nothing going on now.

Leaving the Dongha command post and driving south on route one toward Quangtri City brought more graphic evidence of the continued fervor of the other side for this struggle in Quangtri province. The freshly shot bodies of about 12 North Vietnamese soldiers lay sprawled in the ambush holes. The soldiers had dug the holes during the night in a schoolyard just north of Quangtri City.

Somehow—probably with local guides from the Viet Cong guerrilla cadre —a company of North Vietnamese army soldiers had infiltrated thousands of South Vietnamese troops encamped along Route One.

Once in the dark schoolyard, the infiltrators proceeded to dig deep ambush holes in easy firing range of Route One. They stabbed two South Vietnamese soldiers who came upon them as they dug in the dark. The "I'm dying" cries of one stabbed victim alerted other South Vietnamese soldiers. The South Vietnamese poured heavy fire into the vastly outnumbered enemy force, killing a dozen before the others could escape from their holes in the schoolyard.

The enemy objective apparently was to cut Route One by ambushing the traffic. Route One is the main supply line for South Vietnamese troops facing north.

Leaving the dead — they always look so young — we drove farther south, past Quangtri City toward the imperial capital of Hue.

Somehow, the South Vietnamese living off Route One were going on about their daily lives as if the war all around them was just another thunderstorm. The artillery explosions did not break the rhythm of the Vietnamese farmer bent over his rice plants; school boys with bright blue trousers and white shirts walked home from village schools laughing; bright blue and purple flowers spiced up the green fields beside the road. It would be such a beautiful country without the war.

On the highway itself, the anguish quotient was higher. Old women — their belongings tied up and jammed into round straw baskets or into steamer trunks—waited hour after hour for someone going south, away from the war, to pick them up. A family of four, two small children among them, pushed their possessions ahead of them as they walked southward.

Thinking back to the soldier looters of Dongha, it was clear why these poor families feared to leave any belongings behind them in their abandoned homes.

"How about all that looting?" We asked an American sergeant advising the Vietnamese army here.

"Oh," he said of the looters, "they were told to take what they could use to keep the VC from getting it."

The quick and the dead of Vietnam

Another Way of Life

By KAHN-TINETA HORN

(A letter to the editor of The Globe and Mail)

Neil Louttit's very worthy series on the tragic plight of the Indian people without Indian status — called Metis by some but actually Canadian citizens in the legal sense — starts off with a question: "Is there any reason people have to live like that?" The answer must be: "Under the circumstances, yes!"

Education, employment, opportunity, encouragement are not going to solve this problem. Nor is moving 500,000 of these people into the cities going to solve the problem, only worsen it for those moving into the cities and for those having to pick up the welfare, education and medical costs.

The Metis are not forgotten — far from it. Indian, welfare officers, governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are very conscious of the situation.

The real problem lies in the fact that about 24-million people in Canada believe in a certain way of life, and about 1 million people who are of Indian ancestry (250,000 registered and 740,000 caught as a result of the cut-off day) not only do not accept that way of life, but what is worse cannot accept it even if they want.

'Obey Whispers'

To put it crudely, the Indian must "obey the whispers of his ancestors," and those ancestors were unaware of the world in which Indians live today. The Indian must continue to do so, taking pride in being on welfare and not having to take orders from any man, and being ashamed to work and take orders from anyone — for example.

The destructive effect of superior education on Indians is incredible. It generally destroys the Indian, who then returns to contaminate the community in which he lives and then to become a charge on urban society. This is not true in all cases, but it is a curse that the aggressive society existing around Indians tries to select the best of Indians from their communities, deprive them of all leadership, leaving the rejects behind to survive as best they can

Years of Evolution

After listening to and attempting to learn from non-Indian educators from the time I was a small girl, about seven or eight years ago, I realized that we Indians must and can only remain Indians, taking our orders from our ancestors, and evolving within the framework of our brain development brought about by perhaps hundreds of thousands of years of evolution.

As to the Indians without Indian status — call them Metis, half-breeds or what you will — sometimes 16 out of 16 of their ancestors are Indians, but through the legality of deciding what was an Indian less than a century ago they became "Canadian citizens" while people of much less Indian ancestry remained Indians. The children of one of the most prominent of so-called chiefs who deals with the Canadian government and supposedly represents Indians are, according to my calculations, about one eighth Indian — but they have Indian status!

Should the Metis try to abandon their outdoor living, their Indian way of life, and attempt to move into the cities, the cost to support them will be incredible as very few of them will adapt to working in a non-Indian world.

There should be some careful re-screening and checking of ancestry, and some of those Metis who have been deprived of their Indian status should be permitted to return to it or to have it accorded to them. This is a serious matter for the government to undertake but much more valid than allowing white men to marry Indian women and thereby under the so-called Canadian Bill of Rights assume the status of Indians!

Hidden Forces

Then the governments of the western provinces should move ahead without fear in recognition that the Metis, like the Indians, are racially different and that education, opportunity, encouragement, and employment are not going to cure their ills. What will make it possible for the remaining Indians without Indian status to support themselves is another matter, known to some, but something that would not be a popular political solution in a country where everyone is supposed to be the same and have equal opportunity, equal abilities and the person who says there is a difference in races is denounced bitterly (the words used from racist, bigot, activist, militant, etc. are endless).

Housing is desperately needed by Metis, as are other services, but this is not a solution, just satisfying a desperate temporary need. The remedies to a growing crisis must be found deep in the hidden forces within these people — to provide a life which meets with the approval of the whispers of their ancestors, which dictates their lives whether they or the Canadian people like it.

THEIR SECRETS ARE SAFE FROM YOU

THE SUN

The auto insurance companies must be relieved to learn that mum's the word for the B.C. Automobile Insurance Board when it's entrusted with details of their private affairs.

True, board chairman Dr. J. F. K. English added a rider when he assured the trade, at the annual conference of the B.C. Insurance Agents' Association, that he could be trusted with its innermost secrets. They will not be revealed, he said, "when this is not in the public interest." Coming from the boss of a government agency that doesn't believe it is in the public interest to attend hearings on insurance premiums, that should mean the trade secrets are in safe hands indeed.

Because the tight lip is such a sterling asset, it is almost with regret that one is reminded of the embarrassing double standard which the government observes in this very same area.

For years its Motor Vehicle Branch not only has been selling information on automobile registration to a market research firm but, to "insurance companies and other interested parties," the driving records of British Columbians as well.

Of course, for this blatant violation of the individual's privacy the government gets hundreds of thousands of dollars a year from snoopers, junk mail perpetrators, and the like. Probably there isn't this sort of mass market for trade secrets, inasmuch as almost all the insurers seem to share a common confessional anyway. But if there should come a day when the government can violate the insurers' privacy for a fast buck, they had better clear the decks for the junk mail, Dr. English's assurances or not.

No Choice for the Voters

By RICHARD NEEDHAM
The Globe and Mail

Q. What do Canada and the United States have in common right now? A. They're each coming up to a federal election. Q. What do the two federal elections have in common? A. The voters have no real choice. In the United States, it's almost impossible to tell a Republican from a Democrat. In Canada, it's almost impossible to tell a Conservative from a Liberal, and a Liberal from a New Democrat.

This, it seems to me, is the inevitable consequence of one-man, one-vote democracy. The purpose of a political party (whatever name it gives itself) is to get or hold power. You get or hold power by trying to win as many votes as possible. You win votes (or think you win votes) by trying to please as many people as possible — by being all things to all men. When every political party does this, every political party becomes the same.

Writing in the current (March) Atlantic, David S. Broder says that Americans are fed up with a so-called two-party system which in fact is a one-party system. Fewer Americans are voting, and fewer are identifying themselves either as Democrats or as Republicans. Meanwhile, third parties and factions and movements are springing up — extremist groups promising the action of which the Democrats and Republicans seem incapable. (Parties which stand for everything can't do anything.)

Mr. Broder says: "American politics is at an impasse; we have been spinning our wheels for a long, long time and we are going to dig ourselves even deeper into trouble unless we find a way to develop some political traction and move again. It is not just a few radical students who say and believe that the political system is not working. Millions of ordinary, hard-working Americans recognize that government is not dealing with the problems that are uppermost in their lives — crime and drugs and war and inflation and unfair tax loads and fear of unemployment."

Canadians are in much the same quandary. Let's suppose that you, as a Canadian, think taxes are too high; which party can you trust to reduce them? Which party will crack down on crime? Which will get to, and act upon, the root causes of unemployment? Which will stop inflation by (as a first, essential step) stopping the presses? Can you imagine any of our three major parties doing even one of these things?

The American dilemma is even worse. Which party will get American forces, finally and speedily, out of the Vietnam disaster? Which will face up to the ugliness of racial hatred and violence? Which will make American industry competitive with the aggressive, highly modern, highly efficient industries of Asia and Western Europe? Which will make it possible for Americans white or black to walk the streets of their cities without fear? Which can restore order to the campus? Which can get the youth of America off drugs? Which can clean up polluted air, soil, water?

If people cannot express themselves with their votes, they'll express themselves with their fists. If power doesn't reside in the elected assemblies, it will move out into the streets. In the United States, as in Canada, we're getting what is called "confrontation politics" — the inevitable result of the non-confrontation politics you have when Democrats and Republicans, when Liberals, Conservatives and New Democrats all look and sound very much like one another; when, as Mr. Broder says, the voters are offered "choices" involving nothing more than a selection between "two sincere-sounding, photogenic graduates of some campaign consultant's academy of political and dramatic arts."

Out of "confrontation politics" come violence and anarchy; the breakdown of basic order, as in New York. Out of violence and anarchy, out of social and economic collapse, comes the demagogue who says, "Give me power and I'll put everything to rights." (Like Mussolini, who promised to make the trains run on time.)

If Americans and Canadians don't want this, they'll have to rebuild their party systems so that people believe in them and accept them as the means — the only means — of doing things, running things, changing things. But will Americans and Canadians do this? I don't think so. Before the election, who's going to rock the boat? And after the election, who cares? So my prediction, for this year and for those to come is that it's going to be a long, hot summer with lots of big, black headlines.

Herring 'Waste' Protested

More federal funds should be directed towards improving methods for harvesting herring and utilizing the fish for food, Howard English, a director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said today.

He was commenting on a petition being circulated in the Campbell River area calling for an end to current methods of disposing of herring carcases by herring roe plants.

Motel owners, conservationists, sports fishermen and commercial fishermen are gearing themselves to present a united front against present methods of managing the herring industry. They claim it's wasteful and detrimental to the salmon fisheries.

Under fire is the method of only utilizing the fish roe as food. The carcass is used for animal feed or fertilizer. Herring is an important world source of protein.

English said too little money has been allocated for research to determine the inter-relationship between herring, salmon and waterfowl.

"I'm not opposed to the herring industry," he said. "But the industry, like many others is geared to the dollar. Little or no regard is paid to the vital food resources of the sea which are being depleted at an alarming rate.

"If man continues in this direction, he will not only degrade his environment but may exterminate himself," he added.

He said the government this year did take steps to curb mis-management of the herring fisheries, but it had not solved the problem of waste.

The Campbell River petition points out "only one out of six herring are utilized for roe purposes — the balance male or immature fish being sent to reduction plants or dumped."

It points out the herring roe industry could deplete existing coho and spring stocks in B.C. coastal waters which improved when there was a closure on herring.

Lawrence Foort, operator of the herring roe plant in Campbell River, agreed the herring carcases should be used as food rather than be shipped to reduction plants.

About 95 per cent of herring carcasses from his plant have been trucked to Tofino Marine Services reduction plant in Tofino where the carcases are converted to such products as cattle feed and fertilizers, he said.

English said scientific research should not only be directed to finding methods of utilizing herring as food.

"Sufficient herring stocks have to be maintained to ensure the survival of other species of fish," he said. "We must aim to obtain a blanced program of harvesting."

Ansell Takes Top Spot At CJVI

John Ansell, manager of Calgary radio station CFAC for the past four years, took over today as manager of Victoria station CJVI where he began his career as an announcer almost 27 years ago.

Ansell, 46, succeeds Kenneth Goddard, who resigned Wednesday after being manager of CJVI for almost six years.

Both William Speer, president of Island Broadcasting Company which owns CJVI, and Goddard said today policy differences were the cause of the resignation.

Ansell worked for several years with Vancouver radio station CKWX, where he was production manager and later operations manager.

Legal Advice Backs Highrise Opposition

Victoria city hall's stance in opposing the Bay Village highrise development has been bolstered by an independent legal opinion received this week, according to Mayor Peter Pollen.

The opinion was sought from lawyer D. M. Gordon of Crease and Co. after developer John Mace threatened to allow construction of the 29-storey apartment and commercial development in James Bay.

While acknowledging that it favors the city's position, Mayor Pollen today refused to release the document, indicating the city has yet to act on its contents.

Bay Village Shopping Centre Ltd. is represented in the case by lawyer Ian Stewart.

A land use contract between the city and Bay Village is the key to the development and the city has refused to sign. In turning down Bay Village, the city held that the developers had not acted in good faith by delaying action on their part of the contract.

The city has also been acting on many fronts to control large-scale developments of the type proposed by Bay Village. The site is a three-acre plot at Simcoe and Menzies.

WELFARE APPLICANTS TO GET PHOTOS TAKEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city welfare department is taking steps to combat welfare abuse this summer, Welfare Director Walter Boyd said Thursday.

Boyd told a service club that a photo identity system similar to one used in cheque identification will be instituted next month and that the province has verbally endorsed a computer assisted verification system.

He said when and if the computer system is instituted, a province-wide check would take only three seconds.

In addition, he said, the two-man fraud squad will be doubled and still work with a city police detective.

Boyd also said his department is considering treating members of a commune as a family.

He said that next month single welfare recipients will be getting more than $100 a month, and if five formed a commune they would collect $500. A five-unit family would only collect $279, he said.

Boyd said the department was also looking at its free transient program with the idea of making a small charge this summer of perhaps 50 cents a day.

He said his department has assisted 23,000 transients last summer and predicted 25,000 this summer.

Electoral Terms Queried

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The Union of B.C. Municipalities will ask every local government by questionnaire if it wants the municipal election frequency changed and, if so, by what extent, a UBCM spokesman said today.

The UBCM executive meeting here decided to find out if councils and regional distict boards want to keep the present alternating annual election system under which everyone is elected for two year terms, with approximately half the seats filled one year and the other half the next.

As alternatives, the UBCM will ask if the local governments would prefer the Vancouver system, whereby the entire council is elected every second year, or the same system with three-year terms.

Municiapal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said recently he is willing to eliminate annual municipal elections if there is near-unanimous support among the municipalities and regional districts.

He was commenting on a suggestion by Burnaby Mayor Bob Prittie that annual elections are a waste of money and don't allow voters to throw out entire councils if they so wish. Prittie said he wanted elections every other year.

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A regular shipping line has been opened between Vancouver and the Soviet port of Karsakov, on the island of Sakhalin, Tass reported Thursday. Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan
It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.
If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Before you open your wallet, open your mind.
Next to buying a home, the largest investment you make is a car. It is a major investment. That's why it pays dividends for you to examine everything with an open mind before you open your wallet.
One car to be sure to examine is a Peugeot. It's built to last.
For one thing, a Peugeot paint job is the toughest you can get. A special "Electrophoresis" process puts paint where sprays can't reach—and an ordinary dipping process leaves air pockets. So, your Peugeot retains its bright, youthful look for many a year.
Then, upon arrival in Canada, your Peugeot gets still another anti-rust treatment—that you would normally have done at an extra cost to you.
You'll like the ride too. When you hit a bump, only the wheel moves up and down. Peugeot's four-wheel independent suspension gives you a much more comfortable ride.
Other big pluses are Peugeot's pre-heated carburetor that helps warm up the engine faster even in sub-zero weather. And Peugeot's new oversized starter, alternator, and battery. All special equipment for Canada.
Peugeot has been building cars and winning the affections of car-owners since 1889. Compare Peugeot with any other car. Then, with an open mind, open your wallet.

Weather-Watchers Dedicated, Persistent ...and Nuts?

By PAT DUFOUR
TIMES STAFF

A posse of 2,500 volunteer weather observers rides herd on the idiosyncracies of Canada's weather.

They come from all walks of life and all age groups; many of them are retired but some are high school students.

Almost one fifth of them (448) are in British Columbia, not surprisingly when you look at the topography of the province. The northern peak of Vancouver Island can lay claim to being the wettest part of Canada and the mainland interior, the driest.

About 24 of them work in the Greater Victoria area, unsung and unseen by their neighbors, except for the give-away rain gauges and other equipment installed in backyards and atop garages.

Typical of the breed that keep meticulous twice-daily records are gardening columnist Jack Beastall and former reeve of Oak Bay, George Murdoch.

Beastall has spent 13 years in the weather observer game with never a day off.

As he says, "You have to be consistent. You can't run this stuff hit and miss and get decent things out of it."

What keeps a busy nurseryman like Beastall on the volunteer observer rolls?

Beastall says the far-reaching implications and benefits make it imperative that an over-all weather observer service be maintained.

"All these reports are made available to United Nations' agencies and their contents are invaluable.

"Take food. You can pinpoint a place that has identical weather conditions as others in another part of the world and this can help decide what crops can be grown where. With food resources as they are, this is really important.

"When I go out to check in a gale, or snow, with my fingers frozen it makes it all worthwhile."

Murdoch, at 79, is not less enthusiastic than Beastall and the other observers across Canada.

He joined the volunteer force in April, 1970, and introduced a few innovations of his own.

The atmospheric environment service, which provides the measuring equipment for its volunteers, supplied Murdoch with a standard rain gauge. For him it wasn't enough. He wanted to know exactly when the rain began and stopped. Drawing on his 40 years experitise gained in the electronics business, he set to work.

He made and installed a roof-top device that trips a sensitive relay switch. The switch activates a recorder that has a roll of one-inch paper moving at the rate of six inches per 24 hours across a scale. It is driven by an electric clock that ensures accurate timing at the rate of ¼ inch of tape per hour.

A stylus makes a mark on the tape, ensuring a permanent record of all rainfall.

Not content to restrict his activities to measuring rainfall, Murdoch then turned to the task of devising instruments to measure wind velocity and temperature.

Getting an old-style anemometer from the department, he mounted it over his garage and connected it by underground cable to another of his innovations.

This is a small box, set in his kitchen, complete with a digital counter, that records both wind speed and velocity even when he's not around.

He also has a small thermometer screen and set of thermometers set up in his garden.

How important is the climatological data so painstakingly gathered by enthusiasts like Beastall and Murdoch?

Chief weather officer Allan McQuarrie says its invaluable.

He explains that more than 100 countries belong to the World Meteorological Organization one of the United Nations' agencies.

The WMO sets over-all standards for measuring, says McQuarrie, and each country, using its Beastalls and Murdochs, contributes to an overwhelming fund of knowledge.

"There is nothing that is not affected by weather," he says "industry, agriculture, forestry, aviation — all the things that contribute to our way of life."

And, well in the forefront of those that are helping to solve the mystery of weather patterns are the unpaid volunteers on the home front.

Mothballs Cloak Supership

HALIFAX (CP) — On May 1, the tempestuous saga of Bras d'Or, reputedly the world's fastest warship, reaches another stage.

There will be no ceremonies marking the occasion, but that day the navy will decommission the controversial ship, a 200-ton aluminum hydrofoil craft, taking away her warship status. Then she'll be just a "hulk," property of the Queen's harbormaster in the dockyard here.

It's all part of the mothballing process for the hydrofoil, forecast by the defence department last November. Plans call for her to be laid up for five years before a further decision on her future.

A floating slave-dock on which the hydrofoil was towed to Halifax in 1968 from the builder's yards at Sorel, Que., now is her pedestal as she sits out of the water here.

Bras d'Or has been out of the water since last June when she returned from a record-setting high-speed endurance run to Bermuda and Norfolk, Va.

She went up on the slave-dock for repair work and inspection, and it's there she'll probably stay until at least 1976.

SKIMS WATER

Designed for anti-submarine work, Bras d'Or claims the world speed record for warships, a blistering 72.3 miles an hour set in 1969 at the mouth of Halifax Harbor. Developed and built in Canada, she lifts her sleek hull above the water on wing-like foils or fins to attain her tremendous speed.

But changing defence department policy, which now makes protection of sovereignty and surveillance of Canadian territory top priorities, cut off the money needed to continue the hydrofoil project.

When she returned from Norfolk, it had been hoped that the go-ahead would be given to fit her with fighting equipment, the final step in the research project. But there was not enough money in the defence budget.

The project had cost some $52.2 million and another $4.5 million was needed for completion. When it was announced she would go to mothballs, another $1 million was added to maintain her for the five-year period.

She is a rather forlorn sight on the slave-dock, almost a landmark on the Halifax waterfront.

Her massive foils are enclosed in a wood-plastic housing and the work of dismantling and stripping her insides continues daily.

IT'S SMALL, the service is lousy, the chairs are hard, but this route storage box proves all right as a lunchroom for an unidentified postman in Mt. Vernon, Washington, who is using it to escape cold winds and rain.

$4.6 Million Netted in Sale

The provincial treasury was enriched by $4.6 million Thursday from the sale of oil and gas rights on 83 parcels of land, most of them in the Peace River area.

Mines Minister Frank Richter said the highest price per acre was $251.12 bid by Scurry Rainbow Oil Ltd. and Canex Aerial Exploration Ltd. for a lease five miles northeast of Fort St. John.

The average price was $37.94 an acre.

Mayor's Pay Up

EDMONTON (CP) — Pay boosts for Edmonton's mayor, the 12 aldermen, the chief commissioner and three other commissioners were approved Monday night by city council.

Mayor Ivor Dent's annual salary increases to $25,000 from $20,000 and the aldermanic salary to $7,200 a year from $5,700 in the raises recommended by Kates, Peat, Marwick and Co., a management consultant firm.

Strawberries 'Glassed' In WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has announced the recall of frozen strawberries laced with glass slivers and cornmeal contaminated with a potent cancer-causing substance.

The FDA said Wednesday it learned of the hazardous strawberries after a Mead, Wash., woman cut her mouth while eating some of them.

The recall affects more than 35,000 pounds of sliced, frozen strawberries packed in 10-ounce containers by Pacific Frozen Foods of Los Angeles and distributed in the state of Washington between Feb. 10 and Mar. 10, the FDA said. All lots were coded with the number 14071.

The FDA said it did not know the source of the glass, which showed up in six of 10 samples tested.

Aflatoxin contamination prompted the recall of 15,590 pounds of enriched white cornmeal produced by Dittinger Roller Mills Company, a division of Flour Mills of America, at New Braunfels, Tex., between Feb. 17 and Mar. 27.

Anderson Bid Before U.S. Court

WASHINGTON (CP) — Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson and the Canadian Wildlife Federation appealed Thursday to a seemingly sympathetic United States court of appeals for the right to join a lawsuit against the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline.

The three-judge court reserved decision on the appeal. Their ruling is expected within two weeks.

The Canadians were asking the court to overrule a decision last January in district court here which denied them the right to intervene on the grounds that the lawyers for American conservation groups would adequately protect Canadian interests before the courts.

Anderson is acting as a private citizen, joined by the 150,000-member wildlife federation and financed by public subscriptions.

Their lawyer, Edward Berlin of Washington, argued that in some circumstances, Canadian environmental and economic interests would be antagonistic to American interests and thus the Canadians needed separate representation.

If the Interior Secretary Rogers Morton approves an application to build an oil pipeline across Alaska, seagoing tankers will threaten the British Columbia coast en route to refineries on the U.S. mainland, he said.

At least 80 giant tankers a year would be traversing the narrow straits near southern B.C. and at least one major accident a year seemed inevitable, Berlin said.

Lawyers for the interior department and the consortium of oil companies seeking to build the pipeline replied that Canadian interests could be represented by submitting briefs directly to Morton or through diplomatic channels.

Chief Judge Skelly Wright commented that if the tankers "are going to weave their way . . . all around Vancouver Island, there's a great danger that there will be significant damage to the environment."

And Judge Edward Tamm raised the possibility of tanker accidents "on the one clear day of the year when there's no fog" in the San Juan Islands.

Floorlayers Union Wins $6.70 Rate

Victoria floorlayers have ratified a one-year contract which will give them an hourly wage increase of 95 cents in three steps on the old rate of $5.75 an hour, it was announced Thursday.

John Schibli, president of Local 1598 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, said the agreement will be signed initially by four companies employing 35 men.

Not involved are three companies employing four men represented in negotiations by Construction Labor Relations Association, he said. He added that a mediation officer has been appointed with these companies and the union is proposing they sign the same agreement as the independents.

Schibli said 30 cents of the wage increase is retroactive to April 1, 30 cents will be paid Aug. 1 and 35 cents Oct. 1. In addition, the employer will pay 10 cents into a pension plan.

Savings for Sidney Seen

Sidney may save itself dollars by operating the new $1.2 million municipal treatment plant and sewer system without Capital Regional District help.

At a meeting April, Sidney council and the regional public works committee headed by Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford discussed possible solutions to the high estimated cost of operating the sewer project.

Original operating cost for the system which is supposed to be fully operational by late summer were placed at $25,370, for one year, but latest regional figures estimate that this sum will cover only seven months of operation.

A CRD spokesman explained that the original budget did not provide for a maintenance vehicle, travel allowances, monitoring of the outfall ($3,000), training courses and conferences, for sewer system employees and some treatment plant equipment.

Mayor Stan Dear said that at Tuesday's meeting. The public works committee seems to look favorably on Sidney's proposal to run its own sewer operation "as long as we adhere to the required standards."

"The district does not think we will save any money running it ourselves," added Dear. "But we feel it will be a more efficient operation."

Mayor A. M. Galbraith says Central Saanich has received an estimate of $23,000 for CRD operation and maintenance of that municipality's new $900,000 sewer system.

This council will also be working out costs of independent operation and Mayor Galbraith said some phases might be managed by the municipal waterworks department.

However, as far as the treatment plant is concerned, Galbraith commented "you can't take any chances there."

BOSSES SEND GREETINGS

The Victoria local of the plumbers union is celebrating its 70th anniversary this year.

And to help mark the occasion, mechanical contractors have presented the local with an official scroll proclaiming "congratulations and best wishes" to the union.

"I think this goes to prove that the relationship we have with the mechanical contractors is a very good thing as far as Local 324 is concerned," said union business agent Tom Wheatley.

He said he was "overwhelmed with the gesture" when the contractors presented the scroll at the local's annual banquet.

Beirnes Challenges Nanaimo President

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Helen Beirnes has issued a challenge to her Nanaimo counterpart, D. D. Hart.

She says she will last longer in the Victoria Days' bikathon on Sunday, April 30.

The bikathon will follow a 25-mile course through the Greater Victoria municipalities. The total course is 50 miles — twice around.

She suggests that the two of them meet 9 a.m. that day at mile zero in Beacon Hill Park.

"From then on," she says, "each of us will be on our own and may the best cyclist win."

Let's Talk Real Estate by Jack Mears

When we list a home for sale, our first action is to present its possibilities to everyone on our sales staff, as we find that by full co-operation and by putting the whole team to work, we often have a buyer already on our books.

This co-operaiton effort which I demand from every member of my staff pays large dividends not only to us, but also for both buyers and sellers.

The prospective buyers know that they are getting preferential treatment before the property is advertised. The sellers know that their property is being shown to a properly qualified and selected prospective purchaser, ready, willing and able to buy.

LIST WHERE THE ACTION IS, YOU KNOW IT MAKES SENSE.

'Pressures Heavy' On B.C. Forestry

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia forest industry is faced with world marketing problems, the highest tax burden of any industry in North America and continuing pressure from environmental groups, says John O. Hemmingsen, chairman of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C.

Hemmingsen said in the council's annual report that the best news for the forest industry in 1971 was improved housing activity in both Canada and the United States.

He said the industry's poor profit level could be largely attributed to the poor pulp and newsprint markets. The outlook for wood pulp this year is "not much brighter," he added.

Producers have not been able to recover from increased costs and the higher value of the Canadian dollar, he said, and sales efforts have been hampered by the entry of the United Kingdom into the European common market and "a mounting wave of protectionism in the U.S."

"This threat is compounded by the fact that the industry is saddled with a total tax burden that is the highest of any industry in North America," he said.

Hemmingsen said the industry also "continues to come under relentless pressure from various groups who ignore B.C.'s dependence on the forest harvest and demand massive withdrawals of productive timberlands for the exclusive enjoyment of a small but vocal number of preservationists."

Cement Lafarge

A new $30 million debenture issue of Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. this week is believed to have been oversubscribed at par.

Institutional holdback was large for the series C 20-year sinking fund issue bearing interest at 8¾ per cent.

Turismo

Net income, not including special outlays, amounted to $12,000 in the first six weeks of operations since Turismo Industries Ltd. took over Bay Concrete Block Co. Ltd., of Victoria.

Turismo reports modifications and new equipment costing $20,750 resulted in doubling of production, exceeding management estimates since the acquisition in mid-February.

The plant is running on a one-shift basis six days a week under manager Charles A. MacDonald, recently appointed to the post after many years of experience in the industry.

Next report to shareholders will be after six months of operation, with quarterly reports to follow.

Hollinger

Hollinger Mines Ltd. net profit in 1971 amounted to $12.2 million ($2.48 a share) compared with $12.4 million ($2.52) in 1970, before restating to allow for a change in accounting procedure.

After the company's share of earnings in subsidiary firms Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd. and Hollinger North Shore Co. Ltd. were included, 1970 profit totalled $13.4 million ($2.72).

Forecast for 1972 earnings is for improvement over 1971 and sustantial gains for 1973 and beyond.

Safeway

Public sales last year rose $83.58 million to a total $845.52 million compared with $761.94 million in 1970, or $846 million against $762.74 million, including sales to the parent company, reports Canada Safeway Ltd.

Net income amounted to $15 million compared with $14.84 million, making retained earnings $139.38 million against $124.97 million in 1970, and $140 million ($124.37 million) after stock adjustments and gains.

NONG

Preliminary prospectus for an offering of junior convertible preferred shares in Northern and Central Gas Corp. Ltd. has been filed with Ontario Securities Commission.

Details were to be described at a later date.

Proceeds of the issue will be applied to reduction of bank borrowing and commercial paper.

CAPI

Canadian Allied Property Investments Ltd. and its subsidiaries showed 10.2 cents a share earnings improvement during 1971.

The company, itself a subsidiary of Grosvenor-Laing (B.C.) Ltd., had revenue amounting to $1.6 million, up from $1.54 million.

Net earnings were $154,703 compared with $88,185, or 23.8 cents vs. 13.6 cents a share.

BP Oil

BP Oil and Gas Ltd. increased net income during 1971 to $7.76 million from $6 million the previous year.

The earnings, on a gross revenue of $22.7 million were equivalent to 28 cents a share compared with 25 cents in 1970.

Increased petroleum prices and higher levels of production accounted for most of the increase.

FCA

Financial Collection Agencies Ltd. in the nine months ended March 31 increased profit by 54.3 per cent from a year ago.

The international firm based in Montreal showed a 30.5 per cent increase in new business from $97.85 million to $127.7 million and after-tax profit of $921,774 compared with $597,277.

Expansion continued in the U.S., England and Ireland.

Family to Stay in Seaway

TORONTO (CP) — A stormy meeting of Seaway Multi-Corp shareholders was told Wednesday that members of the Levy family have decided not to proceed with an agreement to sell control of Seaway to Security Capital Corp.

The proposed sale would have roughly quadrupled the assets of Security Capital to more than $100 million and given it interests in cold-storage warehousing, CCM sports squipment, auto components, wood products and real estate.

The Levy family would have received cash, shares, notes and options and would have retained 75-per-cent interest in Levy Auto Parts Co.

Mark Levy, chairman of the special meeting, told shareholders that directors of Levy Industries and Levy-Russell Industries had decided not to go ahead with the agreement.

Levy Industries is a subsidiary of Seaway. Levy-Russell is a subsidiary of Levy Industries.

Mr. Levy said the purchase agreement of Nov. 6 was subject to further information to be supplied by security Capital. He said this information was not satisfactory.

COMMENT CRITICIZED

His comment brought criticism from some at the meeting. Lawyer Lloyd Fogler, representing Toronto financier and promoter Louis Chesler, said the Levy family was depriving minority shareholders of their only opportunity "to introduce fresh and competent management into these companies."

Mr. Chesler shouted at one point: "This is a railroad job."

Seaway's shares closed at $7.75 on the Toronto Stock Exchange Tuesday.

POLYESTER and vinyl bag capable of carrying 10,000 pounds of mineral concentrates is re-fastened by workman after its contents have been dumped by a rope-pull. Canadian National and False Creek Industries Ltd. of Vancouver are developing and testing the bags. It is believed the bags will bring economies in ore transport through elimination of dusting and spillage.

M-B Directors Retire

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five members of the board of directors of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. will not stand for re-election at the company's annual meeting April 26, the company said today.

Retiring are Prentice Bloedel, 71, John M. Buchanan, 74, Norris R. Crump, 67, Gordon Farrell, 81, and Charles A. Spect, 57.

Nominated to the board are: G. H. D. Hobbs, executive vice-president of Cominco Ltd.; N. J. McKinnon, chairman, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce; J. M. Meyer, chairman and managing director of Montague L. Meyer Ltd., London, Eng.; I. D. Sinclair, president of Canadian Pacific Ltd.; and J. A. Taylor, chairman and president of the Canada Trust Co.

Re-Usable Bags Enter Ore Trade

VANCOUVER (CP) — The reusable container, that darling of anti-pollution groups, is making a quiet entry into the mining field in the form of five-ton ore bags for shipping mineral concentrates.

False Creek Industries Ltd. of Vancouver is working with Canadian National Railways on the bags, made of a polyester weave impregnated with vinyl. Once the developers feel all the wrinkles have been ironed out, they hope to set up a factory for volume production.

Each bag has a capacity of 58 cubic feet and is designed so it can be lifted by a crane. At a simple pull of a rope, the bottom can be opened for dumping.

At present, most mineral concentrates are shipped in bulk, which requires specialized loading and handling equipment and often is accompanied by the problems of dusting and spillage losses.

False Creek and the CNR feel use of the bags would mean lower capital investments on loading and carrying equipment. They can be loaded onto flat-deck trucks or railway cars and don't require specialized ore carriers.

A bonus, says Robert E. Tulk, False Creek general manager, comes in leaving the car free for back haul of some other commodity, which could be completely different.

"Each bag weighs only 45 pounds empty and can be folded into a package three feet square," he said.

"The bags could be packed at one end of a flatcar or truck, leaving the rest of the space open to other cargo of almost any kind."

Tulk says mining company spokesmen have told him they experience losses of from one-half of one per cent to 1.5 per cent in bulk shipping. He feels the bags can virtually eliminate such losses.

MPs Hammer Out Labor Code

OTTAWA (CP) — Back from its two-week Easter recess, the Commons squeezed in a few hours of debate on proposed government changes in federal labor laws Thursday before sitting with senators today to hear a special address from President Nixon.

Some expressing reservations, most MPs lauded the amendments to the Canada Labor Code as an advance in labor-management relations.

The bill is a new version of legislation first introduced by the government last session. The original said unions could call for negotiations—and strike —over job-reducing technological changes during the life of a labor contract.

The present bill says a contract cannot be reopened against management's will if the existing agreement sets out settlement procedures to meet such technological changes.

Conservatives Charles Thomas (Moncton) and Robert Thompson (Red Deer) said the bill was an improvement over the original, but expressed doubt whether it would guarantee labor-management peace.

BALANCE NEEDED

Mr. Thomas said the government must strike a balance between protection of jobs and improvement of efficiency.

Mr. Thompson said the bill unfairly forces workers into closed-shop unions, removing their right to stay out of unions.

The labor code applies only to workers in industries under federal jurisdiction—about 10 per cent of the labor force, including transportation, communication, hotels and Crown corporations.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said he hopes protection of workers against technological change will not be watered down.

And Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) defended the strike right of public servants to strike.

The only alternative to their right to strike is to overpay them, he said.

LIBERAL DISSENTS

Among the strongest voices of dissent in the debate was Liberal Jean Roy (Timmins).

He accused the government of pure fantasy in paying lip service to free collective bargaining while proposing a bill that would restrict the process.

The government should seek another labor system if it did not think collective bargaining could work.

He went on to label the bill a sop for Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, who had sought to discredit the government in support of the NDP.

Mr. Roy urged the government to try to stop illegal strikes, walkouts and slowdowns which had spread across Canada.

DEFEND BILL

Fellow-Liberals Gaetan Serre (Nickel Belt) and Arthur Portelance (Montreal Gamelin) defended the bill and said the provinces should introduce similar laws.

They said the bill would increase flexibility in labor-management relations, enabling settlement of disputes before they reach the strike stage.

Robert Kaplan (L—Toronto Don Valley), chairman of the Commons finance committee, rejected growing public demands for a ban on strikes.

"There is no structure elsewhere which is substantially different from ours and which produces better results."

He said public service settlements have shown that awards under compulsory and binding arbitration are higher and more inflationary than bargaining under the strike threat.

The House is to return to the debate on the bill Monday.

GRANT GIVEN BUT . . .

Victoria council Thursday approved a $5,000 grant to the Victoria West Neighborhood Centre.

Council made the decision on a five-to-three vote, despite fears expressed that the move may open the doors to a flood of similar requests.

The neighborhood centre has been operating on a grant from the federal government's local initiatives fund which runs out at the end of May.

Workers at the centre have already raised $1,000 from local individuals and hope to extract further grants from the senior governments, council was told.

Ald. Ove Witt supported the grant, saying council should begin formulating a policy on community centres because he expects the need for the facilities to grow.

He disagreed with other aldermen who said it was not the city's function to get into the business of supporting community self-held centres.

Mayor Peter Pollen said the federal government was acting "irresponsibly" in starting projects which municipalities must rescue, but urged council to grant the $5,000.

Pollen said it would be shortsighted to forget the importance of such community centres and turn down the grant for the wrong reason.

Council heard that the neighborhood centre was meeting success through its efforts to find recreational activity for youth and others in the Vic West area.

ICE GOES OUT; SO DOES PET

KINCARDINE, Ont. (CP) — Somewhere out on the rotting ice of Lake Huron, Bruno, a large, black Newfoundland dog, may still be alive—if the rapidly thawing ice floe he was trapped on Sunday hasn't given way under his 107-pound weight.

The two-year-old pet was last seen Monday by owner Bill Butters of this community, about 45 miles southwest of Owen Sound. He spotted the dog through binoculars standing on a high ridge of ice about three miles off Point Clark.

The Butters family was at their cottage near here Sunday when Bruno chased another dog, then ended up on a piece of ice the size of a city block, but cut off by water.

"He ran around the block-square area trying to get out," Mr. Butters said. "Monday morning, I could see him on a large chunk of ice that had broken away from the main floe. He was about three miles out."

AIR SEARCH FAILS

Wednesday, Mr. Butters chartered a light airplane from the Goderich airport but an hour-long sweep over the coast turned up nothing.

If the dog is spotted, rescuing him from the ice floe will present a serious problem.

Mr. Butters said it would be impossible to get a small boat through the treacherous ice-packs and no helicopters are available in the area.

"My wife and kids are pretty shook but they are taking it very well," Mr. Butters said. "Bruno was the boys' dog . . . we'd hitch him to a sleigh and he'd pull the kids around."

Issues Unclear In French Vote

PARIS (Reuter) — France is heading into a perplexing referendum on Europe where the result is scarcely in doubt but the main issues defy definition.

Frenchmen can be excused for not knowing exactly whether they are voting on enlargement of the European Common Market, on France's role in Europe, or on President Georges Pompidou's personal standing—or if they are taking sides for or against the political opposition.

In a sense they will be passing judgment on all these things in the referendum set for April 23.

The official issue of the national poll—whether to accept Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Norway into the European community—has rarely been mentioned in the period leading up to the referendum campaign.

It is taken for granted that entry of the new Common Market members will receive a thumping majority, perhaps as high as 90 per cent.

HAS BIG EFFECT

Everything that has happened since Pompidou dropped the referendum bombshell at a news conference March 16 shows that on the domestic level it is the most devastating political initiative taken in France since the unpredictable reign of the late Charles de Gaulle.

Pompidou runs no risk of defeat.

But already the referendum decision has borne fruit for him.

It has driven a firm wedge between the opposition parties.

Aides of Pomidou can hardly hide their joy at the sight of Communists and Socialists —the two main opposition parties which previously cherished hopes for an electorial alliance —now snarling openly at each other.

The Communists insist on a straight "no" vote to show not only their hostility towards Pompidou and the governing Gaullist party, but also to underline their opposition to a West European economic bloc which they consider a threat to Communist East Europe and "a big business operation" monopolized by major corporations.

The Socialists, forced to take account of their long-standing support for West European unity, proposed a policy of general abstention by the left—to reflect both their sympathy for an enlarged Common Market and their enmity towards Pompidou.

MEXICO DANCERS ASTOUND LARGE AUDIENCE

By BRUCE OBEE
Special to the Times

All the color and pageantry of a Mexican Fiesta came to life in Victoria Thursday night with Javier de Leon's "Fiesta Mexicana."

The company of 30 dancers, singers and musicians astounded a full house at the Royal Theatre with their lavish costumes, dances and rituals of pre-Hispanic Mayan and Aztec cultures.

The curtain opened to the sound of drums and an ancient Aztec flute played by Lino Segura, an authentic Indian chief. Through De Leon's endless research and ingenious choreography, the fascinating lengends of an ancient, majestic culture were revived in this first part of the program.

The most important Aztec ritual, performed by Jesus Baltazar, is the "Dance to the God of Fire." Baltazar danced around a flaming urn and ended the dance by extinguishing the flame with his foot, symbolizing a sacrifice to the Gods.

While the dancers changed into different costumes Daniel Armas, a virtuoso of the salterio (an unusual stringed instrument similar to the zither), played a number of familiar tunes — amazing the audience with his incredible speed.

The dancers returned with an orchestra of three violins, three guitars, two trumpets and Armas' salterio to perform "Dances of Veracruz." This state of Mexico is known for the gaiety of its people.

After an intermission, five of the male dancers performed one of the best-known dances of Mexico. Wearing masks and carrying canes, one by one they hobbled on to the stage to perform the "Dance of the Old Men." The dancers imitated the movements of old men as they courted and tried to inspire love with the beautiful girls.

The performance reached its peak when Charro Valentino thrilled the audience with his incredible manipulation of ropes. Beginning with a small noose, he twirled a lasso until the noose was large enough to dance under, over, around and through.

Wearing the National Costumes of Mexico, the entire company danced "El Jarabe" for the grand finale. The curtain was lowered and raised three times at the end of the performance in response to the applause.

Saanich Trustee Cools Debate

Saanich school board chairman J. J. Armstrong seems to be playing his cards close to the chest, following the decision of teachers in his district Wednesday night to form a 'public information committee.'

"I certainly don't want to get into a debate with them (the teachers)," he said Thursday.

The teachers' spokesman said their committee was being established to "correct the irrational statements" made by Armstrong to the public media.

"I don't know whether I want to make any statement on this one or not, right now," Armstrong said Thursday. He added he is "amazed at the personal attack on me" by the teachers of his district.

Neither the teachers nor Armstrong could say for sure what the "irrational attacks" in question were.

"Since being re-elected chairman, unanimously, I have refrained from public comment," Armstrong said, "particularly with regard to Bill Three."

However, Armstrong this week spoke to the press about the advertising 'debate' between teachers and Education Minister Donald Brothers.

He released figures relating to the fiscal progression of teachers in British Columbia and said he "felt obligated to make my figures available."

The Saanich teachers' committee, he said Thursday, appears to be an extension of the militancy of teachers which surfaced at the British Columbia Teachers' Federation convention in Vancouver last week. As a result, Armstrong said, he is not surprised to see it emerge in Victoria.

But "I believe I have the confidence of my electors and I believe the confidence of my board. I'm sorry if I do not have the confidence of the Saanich Teachers' Association.

"But then, my priorities are by necessity different from theirs."

Violinist Scores

LONDON —CP) — Canadian violinist Mark Butler received high praise from The Daily Telegraph following his debut here Wednesday night in Wigmore Hall.

The British-born musician emigrated to Canada as a child.

A resident of Victoria, he returned to Britian and received a Canada Council grant to promote his duo playing with pianist Neil Immelman, like himself a graduate of London's Royal College of Music.

The Telegraph says Butler gave an impression of "emotional substance and expansiveness . . . sensitivity and full-bloded commitment."

The performance of the Pawsthorne Sonata was "a tour de force of ensemble understanding . . . rich in expression."

Butler plans to tour Canada next winter with a string quartet.

We wouldn't sell a Used Car that we wouldn't let our wives drive

"Now that you know about the condition of our used cars, you probably want to hear about the price.
Well, we have to be competitive or we wouldn't be in business, simple or otherwise.
And, as for selection, we've got plenty of cars on our lot right now.
It would be fair to say that our dealership is a good place to buy a used car.
If it wasn't, we sure wouldn't say it."

Talent Highlights Music Festival Finale

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Finale of the first week of this year's Greater Victoria Music Festival comes tonight with a championship program at First United Fellowship Hall.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m. with Victoria championship classes at junior, intermediate and senior levels, the program will continue with junior and senior provincial semi-finals and conclude with the open City of Victoria Medallion contest.

Winners of the provincial semi-final classes including the Medallion, will proceed to Vancouver to compete at a provincial festival in May. Winners in Vancouver will go on to represent the province at a national event in June.

SPEECH ARTS

At St. Ann's Academy tonight, the speech arts honor concert will present performances selected by adjudicator Miss Gay Scrivener from the week's classes.

Some interesting and occasionally exceptional work heard during the week promises an enjoyable evening at this centre.

In one of Thursday's major open piano classes — concert group, in which each entrant plays three contrasting pieces — Allen Reiser was given an aggregate of 271 marks by adjudicator John Simons, followed by Kwok May-Ling with 266.

At First United Fellowship Hall, Donald Francke, having completed adjudication of vocal classes, turned his attention to sharing with Simons the big schedule of piano classes which continued today and will conclude Saturday morning with classes for junior and senior concert group.

Some outstanding talent was on hand throughout the Thursday evening session, with not one unmusical performance among 20 entrants in two under 15 classes.

Highest mark in piano to date was given by Francke to 12-year-old Walter Prossnitz for "a brilliantly virtuosic performance" of a Poulenc Toccata. Walter received a 94 and runners-up Christopher Thom and Kelly Charlton were equal with 89.

Awards, this year, are being made at the time an individual or ensemble qualifies, instead of holding them back for the final highlights event.

To date the Victoria Conservatory Junior Choir has received the Frank Tupman Memorial Award; the Village Squires, the CBC Award; Debra Crozier-Smith, the B.C. Registered Music Teacher vocal award, and Rolf Gilstein has won the Aldyen Hamber Chapter IODE senior piano accordion award.

Results for Wednesday evening were as follows:

Clerics' Garb Becomes Suspect

OWERRI (AP) — Police in Nigeria's East Central State have more hoodlum priests than they can handle. Rogues in priests' clothing are plundering churches, duping unsuspecting citizens and even robbing real clergymen at gunpoint.

In recent months 12 priests, two nuns and two bishops have been victims in and around Owerri, a Roman Catholic stronghold which suffered heavily during Nigeria's civil war.

Police have warned the public to be on the lookout for men loading trucks with church property or paying calls on neighbors when none is expected.

Like other cities in the Ibo heartland of the one-time secessionist state of Biafra Owerri is a centre of critical unemployment. Charred ruins throughout the state remain sad reminders of the 30 months when this West African nation was at war with itself.

The war ended in January, 1970. Many on the Biafra side fled into the bush with weapons which re-emerged in the hands of thugs. Crime became the easiest livelihood in the jobless, moneyless world they faced in defeat.

Economics Overtake Hollywood Past

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The new economics of the film business was the subject of a knowledgeable lecture by the noted educationist, Dr. Peter Ustinov.

Doctor? That's right.

He explains: "I have arrived at an age where educational institutions have been giving me honorary degrees for everything but what I can do. So far I have been named doctor of law, doctor of music and doctor of fine arts."

The well-rounded actor, director, author, playwright and raconteur recently had an education in new ways of making movies. He directed and co-starred with Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Beau Bridges in Hammersmith is Out, filmed in Mexico.

The backer of the project is J. Cornelius Crean, house trailer tycoon of Riverside, Calif.

"He is a remarkable man," said Ustinov. "He is enormously wealthy, having made most of his money since the war.

"Nowadays you find financing for films wherever you can. Not only from trailer makers, but such other sources as food makers (Quaker Oats) and giant corporations (General Electric)."

The Burtons were reported to have been paid $50,000 each for "expense money," and will receive 15 per cent of the gross receipts. Ustinov earned "more up front plus a percentage of the profits."

Such deals are part of the new pattern by which stars take a fraction of their usual salaries —both Burtons have been paid $1 million plus in the past—then share the producer's gamble that the film will be a success.

"This kind of setup would have happened a long time ago, except that too few saw any profit from participation deals," said Ustinov. "You found yourself dealing with a huge corps of salesmen and distributors, and the profits disappeared.

"I have never earned anything from participation deals that I have made. Not even Romanoff and Juliet, which only cost $750,000.

"My only participation in profits has come from the record company that put out the Quo Vadis album. Every so often I receive a cheque for $16.28. No, I believe it is $8.26."

With star salaries held down, Ustinov was able to complete Hammersmith is Out for $1.5 million. He finished eight days ahead of the nine-week schedule.

"A FILM OF ALMOST INCREDIBLE SUSPENSE!
It includes among a great many chilling delights, the most brilliantly executed chase sequence I have ever seen. A very good new kind of movie composed of such ancient material as cops and crooks, with thrills and chases, and lots of shoot 'em up. It moves at magnificent speed."

Boredom Enough for Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Boredom on a factory assembly line is enough to cause strikes in industry, labor leader Pat O'Neal told a management-labor relations group Thursday.

O'Neal, international vice-president of the Pulp, Sulphite and Papermill Workers, told the Industrial Relations Management Association of British Columbia workers sometimes will say, "Let's do something different for a change. Let's shut this goddomn place down for a few days."

Automation, he said, can cause boredom as well as grievances which must be dealt with whether they are real or imagined.

O'Neal also criticized the federal government for what he called a new policy of pitting jobs against environment, and easing off on pollution control because of the labor situation.

Okanagan Reacts

VERNON (CP) — The North Okanagan Creamery Association is shipping milk to Vancouver in a bid to offset sales of lower mainland milk in Okanagan supermarkets.

Arnold Wiens, manager of the dairy co-operative, said by the end of the year, Vancouver-area sales will bring each of NOCA's 130 dairymen only about $250 of their average annual income of $15,000, "but it's a start."

He said supermarkets over the past few years have taken over about 15 per cent of the Okanagan milk market and NOCA would like the provincial government to restrict milk shipping, "but they say it's free enterprise."

Sawmill Protested

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A petition bearing the signatures of 273 persons has been sent to Resources Minister Ray Williston urging him to call a public hearing on establishment of a sawmill near Crooked River Provincial Park, about 40 miles from here.

Dick Phillips of the Spruce City Wildlife Association said Wednesday the "only decent swimming area near Prince George" could be spoiled by flyash from the beehive burner of the mill, planned by The Pas Lumber Co.

Law Funds Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The public and the legal profession will be asked to make donations to a $500,000 fund to go towards a new faculty of law building at the University of B.C.

Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson, himself a lawyer, made the first contribution, $25,000. UBC is contributing $3 million for the building.

Liberals Quit

LOWER POST (CP) — Twenty-four members of the Atlin Liberal Association living in this community about seven miles from the B.C.-Yukon border have resigned from the party.

They say they were denied by headquarters a promised chance to vote on the nomination by secret mail ballot instead of attending the nomination meeting in Stewart, about 600 miles away.

Busing in Debate

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — Deputy Education Minister Johan Phillipson met behind closed doors Thursday with students from private schools to discuss the current busing dispute.

Students and parents here are protesting a decision of the school board in January to refuse to provide school bus service to separate school students.

DISCOTHEQUES ONE MORE POLISH JOKE

WARSAW (AP) — They might not be your idea of a discotheque, but the Polish rooms operating under that name find a ready market. Indeed, they hardly meet the demand.

They lack colorful decorations, and they close at 10 p.m. Back in the spring air, young Polish couples round off the evening by lining up for a municipal bus.

"We have enough room for 250 persons," says the manager of the student-run Hybrydy. "But on weekends we have to turn at least twice that number away."

It's the same story with the Largaktil, a small cellar operated in Old Town Square by the Socialist Youth Organization.

"There's only room for 70 people," said a frustrated club official, "and on Saturdays and Sundays, we have to say no to 200 youngsters each session. Queues are forming even before 5 o'clock opening time."

This official says the Largaktil is the only discotheque in Warsaw "open to everyone." The others—a half-dozen or so—are run by student associations and are student domains—a sore point with young workers. A 22-year-old factory hand, out for the night in the Largaktil, commented: "There are too few places for dancing. The situation's getting worse. People who are students can seem to get in anywhere."

Despite the difficulties many young Poles note an improvement. A little while ago there were no discotheques at all. Admission fees, plus snacks and a few glasses of wine—no spirits or beer are served—cost about $1.50 a couple.

For the majority of Poles a working day ends at 3 p.m. or earlier. Opening time at the discos is usually 5 p.m.

Tourists stepping into these clubs can see dancers gyrating to the sounds of the Beatles and Rolling Stones. A seasoned observer would also notice the Polish girl, renowned in the Western community for her good looks. She may lack car-owner escorts, but when it comes to clothes she's no longer the poor Cinderella. She wears skin-tight blouses, leg-revealing maxis or hot pants, and highknee leather boots. They're all expensive to buy—a good dress costs a month's wages—but over the last three years they've become easily available.

Brunette Halina Lazecka, a 20-year-old student of French philology, said of the Hybrydy: "My only complaint is the early closing time. I only go out once a month because of my studies, but when I do, I'd like to make a night of it—say till midnight."

A long-haired youth, clad in a sleeveless sheepskin jacket, put it more bluntly: "The authorities seem to have one general attitude. Go to bed at 10 and have enough strength for work in the morning."

Warsaw authorities say they plan to give the capital's Old Town an entertainment face lift. It will be spent on providing more coffee houses, a chicken inn, cafe cellars and a discotheque for 300.

How to Love the Mafia —A Slick, Sick Film

Now that the final verdict is in, indicating that 99 out of every 100 film critics in the United States and Canada have unstintingly praised The Godfather ("The Italian-American Gone With the Wind": Time Magazine) I should like to murmur a small dissenting opinion.

It is a slick, sick, sprawling motion picture, in my opinion, made callously, calculatingly to cash in on the current cinemagoers' insatiable appetite for violence, just as Mario Puzo's dreadful book was hand-tooled for the same unwholesome market.

The only other dissenting critic I've read calls it "lust theatre — blood, genital and mawkish lust." That is exactly what it is.

It would hardly be surprising, now, in view of the tornado of praise, and box-office line-ups, if the producers didn't have in mind a sequel to be called "The Godmother." This could be the real-life story of Elsa Koch, known as the Bitch of Belsen, fondly remembered as possessor of the only lamp-shade ever made of human skin.

★ ★ ★

Just as The Godfather explicitly, lovingly depicts in Technicolor gore a succession of close-up murders, so The Godmother would show us, in full, glorious color, a succession of explicit scenes showing how six million Jews were consigned to the gas ovens.

Again, as in The Godfather, there could be the paralleling story of The Godmother, Elsa Koch, to show that she was a real, live human being with warmth and heart, playing with her adorable children (each with their own little human-skin lamp-shades, perhaps), and cooking pig's knuckles and apple strudel in the kitchen, a Nazi Ma Perkins.

The notion is certainly no more preposterous than the cynical, perverse premise upon which The Godfather is built, a premise that, astonishingly, has been so accepted by critic and public that the film and its star, Marlon Brando, are already considered shoo-ins for the next Academy awards.

The film asks us to accept the proposition that the Corleone family possesses admirable qualities of loyalty, affection, sentimentality, even, in the case of Don Corleone, a genuine dignity.

★ ★ ★

It asks us to accept that the fictional Corleones lived to a dynastic code that was somehow a private, tightly-knit interfamilial affair, that the Mafia was truly folksy, worthy of sympathy, admiration, even pity.

It asks us to accept that its effect upon society was largely internecine, that murder was merely a matter of a competitive businessman's solution to a problem, that they were motivated by a concept of morality, that, for example, distinguished "nice" gambling from "dirty" drug-pushing.

Such is the impact of film and, in this case, a brilliant film technically, overpoweringly authentic in its reconstruction of an era, that it's hard to resist the invitation to feel involved in an entirely contrived story. The Godfather's death in the sunlit garden is played for pathos. The denouement of his son's inheritance of the dynasty, though he has just master-minded a blood-bath, becomes a happy ending. In short, we have been theatrically brain-washed to an acceptance of the absurd.

The point is well made by Robert Hatch in his review in The Nation, the single commentary on the picture that recognizes its exploitive, hypocritical theme.

"The success of The Godfather is deplorable," he writes, "if you believe that popular entertainment both reflects and modifies social morale. In a sentence, the picture forces you to take sides, to form allegiances, in a situation that is totally without moral substance. It chilled me to hear an audience roar its approval when a young gangster on 'our' side blew the brains out of two gangsters on 'their' side. The ethical problem is to choose between typhus and cholera and I found that flogging about for three hours in that quagmire was spiritually debilitating and a crazy waste of time."

In my view the device of sentimentally humanizing the Corleone family can only have been conceived for its shock effect, contrapuntal to the scenes of sadistic violence, and while that may be an effective theatrical mechanism it is also an abuse of the responsibility and integrity involved in any film that pretends to social significance.

Any reading of any history of the Mafia confirms, if it needed to be confirmed, that these men were and are mad dogs, the jackals of society, sordid merchants of vice through corruption and terror. Their violence was no mere vendetta of one family against another, but a savage, mindless violence that shadowed the lives of countless thousands of innocent citizens. They were and are murderers, pimps and drug-pushers. They were and are beneath contempt.

The Godfather, purely in the interests of box office receipts, rationalizes, forgives and apologizes for these animals. It lacks even the guts to identify them as the Mafia. It glorifies an evil every bit as sickening as Belsen.

CBRT in 'Bad Mood'

Slam Teamsters Over Pickets

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

A long-simmering dispute between two trucking unions broke into the open today over the three-week strike at Butler-Lafarge Ltd.

Joseph Simpson, a staff representative of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, said the striking International Brotherhood of Teamsters should not be picketing the company's Duncan operation because "I don't see the need for it."

★ ★ ★

He said eight to 10 CBRT members at Duncan have been left without income although not directly involved in the strike. The Teamsters Union has been picketing Victoria and Nanaimo operations, where it has members and also in Duncan where CBRT members have refused to cross picket lines.

"It is a terrible situation for our people," Simpson said in an interview.

"They have no quarrel with the company, it is not a bread and butter issue but we understand over restrictive clauses, and we do not feel that operation (Duncan) could affect Victoria or Nanaimo.

"So they are in a pretty bad mood about it all."

The Teamsters Union Local 213 is striking to have Butler-Lafarge sign the standard industry agreement. Wages are not an issue but there are 26 items in which there is a difference between the two sides.

These items include clauses which would permit drivers to refuse to make deliveries to "unfair" job sites and to restrict sub-contracting of work to only Teamster-organized companies.

Frank Peters, business agent for Teamsters Union Local 213, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Simpson said his union's position on restrictive clauses is that the B.C. Labor Relations Board decides whether certification is to be granted for bargaining rights.

"No one should be allowed to come along and say you are not recognized in that field and you can't operate," he said.

The CBRT and the Teamsters have been at odds for a number of years in the transportation and trucking fields.

★ ★ ★

The recently-dropped Bill 88 arose from difficulties over access to building sites, which the Teamsters Union claims is its exclusive jurisdiction.

There have been no negotiations since the strike started March 27. The union has said it is ready for talks and the company has said it is willing to negotiate — provided the union withdraws its restrictive clauses proposals.

'STAY COOL'

Capital ~~Regional~~ District chairman Hugh Curtis appealed today for "calm and cool heads" in what appeared to him could be a repeat of the 1970 labor-management difficulties in British Columbia.

He added that his remarks are not directed more to one side or the other "but I do urge responsible people in labor and management to avoid the very difficult situation that happened so recently."

During 1970, time loss from strikes and lockouts hit a record 1.6 million working days. The same major contracts which were negotiated in 1970 are up for renegotiation this year.

"We all have the records and memories of the summer of 1970 and the impact on the community and its total well being. And we have just recently pulled ourselves out of the pit and it would be so unfortunate to see the whole thing happen again," he said.

SHROUDED SEATS and long-necked crane lend a strange, slightly surrealist perspective to Memorial Arena, as a workman in his lofty basket sprays insulation on the arched roof. Previous attempts to get insulation to stay on the roof have failed, but now the 23-year-old problem may be over. New technique involves spraying a cellulose-based acoustic and thermal insulation on to the underside of the concrete, where it adheres to a liquid cement sprayed at the same time.

Hospitals Near 'Breaking Point'

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark cited Victoria's two general hospitals as models of efficiency and service Tuesday but both hospital directors said today the economic pinch is threatening patient care.

Loffmark named both Queen Victoria and Royal Jubilee as well as Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster as examples of hospitals with operating surpluses last year still able to deliver good patient care.

All three immediately responded that budget cutbacks have pushed their staffs to the limit.

"I don't think we can do more than we have," said Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, executive director at Queen Victoria, on the matter of further economies.

Nurses are so hard-pressed they no longer have time to teach patients how to live with their troubles, he said. And that is an important part of care.

"We're managing but we'd like to do better." All the niceties have been stripped from hospital care.

Queen Victoria, formerly St. Joseph's, finished last year with an operating surplus of about $6,000 from a budget of $8 million. Jubilee's surplus was about $50,000 on an operating budget of $13 million.

Only additional effort and "damn hard work" by hospital staff and doctors enabled Jubilee to maintain the quality of patient care in the face of government economies, said Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director.

"Now how long can you go on with people working harder and harder? I think there's a point of diminishing returns, when people get too tired or sick, and I think we're near that point.

"There's a point you can't push people beyond."

Dr. R. G. Foulkes, executive director at Royal Columbian, said he has been short of staff since a wage settlement for hospital employees in 1969. At that time the province forced cutbacks by telling hospitals it would only provide funds to meet 70 per cent of the wage increases.

Currently the hospitals are worried about what setlement will come out of a contract dispute before the Mediation Commission.

Hospital employees are pushing for a 12.5 per cent increase but the province has said it will not share in wage increases beyond 6.5 per cent.

Pollen Sure Ratepayers Would Approve Pay Hike

A pay increase for Victoria city council appears certain, following an eight-to-one vote Thursday supporting the move.

The increase called for is 6.5 per cent of the present salaries, which for aldermen amounts to less than $20 a month. The present aldermanic pay is $3,600.

The mayor's pay is $15,000 a year so his raise will amount to $975.

Council passed a motion that will produce a bylaw for consideration at council's next meeting in two weeks.

Some members of council expressed annoyance that the provincial government placed the 6.5 per cent limit on raises

Mayor Peter Pollen said it was "ridiculous" that elected representatives were unable to set the limits and justify their pay rates to their voters.

"I'm sure the citizens would approve," he said, if Victoria aldermen got deserved raises.

Pollen even suggested that another pay increase be put to referendum ballot at next December's municipal elections.

Ald. Percy Frampton, who had earlier hesitated to endorse the 6.5 per cent increase, said his hesitation was because of the provincial government's intrusion.

Only Ald. Harold Olafson put his hand up to oppose the motion, but he made no comments to support his stand.

Nicholson Won't Act On Professors' Appeal

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson has decided not to act on an appeal by two dismissed University of Victoria professors that he, in his capacity as Visitor of the university, investigate their cases.

The professors involved are William Goede and J. P. Graff, whose contracts with UVic were not renewed last June 30. Goede formerly taught in the English department and Graff in philosophy.

The two appealed to Nicholson last year. Nicholson said then he would not act on it until a three-man advisory board considering their cases made its recommendations to the board of governors.

The advisory board held hearings in June and July but recommended no change in the administration's decision to dismiss Goede and Graff, along with a third professor, Tikam Jain of the chemistry department.

In a letter to Goede and Graff's lawyer dated March 21, Nicholson's solicitor says the lieutenant-governor was "so unconvinced" that he has the jurisdiction to act on the matter that he will not act on it until he is directed to by a proper court of law in B.C.

Although the position of "Visitor" is largely ceremonial and honorary, the Universities Act makes mention of the role of the Visitor as having "authority to do all those acts which pertain to Visitors."

A Webster's dictionary definition of "Visitor" is "one who visits officially for the purpose of inspection or supervision, in order to prevent or remove abuses or irregularities."

ONE-YEAR IN JAIL FOR HEROIN USER

A 28-year-old heroin user was sentenced to one year in prison today after Judge William Ostler ruled deterrence must be a prime consideration in sentence.

David George Williams, of 1710 Denman, was arrested at home Jan. 25 after he had just injected the drug. Sixteen caps of heroin were found in a balloon in the man's possession.

Ostler imposed the one-year term despite a pre-sentence report by a probation officer which suggested a fine would be adequate punishment because of improvements in the accused's outlook.

Williams had a criminal record including a two-year sentence for armed robbery in 1969.

SURPRISE!

After Shock of Sympathetic Ear Wears Off, Job-Hunter Lets Go

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A new approach to job-hunting is being greeted with some surprise by jobless at the local unemployment insurance office.

The chief reaction of those responding to the Clients Assistance Program is "surprise that someone is willing to sit down and listen with understanding," said interviewer Norman C. Hopper, one of three attached to the Victoria UIC office.

Since the program was set up last fall with revision of the Unemployment Insurance Act, letters have gone to all persons who have been getting unemployment benefits for five or six weeks.

The letters invite people, on a voluntary basis, to appear for an interview which they are assured will be confidential, not reported to any other government department or office and has no strings attached.

So far in the program about half of those who have received invitations have accepted the chance to talk over their problems. Last month 61 per cent of recipients went for interviews.

People that long out of a job — many for the first time in their lives — are beginning to really worry.

Often the problem lies in the fact that because they are emotionally upset they can't organize their job hunt, CAP points out.

If he doesn't know what a resume is — a capsule presentation of a man's capabilities and experience — CAP will help him draft one and make Xerox copies for him if that is what he needs.

CAP also can put him in touch with other agencies for which he may qualify for help, such as social welfare, DVA, John Howard Society.

The program was initiated in the east on a pilot basis and has spread to larger centres.

Hopper said there may be some misunderstanding of CAP, that it duplicates a Manpower role.

"Manpower is merely a training and placement agency; this is a self-help thing, the human side of UIC," he said.

About 20 interviews a day are handled by the office here, each interview lasting about 45 minutes.

When the first shock of having a sympathetic listener passes, the individual then "pours out" his problems, Hopper said. It is a novel experience for those used to dealing with bureaucracy.

Although the people involved may be very sophisticated, perhaps well educated, they are upset because of their situation and "can't organize themselves to sell themselves in the labor market. It's a kind of self-analysis we help them with," Hopper said.

Bram Kitson, chief of claimant assistance, is head of CAP, whose other interviewers are Mary Brizan (an MA in counselling), and Albert Canning, who is an ex-teacher. Hopper is a UVic graduate in education with a counselling major.

Rangers in Cup Semi; Habs Go Out Fighting

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens were flying but New York Rangers flew higher Thursday night, beating the Habs 3-2 to take their best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final four games to two.

Walt Tkaczuk of the Rangers scored the winner with 29 seconds gone in the third period, beating Montreal goalie Ken Dryden on his glove side with a 35-foot shot.

Bill Fairbairn scored the other two New York goals and Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire scored for Montreal.

The Rangers meet Chicago Black Hawks in a best-of-seven semi-final starting Sunday night in Chicago.

Tkaczuk's goal was his second of the series.

Tkaczuk got the puck from Fairbairn, got away from a check and then fired the puck home.

"Billy (Fairbairn) told me to shoot it," Tkaczuk said. "I did. That was it.

PRAISES WINGERS

"Our line was flying tonight. I was lucky to get the big goal, but my wingers were helping me out all night."

The Canadiens came out flying before 18,196 fans and had several good scoring chances, but Rangers' netminder Ed Giacomin was outstanding. The grey-haired goalie robbed Cournoyer and Claude Larose from point-blank range and did the splits to kick out a drive from Rejean Houle from just inside the blueline.

"Canadiens have put plenty of pressure on me in other games, but the puck soon went into the net," Giacomin said. This time it didn't, but the pressure kept right on being applied."

STARTS SCORING

But it was Fairbairn who opened the scoring when he slapped Tkaczuk's rebound past Dryden from close in at 9:31 of the first period. Dryden couldn't move on the play as defenceman J. C. Tremblay was sitting atop him in the crease.

Cournoyer tied the score for the Canadiens 121 seconds later when he broke away from two checkers and blasted a shot past Giacomin from 10 feet out.

Fairbairn restored the Rangers' lead at 9:33 of the second when he took a pass from linemate Gene Carr and fired the puck over Dryden's right shoulder.

But the Rangers were guilty of a defensive lapse about five minutes later and it allowed Lemaire to tie the score. Lemaire, standing in the clear, took a pass from Lafleur and had time to knock down a bouncing puck and fire an off-balance backhand shot past Giacomin. That set the stage for the winning effort by Tkaczuk.

Montreal had its chances to even the score in the third period, but Giacomin rose to the occasion each time. He stuck out his left leg and just caught a piece of slap shot by Jacques Lemaire with 69 seconds left to preserve the win. With less than 30 seconds left, he kicked out a low drive from Guy Lapointe.

Canadiens had a 5-4 manpower advantage for the last 78 seconds of the game as a result of penalty to Jim Neilson. They pulled Dryden for an extra attacker.

Giacomin lofted a clearing shot down the ice with less than 25 seconds left and it missed the Canadiens goal by a few inches.

Giacomin jumped up and down as soon as the final siren wailed the elimination of the Canadiens and then his teammates rushed to congratulate him.

"I've been happy in my life . . . but never that happy."

1. New York, Fairbairn (4) (Tkaczuk) 9:31.
2. Montreal, Cournoyer (2) (Richard) 11:32.

If Campanella Was Good, Gibson Could Do Better

The news that baseball great Roy Campanella was ailing brought a call from an old timer: was he the best of all negro catchers?

Perhaps Campanella himself answered that one a few years ago when he was named to head a special group to bring the forgotten greats of the Negro Leagues into baseball's hall of fame.

"I couldn't carry Josh Gibson's glove," is what Campanella said of one of the all-time negro stars, a man with whom he played, and played against, for nine years.

"Anything I could do he could do better."

Gibson is generally regarded as being perhaps the hardest hitter in the history of professional baseball. Yet, two years ago, he didn't receive a single vote in the poll to select baseball's all-time, all-star team. Nor was he given a line in the new, 2,000-page Encyclopedia of Baseball.

Gibson was a victim of the Jim Crow rule in sports when there were separate white and negro leagues, and he died just three months before the first negro, Jackie Robinson, stepped on the field in a major league uniform for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

It was said that Gibson could hit the ball farther than anybody, and that included Babe Ruth; and when he was only 19 he hit the only fair ball ever hit over the Yankee Stadium roof.

Historians agree that no one, not Ruth, nor Lou Gehrig, nor even Mickey Mantle ever could or did, match that feat.

Dizzy Dean Was No Puzzle Either

If Gibson hit a lot of home runs, he had 75 one year, the negro teams played a longer schedule than in the majors. They might play up to 200 games, and often against inferior pitching. That is agreed. But when up against major league pitching, Gibson proved it was no fluke.

In 1934, the negro all-stars hooked up in a barnstorming series with major league players, headed by Dizzy and Paul Dean, fresh from their world series victory over Detroit. They played nine games, and the negro all-stars won seven. Dizzy won both games for the big leaguers. In one game, Gibson hit a bases-loaded home run off Dizzy in the first inning, and the next time up, he hit another four-run homer. Diz retired from the mound and went to the outfield.

After the game, Dizzy sauntered by the negro dugout. "Josh," he said, "I wish you and Satchel (Paige) played with me on the Cardinals. "We'd win the pennant by July 4 and go fishing until world series time."

(Paige was another of the legendary figures of his time. He got to the majors, late in life, after 40, or was it 50? and he could win even then. It was advertised when he played with Gibson that he'd strike out the first nine bitters, and Josh would hit a home run.) They usually did.

According to history it took a semi-pro shortstop to figure out how to stop Gibson from losing baseballs. Phil Rizutto, later a New York Yankee, but then with the Brooklyn Brunswicks, froze all the game baseballs over-night to be certain that they would be as dead as rocks by game time when up against Gibson's team. It worked.

If he never did get to the majors, Gibson nevertheless was highly respected. Papers referred to him as the "Brown Bambino." And one year he hit more home runs in Griffith Stadium (27 than the entire American League (13).

Holdout for Dollar-a-Day Meal Money

He was a holdout one season as well. He didn't play until he was guaranteed $1,000 a month, plus a dollar a day eating money. Oh, boy! And that was when the negroes were outdrawing the rival American League Senators at the gate in Washington, too.

Of all the years Campanella was in the negro leagues, he made all-star only once. That was the season Gibson jumped to the Mexican League.

In 1945 it appeared that at long last Gibson might just get the chance to prove he was as good as Ruth. Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis had died and there was rumor that at long last a negro would be given a chance to play in the majors.

The next year the rumor was fact. Robinson would be the first to represent the black race. But there was no contract for Gibson. He took to drink, and when Campanella was given a Dodger contract, he was heartbroken.

Officially he died of a brain hemmorhage.

He would have been 36, young by today's standards, and if not baseball's greatest hitter, at least the hardest.

SAD EXPRESSION on face of Montreal defenceman J. C. Tremblay, appearing from pileup in front of Canadiens' net, tells story on this play during Stanley Cup playoff game Thursday. If Tremblay doesn't know what happened to puck, New York's Walt Tkaczuk obviously does as he raises stick to signal Ranger goal on shot by Bill Fairbairn. — (AP Wirephoto.)

Roberto Spark for Blues; Stars May Lose Worsley

ST. LOUIS (CP) — The series between St. Louis Blues and Minnesota North Stars in the Stanley Cup quarter-finals has so far been a home-ice affair.

The Blues downed the North Stars 4-2 Thursday night to even the best-of-seven series 3-3, forcing a seventh game Sunday in Minneapolis.

But St. Louis coach Al Arbour now is confident his Blues will take the seventh and deciding game on Minnesota's home ice and advance to the semi-finals against Boston Bruins.

"Our guys are confident and they feel they can win it," Arbour said Thursday after the Blues turned back the North Stars, who won all their games at home.

Coach Jack Gordon of Minnesota is inclined to agree with Arbour about the confidence of the Blues. After praising their play Thursday night, he said:

"They're working. They're working bloody hard. We've got to get something going of our own."

WORSLEY HURT

Gordon could be right, for the loss to the Blues could be costly for the North Stars who lost Gump Worsley, their 42-year-old goalie. He was knocked out at the 14-minute mark of the game while defending the Minnesota goal.

Worsley, who had stopped a shot from Gerry Odrowski, had a collision with Bob Plager of the Blues who was trying to cash in on a rebound.

He was taken from the ice on a stretcher to hospital, suffering a slight concussion. However, x-rays showed no skull fracture and he was later released from hospital.

"He hit the right side of the goal post with his head," said Dr. Charles Kelly, the team physician. "We'll probably not know until Saturday whether he's able to play in the final."

Plager, who suffered only bruises to his shoulder and chest, was back on the ice for his next shift while Worsley was replaced in the net by Cesare Maniago.

ROBERTO HOT

Phil Roberto scored a goal and assisted on two others in leading the Blues to their win. Roberto's three points made him the leading scorer in the playoffs with six goals and five assists for 11 points and he leads Boston's Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr by two points.

Roberto helped set up the winning goal by Garry Unger in the second period and he also helped set up Bob Plager's goal in the first period.

CBC AGREES TO YIELD SEMI-FINAL TV RIGHTS

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC announced Thursday it has released its television rights to the Stanley Cup semi-finals so that arrangements can be made to permit the CTV network to carry the hockey series.

A CBC spokesman said the publicly-owned network has also agreed to release its affiliated stations so that they may join the CTV in carrying the games.

He said the arrangement with MacLaren Advertising Ltd., which owns the broadcasting rights to National Hockey League games, was made without prejudice to the CBC's right to carry the Stanley Cup finals.

CBC hockey coverage has been disrupted since January by rotating strikes by members of the National Association of Broadcast Engineers and Technicians.

The CBC spokesman said the arrangement regarding the semi-finals was made after consultation with NABET officials, who refused to give any guarantee of uninterrupted coverage of the games.

Hill Saved by Putter, Leads by One Stroke

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — "If I can hang on to the club and get real lucky I might even make the cut," Dave Hill said Thursday after shooting a seven-under-par 64 for the first-round lead in the $150,000 Monsanto open golf tournament.

"I thought I'd probably go out and shoot about 76, and that's about what I should have had," said Hill, who shook his head in amazement at his low score.

"I was absolutely pathetic," said Hill, who was in the woods three times, found a trap or two, once missed a fairway by 100 yards, but saved it all with a magic putter. He used only 22 strokes on the greens and canned putts totalling 64 yards in length.

Lee Trevino, pleading exhaustion, withdrew after posting a first-round 74.

Hill had a single-stroke lead over Bob Smith, who spiced his round of 65 with an eagle three on the 542-yard sixth hole.

Kermit Zarley had a 66, while Chris Blocker and Jim Colbert matched 67s. All the leaders played in the morning on the 6,679-yard Pensacola Country Club course.

Frazier Sparks Knicks' Victory

BOSTON (AP) — Walt Frazier scored 36 points Thursday night, leading New York Knicks to a 116-94 National Basketball Association victory over Boston Celtics in the opener of their Eastern Conference finals, yet he still had a complaint.

"I wish we could have saved some of those points," Frazier said. "We just might need them."

The Knicks had opened up a 20-point lead late in the second quarter that Celtics cut to nine midway through the third period. But then the Knicks turned on the steam again, extending their lead to as much as 30 points in coasting to their easiest victory over the Celtics this season.

"I think we have them on the run," Frazier said, "beating them here and now going home (on Sunday). . . ."

Frazier, getting scoring assistance from reserve Phil Jackson, who had 19 points, thought the Knicks beat Boston at its own game.

"We outran them," he said, "and that's what we thought we'd have to protect against.

"I'm not saying we'll do the same thing Sunday, but we'll be loose. The pressure's on them."

In the American Association Indiana Packers whipped Denver Rockets 91-89 to win their best-of-seven Western Division semi-final 4-3 and Virginia Squires thumped New York Nets 138-91 in the first game of their Eastern Division final.

Veteran Aussie Wins Tie-Breaker

QUEBEC (CP) — Veteran Roy Emerson of Australia advanced Thursday to the quarter-finals of both the singles and doubles competitions in the $50,000 Quebec international tennis open.

Emerson beat Jeff Borowiak of the U.S. in two sets to win his singles match but needed a tiebreaker victory in the second set to record a 6-4, 7-6 triumph.

The tie-breaker system is used by the sponsoring World Championship Tennis group to avoid overly-long matches and comes into effect when a set is tied 6-6.

Like Emerson, Cliff Drysdale of South Africa needed a tiebreaker victory to eliminate Carmichael and gain a berth in the singles quarter-finals.

The South African won the match 7-5, 7-6.

Other singles action saw Roger Taylor of England defeat Bob Lutz of the U.S. 6-4, 6-4 and Ken Rosewall of Australia dump compatriot Tony Roche 6-3, 6-2.

Miami Bets $100,000

MIAMI (AP) — Herbert Martin, president of the homeless Screaming Eagles World Hockey Association team, said Thursday he will post a required $100,000 performance bond and his prospective players will be ready for the 1972-73 season.

Earlier in the week Martin said the franchise was in jeopardy in Florida because the team had run into trouble finding a home.

The problem involves construction of Executive Square Garden, stalled and awaiting a zoning permit.

Thursday, Martin said he will post the bond anyway at the WHA meeting this weekend in Chicago.

The new WHA plans to begin play this winter.

Salmon Hatchery Program Is Beginning to Blossom

Salmon catches for both sports and commercial fishermen are bound to improve as a result of a long-range hatchery program envisioned by the federal fisheries department.

Scope of the program was outlined earlier this week at a meeting between the amalgamated Conservation Society and a four-man delegation from the department: Dick Crouter (manager, southern operations branch), Ian Todd (chief of Fraser River, Johnstone Strait and Juan de Fuca Strait districts), Bob Humphries (herring biologist) and Harry Grainger (Victoria-area inspector).

Basically, the system, which still required funding from Ottawa for its latter stages, will consist of six hatcheries with an initial annual production target of one million adult coho and 300,000 adult springs.

Eventually this production will expand to four million adult coho each year.

"In a matter of time we'll develop fish that will stay inside the Gulf of Georgia," said Crouter.

The department also expects to produce steelhead smolts "for the stream that the hatchery is located on."

Another facet of the program involves the production of coho fry for release in waters above natural obstructions where there are presently no salmon. These waters, which are now barren, will provide the vital coho rearing areas while "natural impoundments such as sloughs and lakes can be used for rearing springs."

Like the recently-announced Washington State hatchery program for Puget Sound, Crouter stated that "we also will have the capability of releasing grilse-sized fish into areas that need it."

The first hatchery of the system, located on the Capilano, is expected to attract from 200,000 to 400,000 visitors this year.

★ ★ ★

Cold Creek, a tributary of the Quinsam River near Campbell River, has been chosen as the site of the second hatchery, now in the final design stage. Actual construction is expected to begin as early as Sept 1 — which would place the completion date around February, 1974.

This $4 million facility is destined to produce approximately $1.25 million worth of salmon annually for both sports and commercial fishermen. It's yearly operating cost is expected to run in the neighbourhood of $250,000 to $300,000.

Other streams under consideration for hatchery sites include the Vedder and Cheakemus on the mainland as well as Koksilah and Cowichan on southern Vancouver Island.

Other points brought out by federal officials at the meeting:

● There will be no change in the Juan de Fuca sport-fishing preserve "this year."

● The department is building two rearing ponds adjacent to the Puntledge River spawning channel to help bring back the fall runs of spring salmon that once provided a mainstay for fishing in Comox Harbour.

● A "pitch in conjunction with the provincial fish and wildlife branch" has been made to MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. in connection with habitat protection on the White River.

● Interest is still high in developing a commercial fishery for dogfish . . . One company has had three "cracks at it for the German market" before giving up . . . Transportation costs are high and government subsidies would have to be made available . . . One company was issued a permit in Area 17 last week for a small exploratory venture.

One Strike, Two Losers Before the Opening Pitch

By The Associated Press

A shortened baseball season will finally get under way 11 days late Saturday, but before the first pitch is thrown the sport has two losers and a count of one strike.

The first general walkout in the history of the major leagues ended Thursday on two fronts— in Chicago, where baseball club owners voted to pick up the season beginning Saturday and cancel all games called off by the strike, and in New York, where the player representatives agreed.

The pennant races thus will be decided on a percentage basis, since not all teams will play the same number of games. Technically, the races always are decided on percentage, but games affecting the final standings usually are made up.

In the American League East, Baltimore Orioles have 154 games remaining, Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees 155 and Cleveland Indians, Detroit Tigers and Milwaukee Brewers 156. In the American League West, Chicago White Sox, Kansas City Royals, Minnesota Twins and Texas Rangers will play 154 games, California Angels and Oakland Athletics 155.

Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East show 155 games left while Montreal Expos, New York Mets, Philadelphia Phillies and St. Louis Cardinals have 156. In the National League West, Houston Astros and San Diego Padres have 153, Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds 154 and Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants 155.

ALL LOSE HOME GAMES

All 24 teams will lose at least one home game.

The only dispute still remaining—until the year-end negotiations between players and owners on a new basic agreement —involves Kansas City and Chicago in the American League West. Ewing Kauffman, owner of the Royals, says he will protest any games his club has to play against Chicago this weekend because the White Sox disregarded a league directive and allowed their players to work out in White Sox Park during the strike.

Saturday's opening-day schedule looks like this:

American League—Minnesota at Oakland, Texas at California (night), Chicago at Kansas City, Boston at Detroit, Milwaukee at Cleveland, New York at Baltimore.

National League—Pittsburgh at New York, Montreal at St. Louis, Philadelphia at Chicago, Los Angeles at Cincinnati, San Francisco at Houston (night), Atlanta at San Diego (night).

The players went on strike April 1 in a dispute with the owners over the amount of money owners would contribute to the players' pension plan. That wiped out the last four days of spring training and the walkout continued into the regular season, scheduled to start April 5. Today would have been the 10th day of the campaign.

PLAYERS LOSE PAY

Finally, the owners decided to start the season Saturday. Since the players are paid on the basis of a 182-day campaign rather than a 162-game season, they will each lose 10-182nds of their salary. For those earning the $13,500 minimum, it will amount to $740. For those at the major league average of $32,500, it's $1,780. For Hank Aaron, who pulls down a record $200,000 a year, it comes to a loss of $10,980.

The owners were losers, too. Some estimates place the loss at $5 million, including gate receipts, parking concessions and one cancelled television game.

Victoria Soccer Clubs Shoot for High Stakes

Money and glory will be on the table Sunday at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Triumph for Victoria West-United would give Wests the Pacific Coast Soccer League crown and $750 prize that accompanies it.

Victory for Victoria Gorge Molsons would slip them into the fourth and final playoff spot. That's worth $150.

Post-season play could mean even more cash. Playoff winner grabs $325 and the runner-up is awarded $200.

United winds up its league schedule at 1 p.m. with a match being made up against Firefighters, who earlier claimed victory by default when the Victorians failed to show up because of a scheduling mixup.

United trails first place Paul's by one point so a Sunday tie would leave the two clubs tied for first place, forcing a sudden-death playoff.

Gorge faces New Westminster Blues in a special playoff for the fourth place at 3 p.m. Both teams split a pair of one-goal decisions during the season and if it gets any closer Sunday they'll play 30-minutes of overtime.

If the teams are still deadlocked the game will be decided on penalty goals.

Gorge is healthy but United has centre-half Jim Irving listed as a doubtful starter with an injured knee. Peter Robarts will fill in if Irvine isn't ready.

United will catch the 9 a.m. ferry Sunday and fans wanting to make the trip should contact Gil O'Malley at 382-0553.

Castaways, Saxons Chase Provincial Rugby Crowns

Provincial rugby champions will be declared Saturday as Vancouver Island and Mainland champions clash at Macdonald Park.

Castaways tangle with Vancouver Meralomas in the feature game at 2:30 p.m. for the B.C. first division championship and Rounsfell Cup.

Castaways beat out last year's B.C. champs, University of Victoria Vikings, for the first half crown in the Victoria Union, then downed James Bay Athletic Association 18-13 last weekend for the Barnard Cup.

UVic Saxons meet Vancouver Red Lion at 1 p.m. for the second division crown and Province Cup. Saxons, second half winner of the Victoria Union, stopped Nanaimo 22-11 in the league final to win the Times Trophy.

Although the championship will be decided Saturday, there will be more rugby action for Victoria fans.

VISITING TEAMS

Two international clubs will play Victoria Union clubs in May at Centennial Stadium and Royal Athletic Park.

Limerick Bohemians of Ireland meet Oak Bay Wanderers on Thursday, May 18. Two days later Bridgend of Wales play Victoria Union champion Castaways.

Union officials hope Bridgend, the Welsh champions, will field two teams in a special seven-a-side tournament at St. Michael's University Schol Monday, May 22.

Bridgend, which has national sprint champion John Williams on its roster, concludes its Victoria visit taking on James Bay Athletic Association under the lights at Royal Athletic Park, Wednesday, May 24.

Wanderers are in Portland Oregon, to play Peninsula Ramblers of San Francisco, Saturday in their first game of the Portland Invitational Tournament.

The B.C. Rugby Union is holding its first full-scale meeting in Victoria tonight.

Launching Time Here

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

"Launching Day" begins at Cadboro Bay this evening and the excitement will be infectious as skippers and their helpers hurry to get boats that have been shorebound all winter back into their natural habitat.

Looking like strange amphibians with their unstepped masts, the boats will be lowered into the water as fast as safely possible in order to take advantage of a favorable tide.

Bobbing at their floats, they'll be joined by others of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's keel boat fleet Sunday. These are the boats that race out of the Tsehum Haven outstation all winter.

Using a reverse handicap system, they'll race from Sidney to Cadboro Bay with the first start gun set for 10 a.m.

★ ★ ★

Three Royal Vic. boats, who race with the Turkey Head Sailing Association during the winter, have won top laurels in the THSA winter series, which ended Sunday.

Jack Woodward's Puff repeated last year's performance by again coming first over-all, Rod MacBride's Lemolo was second and Steve Merriman's Vandal, third.

THSA held two races Sunday with Lemolo and Puff placing first and second, respectively, in both.

After Puff in the first sail-out of the day came Stan Cosburn's Wild Thing, Gordie Vickery's Valhalla, Jan Olsen's Happy Hour and Bill Leach's Limelight.

Trailing Lemolo and Puff in the last race of the day were Glen Higgins' Freeway, John Booth's Umpka, Ed Cushing's Shamrock and Vandal.

Division winners in both races were: Cruising A, Puff; Cruising B, George Parks' Fairlight; Crown 23s, Kaya; Thunderbirds, Lemolo; Haidas, Hugh Bacon's Marijo, and Cal 20s, Jack Paterson's Menhune.

Both races were sailed in light flukey breezes.

★ ★ ★

THSA will hold its annual prize-giving 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the University of Victoria's faculty club and get down to Tuesday night spring racing in early May.

In contrast to THSA's "drifters" members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club tussled with westerlies that whistled up and down the scale from 25 to 35 knots Saturday in a six-miler off Sidney.

The big winner was Miles Dighton's Obsession. She beat out Merv Bretton's Bird of Dawning, Denny Davis' Rozinante, Jim Scott's Vacalindo and Stewart Holman's Keela.

They'll be pacing out another six-miler Sunday. The start gun goes at 10 a.m. at Sidney's government wharf.

Power cruiser skippers who enjoy predicted log racing are preparing for one of the biggest events of the season.

This is the annual Gulf of Georgia Predicted Log Race, due to start off West Vancouver, Saturday, April 22.

About 35 boats are expected to compete, arriving off Dock Island in the Sidney area about 4 p.m. that day.

On arrival the crews will be hosted by the Capital City Yacht Club at their Tsehum Harbor headquarters.

Getting in a little pre-preparation, OCYC members will be at their favorite clam-digging spots this weekend, gathering the basic requirement for the clam chowder that will greet the across-the-Gulf navigators.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club will be out for a picturesque paddle of Esquimalt Harbor Sunday. Meeting place is the bridge in Esquimalt Lagoon at 10 a.m.

Overtime Tally Sends Wheaties Into Semis

BRANDON (CP) — Brian Coates scored on a rebound at 5:49 of sudden-death overtime Thursday to give Brandon a 4-3 victory over Saskatoon Blades and send the Wheat Kings into the Western Canada Hockey League semi-finals.

Brandon won the best-of-seven series 4-3 with one game tied, after trailing Saskatoon 2-0 in games.

Glen Mikkelson, Robbie Neale and Rick Blight got the other Brandon goals. Dennis Abgrall, Bryon Jackson and Doug Manchak replied for Saskatoon.

GOALIE SPARKLES

Blades carried the play to Brandon through the final 10 minutes of the third period but Wheat Kings' goalie Dave McLelland was outstanding. He robbed the Blades on several occasions to keep the game deadlocked at 3-3 and send it into overtime.

Saskatoon continued to press in the overtime but the Wheat Kings, playing before a capacity crowd of 1,635 fans, started coming back near the four-minute mark.

Coates picked up a rebound of Ron Pronchuk's shot from the point and flipped the puck past Saskatoon goalie Ed Humphreys to end the series.

Saskatoon led 1-0 after the first period and the clubs were tied 3-3 at the end of the second.

Saskatoon outshot the Kings 45-37 and took six of the 11 penalties including one misconduct.

Brandon will now meet the winner of the Regina Pats-Flin Flon Bombers series.

Victoria McDonalds begin their maiden season in the Mainland loop hosting last year's league leaders, Burnaby Cablevision, in the opener Saturday night May 6 at Memorial Arena.

Bakers gained entry to the league in January.

The just-released schedule reveals a 24-game slate (12 home and 12 away) for all five teams. Victoria plays four home games each on Saturday and Thursday nights, two on Tuesday night and one Sunday game in the afternoon and evening.

Surrey is the new home of the Salmonbellies who have moved their franchise out of New Westminster.

League president Keith McEachern said Thursday in Vancouver that four teams will qualify for the playoffs. First place team will meet the third place team and second and fourth place clubs will meet in best-of-five semi-finals and the winners will meet in the best-of-seven final.

The Minto Cup is in Eastern Canada this year.

WORKOUTS

Meanwhile, Bakers coach Bill Munroe is putting his charges through workouts four night's a week in preparation for the opener. The first scrimmage is Sunday at George Pearkes Arena and Munroe says he is happy with the progress of the 23 players.

Dave Thomson, Tom Levasseur and Bernit Leavitt are the only players lost from last year's defending Canadian junior "B" champs.

Jeevan Dillon, a nephew of Ranjit and Nirmal of the Shamrocks, Denny Green and Kim Bowles are intermediates given the best shot to crack the lineup.

Defencemen Mike Yager of Esquimalt and goalie Bill Robertson of Saanich are other rookies trying out.

London Boxing Club officials are protesting Wednesday's loss to Victoria West in the second round of the Victoria and District Soccer League's Jackson Cup competition.

Wests, the defending champions, defeated Boxers 3-1 to advance to the semi-finals.

However, Boxers officials are claiming Wests used two ineligible juvenile players — Steve Forsland and Wayning Lee.

They have appealed the defeat to the B.C. Soccer Commission, which is expected to rule on the protest by the weekend.

Assassination Ends Zanzibar Cycle

ADDIS ABABA (WP) — Sheikh Abeid Amani Karume's autocratic and controversial rule over the beautiful Indian Ocean island of Zanzibar has ended as it began eight years ago — swiftly, shrouded in uncertainty and stained by violence.

The assassination of Karume, who was believed to have been 66 years old, may produce a protracted power struggle within the revolutionary council that rules Zanzibar with its own version of radical African socialism.

The killing follows recent reports of deep discontent within the 3000-man Zanzibari army over food shortages and lack of salary increases for officers. In February, Karume ousted the two most left-wing members of the revolutionary council.

But most opposition to Karume always has come from his right, from those who have been hurt economically by the radical policies of the island, which is the world's largest supplier of cloves.

There is no clear successor to Karume, who was president of the council. The results of any power struggle would remain unclear for some time since so little is known about the 13 or so other members of the council, who remained in Karume's shadow while he transformed the bloody 1964 African revolution against an Arab oligarchy into one-man rule that alternated between populism and depositism.

This uncertainty, and the violent way in which Karume was removed from office, will temper the relief that Karume's passing might otherwise have produced on the mainland of Tanzania, the republic that was created in 1964 by the nominal union of Zanzibar with Tanganyika.

Zanzibar and its sister island of Pemba are 25 miles off the east African mainland. The island's total population is 350,000 while that of the mainland is 13 million.

Karume's crude racial outbursts against the Arab and Asian traders of the island, his forcing teen-age Arab girls to marry elderly members of the revolutionary council and his penchant for executing political opponents has in recent years deeply embarrassed Tanzania's thoughtful and liberal president, Julius Nyerere.

Karume also was one of China's staunchest allies in Africa, accepted large quantities of military and economic aid from Peking soon after taking power and assailed western countries as imperialistic. China has around 300 military advisers and technicians on Zanzibar.

There are no indications that any members of the revolutionary council who might succeed Karume would be less enthusiastic about the Chinese or more favorable to the west or to strengthening ties with the mainland.

Karume's peculiar style of speaking Swahili added some weight to reports that he was born in the eastern Belgian Congo, around the border with Uganda, and had come to Zanzibar as a stevedore. Karume preferred to leave his origins shrouded in mystery.

Karume became an active trade union leader on the island. His role in the African uprising that easily toppled the Arab sultan Britain left in power after granting independence to Zanzibar in December, 1963, has never been established.

The bands of men who seized the main armories on the island and went to kill perhaps 2500 Arabs and Asians in the takeover were led initially by John Okello, a Ugandan drifter who styled himself a field marshal and gave incoherent radio speeches announcing the revolution in January 1964.

But Okello was forced to leave the island soon after the revolutionary council was formed and Karume became its unquestioned leader.

Vowing that Zanzibar would not hold elections for at least 50 to 60 years, Karume established a police state on the island. Both Zanzibaris and the tourists who came less frequently to the island were kept under surveillance, and no one criticized the revolutionary council in public.

Karume also set out to destroy the economic dominance that had been enjoyed by the Arab and Asian traders at the expense of the African peasants. He nationalized import and export trade and by restricting permits virtually abolished private commerce on the island. Which has little industry.

At the same time, his regime greatly increased educational opportunities for the African majority, provided better health care than colonial governments had and started new housing projects.

The key to the succession to Karume may lie in his Afro-Shirazi party, which in recent years had taken on more importance than the revolutionary council in the day-to-day running of the island. The party was responsible, in name at least, for the island's new schools, housing projects and health clinics. But like the council, the party is largely unknown to outsiders.

Cinderella Crop Near Midnight

the prairies

EDMONTON (CP) — It may be near midnight for Canada's Cinderella crop as Prairie producers apparently intend to plant 37 per cent less rapeseed this year than they did in 1971.

Last year, Prairie farmers planted a record 5.4 million acres, resulting in a bumper 100-million-bushel crop. Although prices were depressed early this year with a 10-million bushel carryover, the market rebounded early in March.

Statistics Canada estimates Prairie acreage will be reduced to 3.4 million acres from 5.4 million last year but still well above the 2.1 million acres grown during the 1966-70 period.

The figures could change drastically by the time farmers are able to start planting.

Rapeseed production has grown fantastically in Canada during the last four years. First grown during the Second World War, on about 3,000 acres, it was used by the navy as a marine oil because it could cling to steam or water-washed metal. This market disappeared after the war and the crushed oil was used in cooking or as a salad oil.

USED IN MARGARINE

In the 1960s scientists evolved a process in which the oil could be used in margarine, but within the last two years concern was expressed in Europe that the oil's acid caused heart damage in animal tests.

Now, varieties low in erucic acid, or free of it, are available and the switch to these varieties is expected to be completed by 1974.

J. S. Carmichael, an economist of the federal agriculture department, says although world demand for edible oilseeds will continue to increase, there is a possibility world supplies could increase faster, and lower prices would result.

"There seems little reason why an improved product such as rapeseed should not sell in greater volume . . . providing Canadian rapeseed is competively priced."

Coffee Plan Cooled

EDMONTON (CP) — Government house leader Lou Hyndman cooled off the idea that Alberta might follow Manitoba's lead of allowing MLAs to take coffee into the legislative chamber.

"The real difficulty is that if you get 75 politicians talking on that, it will be at least a month before they can decide if it should be instant or fine grind," he said outside the house Wednesday.

Surreptitious Disease Remains Undefeated

Diabetes Cure Still a Dream

Doctors believe the number of undiagnosed diabetics in Canada probably equals the total of 400,000 known patients.

These unknown diabetics are producing just enough insulin for their daily needs. Stress of any kind may destroy the precarious balance in their systems between the amount of insulin and blood sugar.

When this happens they will end up in their doctor's office with symptoms indicating diabetes.

Diabetes is caused by a deficiency in insulin production. Insulin, produced by a cluster of cells called the Islets of Langerhans in the pancreas, transports blood sugar to the cells of the body where it is changed to energy or stored as fat.

Without insulin sugar is trapped in the blood and eventually excreted by the kidney. Diabetics in the past literally starved to death because the final step in the digestive process was short-circuited.

There is no cure for diabetes. And, before the discovery of Insulin in 1921 by Canadians Sir Frederick Banting and Charles H. Best diabetics had a life expectancy of about five years.

Insulin Success

Insulin proved to be the first successful treatment for diabetes to be found in more than 3,000 years of medical research.

The Ebers papyrus, dated 1,500 B.C., advises Egyptian doctors to treat the disease with a concoction of equal parts of wheat, grits, water and green lead earth. What happened to the patients is not recorded. They probably died within five years, but the unfortunate patients of the 18th century French Physician undoubtedly died faster.

He observed the sweetness of diabetic urine and thought replacing this lost sugar would cure the disease. His patients had to eat half a pound of candy a day with disastrous results.

The first real breakthrough came in 1889 when doctors removed a dog's pancreas and discovered the result was the world's first diabetic dog.

Many Theories

Until that time there were as many theories about the cause of the disease as there were treatments.

Since the discovery of insulin diabetics have been able to lead normal lives and are often in better physical condition than non-diabetics.

The reason for this is the strict routine of diet, exercise and rest a patient must follow to control his diabetes.

Meals, exercise and insulin dosage must all balance so that there is never too much or too little sugar in the blood.

The symptoms of too much sugar in the blood are: irritability, depression, hunger, extreme thirst and excessive urination (both the result of the body's attempt to get rid of the sugar), sugar in the urine, drowsiness and eventually diabetic coma that could be fatal.

For a diabetic on insulin low blood sugar usually means too much insulin in the system. The result is an insulin reaction. The patient feels tired but is also wakeful, perspires excessively, feels shaky, loses consciousness and goes into convulsions.

Because of this diabetics always carry some form of sugar. A small glass of orange juice or piece of chocolate will avert an "insulin storm."

Normal people don't suffer insulin reactions because the amount of insulin produced by the pancreas is controlled by the amount of sugar in the blood. When a non-diabetic sits down and eats a box of candy his blood sugar rises and he automatically produces more insulin. When he fasts his insulin production drops.

Diabetics who take insulin once a day must make sure that they eat enough food at regularly spaced intervals to balance the amount of insulin and blood sugar.

Switches Off

Scientists now know what insulin is and what it does but they don't know how it does it. A local specialist in the treatment of diabetics says current research indicates insulin switches off a protective device that insures a constant supply of blood sugar to the brain.

Researchers now think insulin blocks out the action of some unknown agent which prevents the utilization of blood sugar by the cells of the body so that the brain is assured a constant supply of nourishment.

Or, to put it non-scientifically — the brain gets first pick and if there is plenty of nourishment available insulin doles out the leftovers to the rest of the body.

Most diabetics are mature adults. Records indicate a middle-aged spread in the incidence of diabetes.

All Increase

This is because diabetes-prone individuals may produce enough insulin for their needs when they are young and slender. When they become overweight in middle age the pancreas can't produce enough insulin for the increase in body cells. Stress caused by emotion or illness can precipitate diabetes in people who have inherited a tendency for the disease.

Although this tendency is inherited, environment and eating habits can be the deciding factor. A local physician points out that the disease is almost unknown in Eskimos who live on high-protein diets and get plenty of exercise. She attributes the rise in the incidence of diabetes among the affluent to lack of exercise and too many foods rich in carbohydrates.

About 30 per cent of the patients dignosed as diabetics did not know they had the disease. They went to their doctor for routine checkups or needed a medical to qualify for a chauffer's licence or insurance.

They will now have to follow a well-regulated routine to control a condition that might never have developed if they had eaten and exercised as sensibly all their lives.

As one diabetic put it. "Diabetes no longer kills but it sure cramps your style."

Diabetics Helped Adjust

Anyone diagnosed as diabetic at Victoria's Royal Jubilee Hospital has won half the battle.

The hospital's day care centre helps sufferers adjust their life styles without the anxieties they used to face.

Most diabetics are diagnosed, told of their condition, put on insulin and a low carbohydrate diet, and discharged as soon as the doctor think the disease is under control.

A nurse wheels the patient safely off hospital property and wishes him goodbye and good luck.

The patient usually needs all the luck he can get. Hs has a shiny new hypodermic, a supply of insulin, a complicated diet sheet and a bad case of nerves.

He is supposed to go home, inject his own insulin, juggle food groups, and reorganize his way of life like a good little soldier.

Often he is so shocked by learning he is diabetic that the hospital's instructions and warnings are hoplessly scrambled. Two facts will have been drummed into his head: if he takes too much insulin he will get very sick and if he takes too little he will also get very sick.

If he's only nervous and upset he's lucky.

One local physician recognized the need for some kind of supportive program to help patients adjust to life as diabetics.

She started a day care program for diabetics at Royal Jubilee in 1968.

Patients come to the Diabetic Day Care Centre at 7:30 a.m. before they have taken their insulin. Blood and urine are tested for sugar and patients inject their own insulin under the supervision of the diabetic nurse Mrs. Edna Futcher.

Patients then breakfast in the hospital cafeteria. Mrs. Maxine Bradley accompanies each patient through the line-up and helps him select foods and quantities suitable for his diet.

The atmosphere at breakfast Wednesday morning was not exactly festive.

"I'll never get used to porridge with skim mulk and no sugar," one woman said.

Another said "I'm more afraid of the diet than the needle."

She had cause for concern. During the day's lectures doctors, nurses and dieticians stressed the importance of diet in the control of diabetes.

Mrs. Futcher pointed out that food, insulin dosage and exercise must all be carefully balanced. She said the onset of diaoetes was often caused by overweight because the pancrease could not produce enough insulin for this extra body tissue.

"Overweight aggravates diabetes," Mrs. Futcher said. She offered some hope to her six patients. One former patient's blood sugar returned to normal when she lost 80 pounds and regained her normal weight of 125 pounds. This woman was then able to control her diabetes with diet alone and did not need to take insulin.

Overweight patients brightened when they heard the news. Thin patients stayed depressed.

Mrs. Fucher also pointed out the importance of regular mealtimes.

"In a normal person the pancreas stops producing insulin when the blood sugar drops," she said. "But insulin by injection keeps on working."

She explaind that food at regular intervals keeps the blood sugar in balance with the insulin supply. If the blood sugar drops too low the patient will suffer an insulin reaction.

Mrs. Futcher urged patients always to carry nourishment with them, preferably some form of sugar.

She explained that diabetics have poor circulation that seems to lead to loss of sensation. Because of this patients may not notice injuries to extremities, particularly the feet.

After a round of tests and exercises, patients were given advice on diet by Mrs. Bradley.

Crafts Shop To Open

Island Home Industries, the organization set up to encourage self-employed cottage industry craftsmen and help them with marketing their craft, is opening its own display store at 510 Fort Street next Monday.

Financed under the federal government's local initiatives program, the project will be officially opened at 3:30 p.m. Monday by John Atcheson, one of the Canada Manpower officials responsible for the program on Vancouver Island.

'Most Neglected'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The executive director of Family Service Centres of Greater Vancouver Wednesday appealed to Premier Bennett to reconsider eligibility requirements for old age supplementary assistance and services.

Deryck Thomson, in his annual report, claimed that persons over age 65 were in danger of becoming the most neglected group in Canada and asked the premier to reconsider asset restrictions on assistance applicants.

Paramedics Like Three-Day Week

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Five paramedical workers at the Ottawa General Hospital are trying a three-day work week.

So far, they seem to love it. The only catch is that they work a 12½ hour day.

But after the first week in February, even that wasn't as bad as most had expected, according to Raymond Wolfe, head of the group of EEG-brain wave monitoring-technicians at the hospital.

The extra leisure time seems to more than make up for it.

The longer hours and a new split shift system allow better use of the three brain wave measuring machines in the unit.

And it is in other areas where efficient use of expensive equipment is important that the three-day work week shows most promise.

The new working arrangement is also more convenient for patients.

Open Six Days

The EEG clinic is now open six days a week, from 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m., for a total of 62½ hours a week.

This allows many patients to come in for testing after working hours.

The old hours were 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., five days or 37½ hours a week.

The experiment has been such a success that other groups of paramedical workers at the hospital are considering trying the new working hours on for size, Mr. Wolfe said.

Two of the five-man EEG staff work Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday on the 13½ hour shifts — including one hour for meals.

Two others work Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The fifth works a regular five day shift.

The shifts are rotated, to give each staff member one six-day "weekend," two four-day weekends and one two-day weekend each month.

One staffer whose wife works likes the system because it leaves more time for shopping and cleaning the house. Chores aren't inevitably left for the weekend.

Built a Library

Mr. Wolfe used his extra time this winter to build a library.

"I find I can get more done around the house this way." He hopes to go camping more often this summer.

The experiment, started in February, will be evaluated this summer and fall.

The hospital wants to determine the psychological and social effects as well as changes in work efficiency.

The EEG technicians have just rejected a two-week trial of a six-day work schedule for the clinic. "We were spread too thin," Mr. Wolfe said.

"If we could use two EEG machines this way for seven days a week, we wouldn't have had to purchase recently a third unit," he said. The latest machine cost $11,000.

He got the idea from an article in a hospital journal last summer about a similar experiment in the intensive care ward of the Winnipeg General Hospital.

HELPING HAND

Mrs. Louis Granatstein, a volunteer at Montreal's Maimonides home for the aged, helps Mrs. Anna Hershenfield with her meals this week as a province-wide strike by 210,000 public service employees cripples Quebec.

Maybe You're Not Fit To Sit Behind Desk

TORONTO (CP) — Even though you can clean and jerk 400 pounds and perform on the parallel bars like a double-jointed gymnast, if you're male and under 30 years old and you can't run 1½ miles in 12 minutes, you're not considered physically fit enough to serve in the Canadian Armed Forces.

In fact, "if you can't achieve this minimum running standard, we don't think you're even fit enough to sit behind a desk," says Lieut. Greg Pearson, physical education and recreation officer at CFB Downsview.

New Program

As of Feb. 1 this year, the Canadian Armed Forces has adoped a uniform physical-fitness standard based on aerobics, the running, jogging and walking program developed by an American physician, Dr. Kenneth Cooper.

The aerobics program replaces individual base physical-fitness programs which used as a guide the 5BX and 10BX programs developed for the Royal Canadian Air Force in the late 1950s.

The 5BX and 10BX - BX stands for basic exercise programs which emphasize building strength in the body through exercises such as sit-ups and push-ups and increasing body flexibility with bending and stretching movements.

"Aerobics stresses getting the heart, lungs and circulatory system fit," says Lieut. Pearson. And once you've done that, then by all means build up your strength and flexibility.

Although he considers the aerobics program "far superior to 5 and 10BX," Lieut. Pearson says "each program though has certain benefits."

"For example, a soldier who trained with aerobics would be able to run all day but might not be able to pull himself out of a trench because his arms are weak. Similarly, a weight-lifter could have a heart attack climbing a flight of stairs because his arms are strong but his heart is weak."

Under the new minimum-standard regulations for physical fitness in the armed services, every man and woman must run a mile and a half in a certain time, twice a year.

Men must be able to run the distance in the following times: under 30 years — 12 minutes; 30-39 years — 13 minutes; 40-45 years — 14 minutes. For women: under 30 years — 13 minutes; 30-39 years — 14 minutes; 40-45 years — 15 minutes.

Failure Rate

Lieut. Pearson says the Downsview base has been using the 1½-mile run "for about two years" and with 1,000 personnel the failure rate over a year has been 20 per cent.

Persons failing the test then must take a compulsory jogging or running program until they can pass.

Recruits take a pre-test of running as far as they can in 12 minutes to determine their physical-fitness rating, then, if necessary, take a training program to bring them up to standard.

Lieut. Pearson says "the scientific and research evidence" of the value of aerobics had been overwhelming, and predicts that "you'll see just about everybody shifting to it."

'Menial' Jobs For Women

While the number of working women in Canada has increased by 1,000,000 in the past 10 years, the jobs they hold have scarcely changed.

This was the message of Sylva Gelber, director of the women's bureau of the federal department of labor, in an annual publication, Women's Bureau '71, recently released.

Large Influx

"The largest influx of any group into the labor force in recent years has been that of women, and particularly women just beyond the current average childbearing years," said Miss Gelber.

"Last year, less than half (47.5 per cent) of the female labor force consisted of single women; the majority were married, widowed, divorced or separated," she said. Ten years ago, "more than half of the working women were single, the married women accounting for less than one-fifth (19.2 per cent) of the total."

The general job picture is still "women as clerical and office workers, sales clerks and waitresses, telephone operators and stewardesses on airlines; but there is a dearth of planners, executives and managers in the total scene."

Rates Low

"Women workers are still being paid at rates consistently lower than those of men even in the same menial occupations," she said. The same was true of female professional workers and academics.

"The continuing underemployment and underpayment of one-third of the total labor force is not only wasteful of human resources," she said. "It is detrimental to the Canadian economy."

PM 'BETRAYS' UNBORN CHILD

OTTAWA (CP) — The Trudeau government has "betrayed the unborn" by refusing to defend their rights on the abortion issue, lawyer David Dehler said this week.

Mr. Dehler, who recently successfully represented a husband seeking an injunction to restrain his wife from having an abortion, spoke at a meeting of Action Life, a local anti-abortion group.

The defence of the unborn child as an "infant plantiff" made the case unique in Canadian legal history. The injunction later was withdrawn by the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Mr. Dehler said the issue — "a major one in Canada today" — is the right of the unborn "to be protected in the womb to grow without being killed."

"At some point, the unborn is more than just a part of the mother's body," he said.

Amendments in the Criminal Code dealing with abortion have left inconsistencies in the laws, he said. For example, the unborn have property and inheritance rights under provincially-administered civil law but no longer have the protection and rights of criminal law.

"There is no scientific evidence that human life begins at any moment other than the instant of conception."

He accused pro-abortionists and the news media of distorting the issue, making it appear to be a question of the mother's right to freedom of choice rather than the "essential function of protecting the sanctity of life."

He also suggested the group take legal action to get its message to the public after members told the 200 persons at the meeting one of their advertisements was rejected by Ottawa newspapers on the grounds that it was "in bad taste."

The advertisement carries a photograph of a plastic garbage bag holding four well-developed discarded fetuses. President Grace Hargrave said the picture was taken in a Canadian hospital.

Dirt for Slick Chick But Clean Fun for Jane

Special to The Times

LONDON — Two academics who showed risque postcards to 97 women student teachers — including two nuns — presented the fruits of their research at the recent conference of the British Psychological Society at Nottingham.

They found that pretty girls laughed most at dirty jokes, including ones about sex and intercourse. The less attractive girls preferred cartoons which showed sexually desirable women being yearned after, discussed by, or pawed over by reasonably eligible men.

The unattractive girl, deprived of male attentions, builds up a fantasy of herself being chased — and perhaps caught — by a handsome man. The pretty girl does not have to.

The girls, who had agreed to take part in the experiment, were shown a range of postcards containing jokes about sexual organs, pregnancy, maternity and excretion.

Dr. G. D. Wilson of the Institute of Psychiatry, London University, and Anthony Brazendale, a lecturer at Berkshire College of Education, carried out the survey.

Unattractive girls, according to Brazendale, tend to be idealistic, religious and puritanical. He argued that "opposition to sexual freedom as a philosophy of life may function to deny the value of sexual attractiveness in people who perceive their own disadvantage in this area."

Postcards of "maternity wards and big tummies," he said, were unliked by either pretty or plain girls.

Brazendale makes no large claim for his project beyond the fact that it lends some support to Freud's 1905 theory of humor. The title of his paper was Sexual Attractiveness as a Predicator of Attitude and Response to Risque Humor.

It is difficult to realize that only 40 years ago, prepared baby foods were non-existant. Today, most mothers would feel totally lost without them!

If you are a mother for the first time, the 24-page Foods for Baby can save you much unnecessary worry. The booklet makes it clear that infants get used to solid foods only very, very gradually. You will also learn that instinctively babies enjoy sweet, slightly sour and slightly salty foods, but that they dislike bitter foods and anything very sour or very salty.

The booklet also discusses the foods a baby needs during the first year and points out that in the second year, food intake usually diminishes.

You will also find a chapter how to overcome feeding problems, though hopefully, you will not experience any.

Single copies are available without charge from: Gerber Products Company, 5515 Stanley Avenue, Niagara Falls, Ontario.

White Hyacinths In

This morning the heady perfume of four hyacinths (brought home from the Timp bulb gardens last Sunday and still in glorious bloom) sent my thoughts winging back over the years to a time long ago.

In the days I was remembering people would drive out on the old Island Highway in April, especially to see a patchwork quilt of flowers on the slopes just beyond Parson's Bridge.

This was the hyacinth fields at Kelvin Grove, farm of Neil and Malcolm Pollock.

Few White

There were thousands of hyacinth bulbs in those fields, set out in Persian carpet mosaic of light blues, mauves, pinks, creams and white. Strangely though, there was a lack of demand for the white hyacinths.

People would buy pink and blue varieties, in fact, any other color, but for some reason, they turned their noses up at the whites.

That is until Neil Pollock, who looked after the sales end of the business, remembered a verse from the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. The one that goes like this:

"If all thy worldly goods thou are bereft,
And two small loaves are all that thou hast left,
Take one, and with the dole
Buy white hyacinths to feed the soul."

He got a local artist to paint a sign with those lines inscribed on it and he had the sign put up on the edge of the farm, close to the Island Highway.

It paid off. There was an immediate turnover. And from then on the farm sold more white hyacinths than any other color.

At Kelvin Grove the Pollocks grew every variety of hyacinth known in those days. Propogated their own bulbs, too.

They believed whole-heartedly that hyacinths were the best of the April flowers, lasting in gardens, they pointed out, for as long as three weeks and in vases for at least 10 days.

Still Remember

Those hyacinth fields are gone now. Motels and small homes have usurped the slopes. Yet, I'm willing to wager there are a good many people in Victoria who in driving out along the old Island Highway today, still remember the white hyacinth sign and the glorious color that greeted them in April, on the slopes just beyond Parson's Bridge.

Today white hyacinths have a fair share of popularity with pinks, mauves and creams. But, this year it is the dark, dark blues that are really catching the fancy of garden enthusiasts and the eye of the casual passer-by.

Under Tree

If you'd like to see one of those blues in glorious array, drive along Rockland Avenue and look at a bed of the beauties under an oak tree, close to the rustic summer house in Government House grounds. Right now they are at the height of perfection and their perfume fills the air.

According to mythology, it was out of the blood of a handsome Spartan youth, Hyacinthus, who was killed accidentally while tossing a discus, grew a little flower which hung its head in perpetual sorrow.

Whether the ancient Greek legend is right or not, the hyacinth today, with its drooping bells painted in its many lovely shades, typifies the spring.

Soviets Pool Work For Cancer Centre

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union will build the world's largest cancer research centre with money raised during a national day of voluntary labor, the government newspaper Izvestia says.

Izvestia said the centre will cost $100 million and will coordinate all cancer research in the Soviet Union.

It said the money for the centre was raised during a "Communist subbotnik" held April 12, 1969. The annual "subbotniks" are held on the Saturday nearest the birthday of the Soviet founding father, Vladimir Lenin. On that day all workers in the Soviet Union are expected to labor voluntarily and without pay.

Izvestia said the centre will be located in Moscow and will include hospitals for adults, children and radiology patients totaling 1,000 beds and an outpatient clinic capable of handling 400 persons a day.

It will also contain extensive research laboratories for "fundamental research and experiments" in prevention and treatment of all forms of cancer.

This Could Be the Year of the Female Voter

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to The Times

OTTAWA — While the political analysts are much interested in how the new group of young voters will behave in the coming federal election, they seem largely to ignore a category of voters with even greater potential for disrupting party patterns — women.

Even women who have no connection with the various liberation and rights organizations have become much more conscious of their group interests since the last election. It is reasonable to expect that a significant number will see themselves at the polls not just as voters but as female voters with special concerns and this could cut sharply across party loyalties and be decisive in a close election.

Drew Support

There is some evidence in fact that this is already happening. Flora MacDonald won a landslide victory against a man for the Tory nomination in Kingston partly because she drew support from women not normally involved in politics. I'm told they arrived by the score at the nominating convention to support their candidate simply because she was a woman. If Ms. MacDonald can attract the same broad female following in the general election she may defeat Defence Minister Edgar Benson if he runs again.

Ms. MacDonald is, of course, an exceptional candidate regardless of sex. An exuberant and popular redhead, she was a professional organizer at the Conservative party's national headquarters, won election as the party's national secretary in the revolt against John Diefenbaker and went on to play a leading part in Robert Stanfield's campaign to gain the leadership.

Good Enough

While there are few women in Canada with such impressive political credentials there must be a great many good enough to draw female support across normal political boundaries. No mass migration of voters would be required to upset the pattern in many ridings; just a marginal swing.

One would think that the parties would be alert to the opportunity. But while they all talk about encouraging more female candidates, they are so far having limited success.

Alene Holt, national president of the Tory women and herself a municipal politician in Peterborough for 18 years, says she hates to admit it, but she can't think of a female Tory candidate for the election except Ms. MacDonald. But she's probably under-rating her own party because other Conservatives claim to know of women who will emerge as candidates when the election is called.

Flora MacDonald draws women's support

Only female MP Grace MacInnis

Liberal Women's President Marie Gibeault

Then she went to work at Queen's University in Kingston (she had strong student support in winning the Tory nomination and this may be a factor at the polls), took time out to help organize and run the Committee for an Independent Canada, and last year became the first woman accepted for the National Defence College's annual course in public affairs, a fabulous package of studies in Canada and abroad for a select group of soldiers, diplomats and public servants.

When Ms. MacDonald was accepted for the course she told Stanfield teasingly that she would be qualified to become the first female defence minister when he formed a government. No doubt she'd be good at the job too.

The New Democrats put up 21 women in 1968 and elected the only female MP, Grace MacInnis of Vancouver. The party reports that of 65 candidates nominated so far, four are women, and there are prospects that the total will go to 40 or more.

The Liberals shamefully had only one female candidate in 1968, and decided to do better this time. After receiving the 1970 report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau appointed a Liberal Party (as distinct from government) task force to travel across the country and sound out public opinion. The three-woman force completed its recommendations and then submitted them to the party's consultative council, some 1,500 local Liberal officials who can be polled by mail on controversial issues.

The poll is said to be heavily in favor of most of the task force proposals for enhancing the status of women, including the idea that the party should give special financial support and other assistance to female candidates. It will be presented next month to Trudeau but may be too late to be influential in this campaign.

Marie Gibeault, president of the Liberal Women's Federation who led the task force, says despondently that she does not expect to see many women candidates this time around. At a recent meeting of the national Liberal executive, she went around the table asking provincial presidents about the situation and got a discouraging response.

Despite the good intentions however, there remains in all parties a considerable discrimination against woman. They are usually assumed to be poor candidates with low appeal and even when they are nominated, it is often in "sacrifice" seats.

Studies of voting patterns and attitudes fail to support this sort of prejudice. The public is apparently willing to accept women in office and the percentage of women participating in federal elections by voting has just about caught up with the percentage of men.

If any significant number of women vote as a special interest group rather than as blind party supporters in the coming election, it may even be an advantage to be a female candidate.

This could be the year in which female voters give the male political managers a sharp lesson in sex discrimination. I hope so anyway . . .

Computer to Eliminate Household Chores

NEW YORK (UPI) — The computer may well become the greatest women's liberationist of them all.

It helped to get our men to the moon. It already is keeping track of your bank deposits and withdrawals, your billings at a department store.

But as marketing expert Frank T. Masi projects one of the computer's roles in the future, it will eliminate many of the time-consuming chores around the house. In years to come (before the end of this century), Masi says the computer will be as much at home as the diswasher, the television set, the telephone.

New homes will have built-in "terminals" taking up no more space than a typewriter and television screen.

The terminals will be connected to a master computer at, say, a bank or supermarket, which stores all the information that the householder feeds into it for a feedback on call either on the screen or printed page.

Masi believes the home computer will come into action simply because women will be conditioned to its uses in offices. "Some 80 per cent of the office users of computers are women," he said.

Masi is vice president for marketing of Cascade Data, Inc., a Grand Rapids, Mich.-based firm which specializes in tailoring computers for smaller businesses.

Masi described what could be the way the home computer operates to do the supermarket shopping. The market would offer the householder a membership for a fee. Say it gets 200,000 members and installs its own sending and receiving equipment. It compiles each day a food and other items directory, price, brand name, et al.

The market does away completely with the decorated store next door or within driving distance. Instead, it sets up a warehouse system, where decor doesn't matter.

It also changes its policy so that the housewife can expect delivery instead of hauling her own grocery cart around traditional aisles.

Merely by sitting at a console in the kitchen (or elsewhere), she can "call up" to check prices, specials being offered, place her order and even ask the computer whether she's within her weekly allotment for food spending. At every month or quarter, she can ask the computer what she's spent on any them.

From the warehouse, the supermarket's fleet of trucks — "grocery stores on wheels," as Masi calls them — can deliver within two or three hours after she's ordered.

The way Masi sees it, the computer will take over a lot of other of the household routines—"but maybe not the shopping for clothing or furniture, what I'd call the esthetic items," he said.

The computer can keep track of bills due, what regular payments are coming up on such things as the car or the mortgage so the budget-maker can plan for them, tell you how much mileage you're getting in gasoline for the car, remind you of the children's school holidays, even store the family's medical record for instant call-up.

But can the computer clean house — one of the more onerous jobs of running a home?

"If the new homes are built with a central vacuum system just as they now come with central heating, central air-conditioning, yes," he said. "The computer could be programmed to suction off dust when the housewife wishes . . . could be told when to spray a deodorant in bath or kitchen."

'Busybody' Grandma Takes Over the House

DEAR ABBY: My wife's mother became widowed last year and came to make her home with us as my wife is her only child. At first we treated Grandma like a guest, but she soon started to take over, criticizing my wife's handling of our children and her extravagance in managing the house. Then she started in on the children. She found fault with their friends, their clothes, their habits and the noise they made.

The old lady even told me that I should give up golf as it was a "silly" game, and took too much of my time away from my family. She also told me that I subscribed to more magazines than any one person could possibly read.

The kids and my wife have been very patient and respectfully silent thus far, but I know they resent Grandma. How can I put this old busybody in her place without a major flare-up? Or should I keep quiet and wait until my wife also has a bellyful and handles it her way?—Bellyful

DEAR BELLYFUL: Let your wife handle it her way. You probably won't have to wait long.

DEAR ABBY: Why do basically honest people cheat at bridge?

We are members of a bridge club, and one of the woman in our foursome always keeps score, and almost all the time she wins the high scoring prize. As soon as the game is over, this woman makes a pretense of clearing off the table and she immediately destroys the score sheets.

This annoys all of us who have noticed it, and if she did not have otherwise loveable qualities we would drop her from the foursome.

Can you please give us some ideas on how we can straighten her out without offending her or causing her embarrassment?—Such Good Friends

DEAR FRIENDS: Basically honest people do not cheat at anything. Either keep this lady with the "otherwise lovable qualities" honest by relieving her of the score-keeping job or drop her.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote in asking what to do with unsolicited stuff that comes in the mail. Some organizations send out personalized key chains, packets of Christmas cards, name stickers and a lot of other items, hoping the recipients will send them a dollar or two.

I wish I could afford to help all these missions, churches, veterans, handicapped people, etc., but I am on social security and I can't. Also, why should I have to pay postage to return stuff I never sent for in the first place?

Well, here's the answer: My mailman told me that if I ever get anything in the mail I did not order and do not want, I shouldn't even open it. (But if I do open it, I can tape it closed again.) Just write on the package, "Refused. Return to Sender."

The sender will have to pay the postage for its return so you won't have to worry about hearing from them again because after a while, they'll get the message. — No More Junk

DEAR ABBY: Mark Evans, Ph. D., who says he is a grown man who enjoys living at home with his mother and father, and is probably considered an oddball by society because he respects his parents and shares their values, did not disclose the subject of his degree.

Drug Helps Babies

TORONTO (CP) — A Philadelphia doctor told the Toronto chapter of the Hospital Pharmacists' Association this week that use of the drug cortisone may help save premature babies.

Dr Mary Soentgen said that although it is still too early to tell, cortisone has helped in some cases of hyaline membrane disease, which results in a lack of coating on the lungs and makes breathing a massive effort. It often causes death.

Dr. Soentgen, director of newborn nurseries at Thomas Jefferson Medical College, said cortisone was given to 22 babies afflicted with the disease, whose condition was deteriorating despite other treatment. Seventeen of the babies survived.

'Beware of the Jargon Trap'

Concern about the misuse of "jargon," especially in the field of social services, was expressed today by architect John Di Castri in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the Community Council of Greater Victoria.

Di Castri said changes in language and communication have seen the increase of "vague existential terms describing human relationships" which abound in both the spoken and written word.

★ ★ ★

"Each discipline and specialty has developed its own jargon which confuses the outside but provides the initiated a mystical immunity to criticism, not the least of which is the field of social services," he said.

★ ★ ★

"While language is one of the prime means of communication it can also be used to cover confused thinking and circumvent coming to grips with reality as it exists."

The social worker, Di Castri said, should remember that he is dealing with people, not caseloads or statistics, "and he should be wary of not falling into the trap of jargon in describing and dealing with human relationships.

'Inferior Education' Given In Ladysmith—Chairman

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

LADYSMITH — Ladysmith School District is facing an "educational crisis," chairman Dr. Gerald Philippson said Thursday.

Students here are getting "inferior education and steps must be taken to change this," he said in an interview.

Philippson, of Chemainus, said that, with the limited budget (just over $2 million this year) and the limited number of students, the district is unable to offer a wide range of programs.

NO FRILLS

"This is crucial. The education is not bad in the academic and technical areas where students want to go on to further education like university," he said. "Students are getting perfectly adequate education in this area, with limitations in the language area, but are being passed by in vocational courses leading to employment following high school or apprenticeships. We are really inadequate in this area and they still have to be cut further. We just don't have any frills."

Philippson said the district is unable to have the "wide range of service to prevent kids from dropping out because of lack of interest if they are not going to university, as most high schools do."

Ladysmith district runs from the Chemainus River, in North Cowichan, to North Oyster, 15 miles north of here. There are 2,600 students attending two senior secondary schools (one in Chemainus and one in Ladysmith) and nine elementary.

On the board there are two trustees from Chemainus, three from Ladysmith, one from North Oyster and one from Saltair.

Philippson, chairman for two years, said the seven trustees have decided the district must amalgamate with other school districts but have been unable to agree how.

Trustees have discussed amalgamation of Cowichan, Ladysmith and Nanaimo school districts; amalgamating the Ladysmith district with Nanaimo, or splitting the district with Chemainus joining Cowichan while Saltair and Ladysmith go to Nanaimo.

"Although the Ladysmith board favors complete amalgamation, it is apparent there is no reasonable chance of implementing it on a voluntary basis," Philippson said.

OPEN BOUNDARIES

The chairman said this concept was introduced about a year ago in the Coleman Report which was carried out by the B.C. School Trustees Association.

"Coleman felt open boundaries between the three school districts would greatly improve education possibilities in all areas," Philippson said. "He also said the population of 17,000 students would be an ideal situation."

At the same time as the Coleman Report, a second report, also made by the BCSTA, was introduced proposing that Ladysmith school district be split.

Philippson said he would like to see the Coleman concept implemented but because it is "not practical I am personally for splitting the district.

"Cowichan has expressed favor of amalgamating the southern half of the Ladysmith school district, which is Chemainus, into their district."

By splitting the district with Cowichan and Nanaimo, Philippson said attendance areas would be able to remain the same and students would then have a wider range of courses.

"The only problem could be transportation."

Philippson said complete amalgamation with Nanaimo School District was explored, unofficially, and "I felt Nanaimo favored the approach."

Philippson said he is against the idea of having part of North Cowichan (Chemainus) in the Nanaimo district.

"It would not make regional, social or cultural sense."

BY SEPTEMBER

Philippson said the board would like to see Ladysmith district amalgamated in some way in September.

"We just can't negotiate beyond this year and accept another year of inferior education for students."

Although trustees haven't been able to agree how they would like to amalgamate, Philippson said they are coming closer to unity "because of the stress of current events."

Ladysmith taxpayers defeated a $94,000 operating referendum two weeks ago.

"This was their way of telling us they definitely want a change."

Philippson said the decision on amalgamation, or changing school boundaries, is made by the department of education.

No Blame Laid In Baby's Death

LADYSMITH (CP) — No blame has been attached in the death in a fire last month of 16-month-old Martina Melissa Bernadette Joe.

Cornorer C. G. Newcombe ruled Thursday that the child died as a result of injuries suffered in the fire.

No adults were in the house when the fire broke out at 2 a.m. and four other children who were baby-sitting had to flee the home.

$2,500 Fine For Fouling Harmac Waters

NANAIMO (CP) — The Greek freighter Spiros, A. Lemos was fined $2,500 in provincial court Thursday after being found guilty of dumping bunker fuel into waters near Harmac, southeast of Nanaimo.

Judge Paddy Bowen-Colthurst said in passing sentence that the case was the third of this nature he has heard since he came to the bench earlier this year, and that before he has erred in giving relatively light fines. He said fines now will be getting heavier.

The maximum penalty for dumping fuel oil is $10,000.

Public Safety Annex Opened By Curtis

A new $330,000 extension to the Saanich police-fire building at Vernon Avenue, near the municipal hall, was opened today by Mayor Hugh Curtis.

Although the original building is just 10 years old, the rapid growth of the municipality and expanded need for police and fire protection found the two departments outgrowing both space and facilities.

The extension — about $280,000 is for construction and $50,000 for furnishings and equipment — almost doubles the size of the police headquarters to 18,000 square feet.

In recent years the department has been hampered by cramped accommodation, particularly for the vital maintenance of records.

The addition has also provided much more room for general interview purposes, the identification section, storage of lost and found items and communications.

Ten years ago the police department had less than 30 personnel which has now tripled to more than 90.

Biggest improvement for the fire department in the extension is the provision of two new bays, bringing the total to six.

Bedroom space, kitchen and lavatory facilities have also been enlarged, while three new offices for administrative staff will likely be added later.

These offices, deleted from the original plan for the building, were the subject of council hassle earlier this year when the extra accommodation was found to be badly needed.

IN THE SWIM one day after leaving the eggs, these tiny cygnets accompany their parents around the pond in the Reifel Wildlife Refuge near Vancouver. The black swans, native to Australia, are the first each year to nest at the refuge.

BOYS FEARED ROOSTER WOULD NEVER CROW

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Bantam Stores Ltd. had to put a $5 limit on a new give-away game Thursday when two teen-agers figured a way to beat the system.

Michael Dowling, 16, and his friend, Christopher Plouffe, both of Burlington, won $670.07 worth of free groceries.

The store had implemented a promotion in which figures of bantam roosters were printed on cash register tapes. Each time a rooster showed up on the tape, the shopper received all the groceries already rung up on the register free of charge.

When Michael and Christopher entered the store Wednesday then only had few dollars between them.

But the boys decided to feed groceries over the counter until the rooster popped up.

TOOK TWO HOURS

They were still feeding when the rooster finally came up two hours later. The bill was $670.07. Betty Friel, who operates the store with her husband, said she got tired just punching up the groceries on the cash register. At 10:30 p.m., the normal closing time, the Friels closed up the store but allowed the boys to keep purchasing.

The boys said that if they had reached the end of the cash register tape, without seeing a rooster, they somehow would have paid for the groceries.

Michael said that when their gamble hadn't paid off by the $500 mark he became worried.

But when that rooster came up I went nuts."

Thursday, the boys shared their loot with neighbors, giving some away and selling other items at half price.

Employees Vote No

Duncan Blamed For Delay

DUNCAN — A request that the Cowichan Valley Regional District study garbage disposal in the area struck a sore spot Wednesday with director David Laverock of Shawnigan Lake.

When Hamish Mutter, Duncan's representative on the board, urged members to look into the garbage situation, Laverock reacted sharply and suggested Mutter study correspondence and a detailed report prepared two years ago.

"A lot of work was done two years ago but it was kicked around the bucket by Duncan and dropped by North Cowichan. Duncan just ignored it."

"Regardless of all the reports we are asking for action," Mutter said.

He said Duncan council is in favor of joint participation in an incinerator for garbage disposal.

After some more debate, Laverock agreed to head a committee to study garbage disposal in the valley and bring the old report up to date.

North Cowichan now is the only area with an incinerator. Directors from other areas claim they are running out of garbage dumping space.

Eagle Hatching Short-Lived

WASHINGTON (WP) — The interior department Wednesday reported the death of an eagle hatched in captivity last week.

The hatching, April 5, was considered a rare event by interior's wildlife experts.

The eaglet was hatched from one of two eggs in the nest of a pair of eagles at the Patuxent (Md.) wildlife centre of the bureau of sport fisheries and wildlife. A spokesman said the other egg has not hatched, and there is little hope now that it will.

428 House Starts, No Comparison

Housing starts in Victoria during February totalled 428, but due to a new system of reporting Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. is unable to supply comparable figures for a year ago until a quarterly total is available.

The February starts bring to 538 the number of new housing units commenced since Jan. 1 in the capital region, of which 246 were in the city itself, all but 11 in February.

Most Saanich starts, at 176 to date this year, also were in February, as were the 21 in Sidney.

There were 24 February starts for a total 70 this year in unorganized territories of the region, with the remaining 25 scattered between Central Saanich, North Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay.

For the first time, CMHC has begun reporting Kamloops district and Prince George district as population "agglomerations," a term instituted by Statistics Canada for units of less than 100,000, or metropolitan areas.

Kamloops had 71 starts since Jan. 1, mostly in January, and Prince George 103, about half in January.

The great majority of starts in Victoria were row houses, apartments and similar high density types, a total of 352 this year compared with 76 single, semi-detached and duplex types.

Death 'Blameless'

A coroner's inquiry Wednesday night found no one at fault in the March 21 death of logger Peter Fulton Hill, 62, of Sooke Road.

Hill died after a tree fell on him during logging operations by Tripp Creek Logging Co. 25 miles northwest of Sooke. The inquiry conducted by Coroner Eugene Murphy attached no blame to anyone in the accident.

Chevy Nova.
The reasonable alternative for small car buyers.
Here's why.

The small car is a big thing in B.C.

Yet people are starting to look for a car with the economy/handling advantages of the small car plus the stability/space advantages of the larger car.

That's what Chevy Nova is all about.

Not-too-big.

Nova is about a couple of feet longer than your average small car. Which isn't much. So you'll find Nova quite simple to wheel around and easy to park.

Nova doesn't cost that much to buy or to run. Calling it reasonable is being modest.

Not-too-small.

On the other hand, we did build Nova to offer relief from small-car cramps. Those couple of extra feet mean there's room for six adults (or two adults and a pack of children), and a trunk big enough to take all their stuff.

Out on the road, Nova sits tight on corners and holds steady in crosswinds. And on long highway runs or long hills, Nova has no problem keeping up with the big ones.

Very dependable.

Nova has an enviable reputation for dependability. And that was convincingly confirmed by a survey carried out last year among independent garage owners/managers and servicemen. These car professionals voted our Chevy Nova, "The car with the least mechanical problems."

Compare the value.

Good value is made up of many things. Proven dependability is one of them. See how it pays off at trade-in time.

But Nova's value is much more. You have the opportunity to take the basic car (quite something as is) and add other extra-cost features to suit your own personal taste. You can get power steering if you want it. And power brakes, too. Or a sun roof on the coupe.

If you like the idea of a small car but don't like the limitations, Chevy Nova could be for you.

To be sure, see your Chevrolet dealer.

GM

Buckling seat and shoulder belts is an idea you can live with.
Some of the equipment illustrated is optional at extra cost.

Merger Talks April 25

LADYSMITH — A delegation from the Ladysmith school board will meet department of education officials April 25 to seek amalgamation with a neighboring school district.

The move comes after defeat recently of a $97,000 operating costs referendum which will result in cutbacks in instruction programs.

The Ladysmith delegation will meet a committee set up within the department of education which has been studying the amalgamation question.

On another issue, the school board decided not to act on a protest by parents in the Yellow Point area who object to the removal of busing service for kindergarten children.

The parents halted a bus early this week by parading in front of it with placards.

The board decided kindergarten busing is not a compulsory part of the education program.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

The Anatomy of an Ostomy

There are many people in the United States who, after an operation for cancer of the rectum or the sigmoid (the lowest parts of the large bowel), or an operation in which the whole colon has been removed, have to learn to live with an opening onto the abdominal wall through which the contents of the bowel are emptied. This type of surgical procedure involving the colon (large bowel) is called a colostomy. The colostomy may be a permanent one, or it may be only a temporary one, performed usually to allow the lower part of the colon or the rectum to heal or rest.

The ileostomy is another type of surgical opening, into the ileum (the lower portion of the small intestine). Most ileostomies are done for ulcerative colitis, a serious disease in which the inner lining of the colon is so badly inflamed that the whole large section of bowel must be removed.

There is also a urinary ostomy, performed because of the loss of the bladder or loss of bladder function.

Because there is a good deal of misinformation and confusion about these various types of ostomies — some people are not even sure whether they have a colostomy or an ileostomy — the United Ostomy Association has prepared an excellent booklet called "Anatomy of Ostomy," with illustrations which will show people what the various types of ostomies are, and what relation they have to the bowel, the kidneys and to the urinary bladder. There is also a dictionary of terms related to ostomies.

As I have said here before, it is a wonderful thing for a person with an ostomy to join one of the chapters of the United Ostomy Association. I have known people who, after an ostomy was made, were depressed and hopeless, feeling that they did not care to live with the abnormal opening. They felt that life was ended for them and thought of suicide. Then I told them of the Ostomy Association. They went to a meeting of the group and found other people with ostomies, who were living happily and usefully. Their ideas changed. Hope came back to them, and they went back to their work without any more thoughts of suicide.

Also, after the surgery, there is much that the person must learn about living with an ostomy — how to care for it, what foods must be avoided, and many other things that can be learned better from someone who has been living with the same condition, than from the surgeon who did the operation.

The address of the United Ostomy Association, Inc., is 1111 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90017, Telephone, 213: 481-2811. The booklet costs 50 cents.

1972 LUHRS
SEDAN CRUISERS
What makes the all new LUHRS Super 320 and Super 280 the choice of experienced yachtsmen?

RUGGED SEA BOATS

Right from the start, the whole idea behind LUHRS was a boat that could handle the worst weather and run the dangerous inlets of the west coast.

MORE QUALITY AND LESS CHROME

Men who know and respect the sea have come to rely on LUHRS for honest performance, rugged construction and above all, the most boat for the dollar.

THE GREAT INDOORS

Below decks she's an outstanding example of workability and comfort. LUHRS is the kind of boat that not only suits a man's requirements but makes a woman's eyes light up too.

EXTRA VALUE

The last of a famous model. New 1972 LUHRS 32' sedan cruiser. (You saw her at the Boat Show). This boat has all the features of the Super 320 except she has fiberglassed mahogany cabin sides and decks. Full fiberglass hull, cockpit and flybridge. Powered by twin 225 H.P. Chryslers F.W.C. Dual control station. Trim tabs, hot water, water pressure and shore power. Due to the labor costs in hand finishing the cabin in solid mahogany and the publics demand for all fiberglass cruisers, LUHRS has discontinued the 28' and 32' in this model. We offer this one only, 32' LUHRS regular price $34,300 at a cash, no trade price of

Celtics' Bench Pays Off

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics' bench is paying off, but there's still one big hurdle left in their bid to advance in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

"People keep saying they're dead, but they won't lay down," Boston sharp-shooter Jo Jo White said Friday night after the Celtics' 124-114 victory over Atlanta Hawks.

"I'm getting tired of going to Atlanta," White said after hitting for 26 points. "I wish we could have wrapped it up at home, but there's no choice — we go to Atlanta Sunday."

The Celtics took a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semi-final series with the Hawks, but had to hold off several spirited challenges by Atlanta.

Boston built a 17-point lead, 25-8, in the first period, then had a major struggle until pulling away in the final quarter.

Atlanta closed to within two points, 64-62, in the third period and trailed by just three points several times until White hit a basket and an 89-84 advantage at the three-quarter mark.

The Celtics' bench came through in handsome fashion with Steve Kuberski, 7-foot Henry Finkel and Don Nelson playing key roles.

Kuberski, a forgotten forward during the regular season, wrecked the Hawks with 20 points and 10 rebounds. Finkel, forced into action after center Dave Cowens picked up a fifth foul early in the third period, hit on three key set shots in the final quarter. Nelson contributed 16 points and had 10 rebounds.

In the American Basketball Association, New York Nets upset Kentucky Colonels 100-92 to take a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Eastern semi-final. Utah Stars made it four straight over Dallas Chaps with a 103-99 victory in the Western Division semi-final.

Indiana Eyes NHL

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana Professional Sports, Inc., has filed an application and a check for $25,000 for a franchise in the National Hockey League.

"This makes Indianapolis a bona fide applicant for one of the two expansion franchises that will be awarded on May 25," John Weissert, vice-president and general manager of the sports group, said Tuesday.

He said the application and check had been sent to Clarence Campbell, NHL president.

Indiana Professional Sports major holding now is the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association.

Penalties Ruin Vernon Chances

VERNON (CP) — Red Deer Rustlers took advantage of Vernon penalties and scored a 6-2 victory Wednesday night to take a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven centennial cup quarter-final series.

Rustlers scored two unanswered goals in the first 20 minutes of play and boosted their margin to 5-0 going into the final period. Four of their goals were on power-plays.

WINNERS DON'T CLAIM $345,000 IN PRIZES

MONTREAL (CP) — Officials of Loto-Quebec, the provincially-run lottery system, say that $345,000 in unclaimed prize money remains in the corporation's hands.

The latest amount to go unclaimed is the $50,000 second-prize from the April monthly draw.

"This is the second time we have had no claim on the $50,000 prize," Loto-Quebec secretary Jean-Marc Lafaille said today. "It happens sometimes. People lose their tickets or sent them out in the pocket of a pair of pants to the cleaners."

He said the $50,000 winner in last November's monthly draw also did not claim the amount.

"People have three months to claim their prize though," he said. "We recycle the unclaimed money back to the public. Last Christmas, for instance, we offered larger prizes."

Bombers Sign Two

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference have signed two Canadian players. Bringing the number of signings to 23 were four-year veteran defensive safety Paul Brule and rookie lineman Jon Dellandrea, a 240-pound University of Toronto graduate.

$3,000 a Month for Ex-Wife May Not Be Enough people

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The Florida Supreme Court said Thursday $3,000 a month may not be enough alimony for Mary Alice Firestone, whose former husband, Palm Beach millionaire Russell Firestone, had them living in luxury like "sultans out of Arabian Nights."

The decision said, in effect, that when a woman becomes accustomed to posh living inside of marriage she is entitled to nearly equal luxury outside it.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — What does a man say to a naked lady he meets coming out of a sauna bath?

"How are you doing," was all former Vanderbilt football player Les Lyle could come up with Thursday when two nude females entered the previously all-male sauna bath at Vandy's McGugin Centre. The young women were believed to be Vanderbilt co-eds who took seriously a recent athletic department decision opening McGugin's facilities to all students.

CALGARY — Sandy Rider, 24, was sentenced to one year imprisonment for committing perjury during a trial involving a $20 traffic ticket.

Mr. Justice A. J. Cullen of Alberta Supreme Court found the man had given false evidence when he denied he was in a car that RCMP stopped before charging the driver for not having a valid licence.

OTTAWA — Canadians have ceased worshipping political leaders like Winston Churchill, Franklin Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy says television performer Roy Bonisteel.

Mr. Bonisteel, host of the CBC program Man Alive, told more than 200 political leaders, diplomats and church laymen that the new heroes are ordinary people with a concern for others. He was speaking at the annual national prayer breakfast.

NELSON — William Robert Sloan, 24, insurance salesman missing from his home in Griffin, Georgia, for two weeks, is on his way back today, recovered from an amnesia attack.

RCMP said Sloan had been directed to them after he became aware of his proper identity and tried to call the state police, not realizing he was in Canada. Sloan told the RCMP he had picked up hitch-hikers after leaving home on a couple of insurance calls. One of the two hitch-hikers climbed into the back seat. He said he drove for awhile then recalled nothing until he "woke up" in Nelson.

KANSAS CITY — Transportation Secretary John Volpe warned of the dangers motorists face from drunk drivers, and minutes later narrowly missed becoming the victim of one himself.

"We must bet the drunk driver off the road before he kills himself or others," Volpe told the National Council of Alcoholism. Then, en route to Municipal Air Terminal the limousine in which Volpe was riding narrowly escaped a head-on collision with a car driven on the wrong side of a highway median by a driver who police said was intoxicated.

CHURCHILL
. . . no hero?

HUXLEY, Tex. — Lonnie Miller and a friend, both in their 20s, were dragging a bale of hay across a road as a practical joke to startle a passing motorist. But the motorist, Levi Wagstaff, mistaking the hay for an animal, stopped his car, got out and opened fire with a shotgun.

Miller was hit and killed. Wagstaff, realizing what he had been shooting at, suffered a heart failure and was hospitalized. He was placed under $5,000 bond on a charge of murder without malice.

A HAIRY PROBLEM cropped up for Joe Ring, of Norwich, Conn., when he was chosen to play a part in his school's production of West Side Story. He needed an Afro hair style for his role, and after a three-hour ordeal involving 80 rollers and a permanent at a men's hair stylist, he found he couldn't get into his Volkswagen.

Court Frees Dean

BLOEMFONTEIN (Reuter) — The South African Appeal Court upheld today an appeal by the Anglican Dean of Johannesburg, Very Rev. Gonville ffrench-Beytagh, against his conviction under the Terrorism Act, and set aside his five-year prison sentence.

The 64-year-old clergyman — an outspoken opponent of apartheid—was convicted in the Pretoria Supreme Court last November of three of 100 alleged terroristic offences.

After a three-month trial, he was found guilty of incitement to violence and of channelling funds to "banned" people and organizations in South Africa.

The judge president of the Transvaal, P. M. Cillie, imposed the minimum penalty laid down under the Terrorism Act. The dean had pleaded not guilty to all the charges.

His lawyers appealed the verdict and he was freed on bail of $13,300.

The decision of the three-judge appeal court was unanimous.

The clergyman, a British subject, was not in court for the verdict. He said Thursday that he was "not particularly confident" of acquittal.

The dean said he planned to leave South Africa as soon as possible for a long holiday in Britain.

However, his passport is still being held by the police.

Plane Used as Soapbox To Air Hijacker's Views

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — A 36-year-old unemployed Mexican immigrant, father of nine, was in jail today on charges of air piracy after he allegedly hijacked a Boeing 737 to dramatize the plight of Mexican-American poor.

After talking to two Mexican-American reporters for nearly three hours and making an impassioned speech which was broadcast live city-wide, police said Ricardo Chavez Ortiz handed over an unloaded gun and surrendered.

Police said Ortiz, who has a history of psychiatric problems, commandeered a Frontier Airlines jet with 27 passengers and six crew aboard shortly after it took off from Albuquerque, N.M., Thursday morning.

He demanded it fly to Los Angeles and that a Mexican-American police officer and Mexican-American radio and television reporters be there so he could make a two-hour broadcast statement.

He told police when the plane landed: "I am not interested in money. I do not want any ransom. I have a gun but I don't want to hurt anyone."

He was given a television crew of three from a local Spanish-speaking television station and one Spanish-speaking radio reporter. In return he let the 26 passengers off.

ENDS WITH APOLOGY

He ended his bizarre news conference by apologizing for his actions, begging forgiveness and handing his .22-calibre pistol over to pilot Willie Hirt to end the six-hour hijacking.

He said: "Sir, I surrender to you. Here is my gun and you can see it is empty."

Ortiz said he had recently lost his job in a Los Angeles restaurant and had gone to New Mexico where he was also badly treated.

Reporters who interviewed him said he had been in the United States 14 years and had worked as a pilot, mechanic and chef.

"We must have justice for these people," Ortiz said, "I am telling my people not to be cowards. Our children have no right to go through the miserable life they are going through."

His wife was brought to the airport from her Los Angeles-area home along with their son Ricardo. The boy said his father had not appeared to be disturbed but FBI agents said he had a history of psychiatric trouble.

Ortiz was escorted off the airfield by FBI agents and taken to a federal court where he was arraigned on a charge of air piracy and held on $500,000 bail.

Ministers to Jet

HAMILTON (CP) — Premier William Davis said the Ontario government intends to buy an executive jet for cabinet ministers to use. He told a news conference a decision on purchasing one is expected soon. Earlier, a group of Hamilton residents asked Davis about his Easter flight to Stowe, Vt., for a skiing holiday with his wife and five children.

Rock Gardening Offers Diversity, New Interest

For all the gardners who think spring is slow and the weather in general has been horrible, I recommend a visit to the annual show of the Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society.

It comes each year just at a time when some of Victoria's newer inhabitants begin grousing about rain and wind and things that really belong to our coastal environment as do Arbutus and Douglas fir.

On Friday and Saturday next week, April 21 and 22, the Rock and Alpine Show will be held in St. Andrew's Parish Hall, 1012 Pandora Ave., from 2 until 10 p.m. on Friday, and from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Saturday.

★ ★ ★

For the first-time visitor to this annual show the reaction in one of incredulity as the wide range of dwarf trees, ferns, flowering shrubs and bulbs is noted — for the keynote of the show is that everything must be grown without artificial heat.

Many plants shown are suited for natural rock garden properties for which this area is famous.

No longer does the discerning architect insist on bulldozing a rocky site down flat like a parking strip before creating a masterpiece of modern environmental architecture.

The "garden" of natural rock outcroppings will be planted with material of a natur eand scale to fit the dwelling.

Result — a perfect blending of nature and art. We see it sometimes.

Woodland plants, some native to our own parks and wild lands, others to more distant but similar forest areas, will be seen at the show; bog plants and Bonsai; alpines from many distant countries collected and cared for by devoted plantsmen and women; primulas of every amazing kind to delight you with diversity of flower and foliage; tiny bulb species; cushiony masses of rock crevice plants.

★ ★ ★

You could spend the eight show hours of Friday happily studying the plants — all living, all with roots — and then find some you missed.

But if you are new to Victoria and new to this type of show, don't miss the opportunity to see this one. Especially if you garden on rock, in woodland, or on a highrise balcony, you are sure to see specimen plants which will fit into the scheme of things as if they had grown there all their lives.

Miniature rock gardens in containers are part of the show and guaranteed to make you start making one as soon as you get back to your own garden.

And starting a Bonsai gives you a lifetime interest!

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal arose in the National Mixed Pairs Championship held in Phoenix, Ariz., in November, 1971, most North-South pairs arrived at a three-no-trump contract on minimal values. At the majority of the tables, this contract was fulfilled. The bidding and play which follow occurred at one of the tables were the contract was defeated.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ 10 8 4
♡ J 7 2
◇ A K Q 10 9
♣ Q 9

WEST

EAST

◇ 8 6 5 4 2
♣ A 7 4

SOUTH
♡ A Q
◇ 7 3
♣ 10 6 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡.

On West's opening lead of the heart ten, dummy's deuce was played. East made a nice play when he signalled encouragement with the eight-spot, instead of putting up his king. Had he played the king, dummy's jack would have been promoted into a winner.

Dummy was now entered via the diamond queen, and the ten of spades was led. When East played low, declarer did likewise. West captured the trick with his ace.

Our West defender — and probably all of the other West defenders on this deal recognized that a shift to clubs was called for if any chance of defeating South's game contract were to be entertained. Had West made the "automatic" shift to his fourth-highest club, declarer would have fulfilled his contract. A low club would have been played from dummy, and East's ace would have captured the trick. East would have returned a club, West's king winning as the board's queen fell.

From here in, all West could cash would be his club jack, for South's remaining doubleton 10-6 would prevent the defenders from cashing any more clubs.

But our West defender, upon taking his spade ace, did not lead his fourth-highest club. Instead, he banged down the club king, on which East signaled for a continuation by playing his seven-spot. Next came the club three to East's ace, after which East returned his remaining club, the four-spot.

South was now a gone goose, for he had the 10-6 remaining, while West possessed the J-8. Whichever of his two clubs he played, he could not prevent West from making two more club tricks. Thus the defenders ended up making four club tricks and one spade.

Of such stuff are expert defenders made. And on such stuff are national championships won or lost, depending on whether the king of clubs is led initially, or the three-spot, as the fourth-highest.

FIGURES FUN WITH

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Number 144, eh?" Joe commented. "That's odd. It's the product of the ages of my three kids, and their ages add up to the number of your office."

"You're kidding!" Bob thought a moment. "It should give me their ages, but I can't be sure. Any twins?"

Joe laughed. "Not that I know of," he replied. And that's all Bob needed.

What were the ages?

Thanks for an idea to D. Dinham, St. John's, Nfld.

THEY SHOOT MAYORS IN MANILA

MANILA — A mayor in the Philippines today has one of the most dangerous jobs in the world, but it may be more dangerous to be a mayor's bodyguard.

Since Christmas, four Filipino mayors have been gunned down or killed by bombs. Two others narrowly escaped death in ambushes and even one former mayor — a woman — was shot to death.

At least 10 bodyguards have been killed in these incidents. Other bodyguards have been killed in related incidents.

Mayor Ramon Bagatsing of Manila has an artifiial left foot replacing the one he lost when somebody tossed a couple of bombs into the middle of a political rally last August. Nine persons perished and a number of his colleagues in the Liberal party were injured in the blasts.

It's all part of the bloody national sport, known here as politics.

Mayor-elect Jose Cruz, 36, of Malabon received a fancy Christmas basket at his hotel suite in Manila. Cruz had received several death threats but ignored a warning about opening Christmas presents and the elegantly wrapped basket blew up in his face. Cruz, father of six children, died before he could reach a hospital.

Several weeks later, the mayor of Cavite, Manuel S. Rojas, and his bodyguard-driver, Jaime Yap, were on the way to Manila from Cavite, a town 15 miles south of Manila. Several men in another car overtook them and opened up with automatic weapons fire, killing both men.

Rojas was one of three mayors killed in wide-open Cavite province in February.

Marie Porte, 57, former mayor of Bantay, in northern Luzon, was shopping in a market on Good Friday when someone pumped two. 45-calibre bullets into the back of her head.

Behind much of the violence lies old-fashioned patronage. Election of one man to office means jobs for many followers and often a chance to make good money on the side. Such jobs can be critical in a society where unemployment is in the hundreds of thousands and underemployment in the millions.

Revenge by those suddenly out of well-paying positions, or threatened with being ousted, leads to more violence.

Often, efforts by mayors to clean up their towns by closing down lucrative gambling joints or other illegal operations lead to bloodshed. In Cavite, rivalry for control of smuggling operations is considered a strong factor in political warfare.

RINGING HELMETS have replaced ringing door bells and running for the urchins of Londonderry. British soldiers called out to the sites of bombings and fires have to contend with the taunts and jeers of the children as well as adults, in both the Roman Catholic and Protestant sections of the strife-torn Northern Ireland cities.

O'Connor Fiction Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — National Book Awards were presented Thursday for works including Flannery O'Connor's The Complete Stories, Joseph P. Lash's biographical Eleanor and Franklin and The Last Whole Earth Catalogue.

Winners of the annual awards for the most distinguished books by American authors published during the preceding year were announced by John C. Franz, chief executive of the National Book Committee.

This year the committee added a new category, contemporary affairs, and waived a rule barring books of authors dead more than two years.

Flannery O'Connor, who died in 1964, was the unanimous selection for the 23rd annual fiction award for her stories portraying life in the South.

WINS HISTORY PRIZE

The history prize went to Allan Nevins, the late Columbia University professor, for the two concluding volumes of his eight-volume The War of the Union.

Howard Moss' Selected Poems, and the late Frank O'Hara's Collected Poems shared the poetry award. The judges gave the $1,000 prize that accompanies each award to Moss.

The new contemporary affairs award went to the Last Whole Earth Catalogue, a bankbook for living outside the technological society, despite the earlier resignation of a judge over its nomination.

Gary Wills, author of Nixon Agonistes, said in resigning that the book, compiled by Steward Brand, was exceptional but should not have been considered because of a rule against selecting edited books.

The two remaining judges, Harrison Salisbury, assistant managing editor of The New York Times, and Digby Diehl, book editor of the Los Angeles Times, maintained the book was too important to be dismissed.

King, Poet, Millionaires Flock to See Apollo Off

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (Reuter) — A famous Russian poet, a king, Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, and a Texas millionaire outdone in flamboyance by his own son—those are just a few of the celebrities expected to witness Sunday's launching of the latest moon mission.

The poet is Yevgeny Yevtushenko, once the angry young man of Russian literature, now touring and lecturing at American colleges. He will be the first Soviet citizen ever to officially witness a U.S. spaceshot launching, although Soviet trawlers were in the vicinity during some of the earlier blast-offs.

U.S. space officials say privately that Yevtushenko's presence can only augur well for the future of Soviet-American co-operation in space. The next step may well be an invitation to an American to witness a Soviet launching for the first time.

King Hussein of Jordan also is expected to be in the stands three miles from Launchpad 39A when astronuats John Young, Charles Duke and Thomas Mattingly blast off for the moon at 11:54 a.m. EST Sunday.

Swelling the crowds—predicted at more than one million —will be around 500 persons flown in by Dr. James Maxfield of Dallas and his son, Morgan Maxfield.

CHARTER TWO PLANES

The senior Maxfield will be flying in 130 friends aboard a Boeing 707 to watch the launch. Not to be outdone, his son has chartered a Boeing 747 jumbo jet to fly in about 350 from the Harvard University area.

Meanwhile, all was reported progressing smoothly with the countdown for Apollo 16, which, if everything goes well, will be man's fifth visit to the lunar surface and his first to the mountains of the moon.

The Apollo 16 astronauts plan to spend most of today in spaceship trainers.

Young and Duke, who are to become the ninth and 10th Americans to walk on the moon, will be in the lunar module simulator and Mattingly in the command ship trainer.

This is the last day of training for the crew, which was selected for the mission March 3, 1971.

On Saturday, they'll take the day off in their crew quarters.

The weather outlook for Sunday's launch remained satisfactory, with a forecast of partly cloudy skies, southwest winds of 15 miles an hour and temperature of 80.

N-Power Necessary, Cleaner

REVELSTOKE (CP) — Nuclear energy appears to be the only means of meeting the world's expected requirements for electric power, J. W. T. Spinks, president of the University of Saskatchewan, said Thursday.

He told the Canadian Club a number of countries are already getting short of power and nuclear energy seems to be the only additional source.

Dr. Spinks was delivering the last of four addresses on the subject in the province.

He said despite the expected requirements, nuclear power has failed to gain the general public's approval because of the bad beginning made by atomic energy during the Second World War.

The recent Amchitka nuclear explosion gave "nuclear energy another black eye," he said.

Highway Access Revoked

DUFFERIN (CP) — The provincial highways department has revoked access rights to 17 miles of land fronting the Trans-Canada Highway in this community four miles west of Kamloops.

Frank Blunden, Kamloops highway superintendent, said Thursday the action was "taken in the public interest" but refused to elaborate.

Construction began this spring on the land, which was purchased from the Crown last year for $5,220. Its value now is assessed at $35,000.

Public records show that William Turlock, a Kamloops lawyer, obtained the land from the crown as a lease option five years ago and that the land was transferred to him as a crown grant in December, 1971.

Turlock said he paid the government $5,220 to exercise his option and take over the title.

He said he secured the option on the basis he would develop the land as a campsite within five years. He said the government insisted a campground be in operation before he was given clear title to the property and that the land was used as a camp ground for about two months last summer.

Turlock said the land has been zoned for industrial and commercial development since last year and that "such zoning does not permit the operation of camp grounds."

New Terror Wave Launched by IRA

BELFAST (CP) — About 30 terrorist bomb explosions rocked Northern Ireland Thursday night and today in the worst guerrilla offensive since Britain took over direct control of Ulster exactly three weeks ago.

Few parts of Ulster's six counties escaped blasts during the last 24 hours of bombings that left one civilian dead, eight injured and an estimated $2.6 million in property damage.

The costliest blast damaged a dozen buses in a depot in central Belfast Thursday. The wave of bombings continued through the night and into today.

Security officials blamed the bombings on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

IMPOSE BAN

Security forces reacted to the bombing wave by announcing that as of Monday a large part of Belfast's city centre will be sealed off to all traffic from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The traffic ban is designed to cut down the number of bombs left in parked cars.

Shops and factories in the area were ordered to take deliveries before 11 a.m. The ban runs Monday through Saturday.

Belfast police theorized that IRA had intensified its bombing campaign probably as a result of a new shipment of gelignite. About 1,000 pounds of gelignite were used in the latest blasts, police said.

The casualty toll included one dead woman, whose home was turned into an inferno by a time bomb, and one man, two women, three soldiers and two police officers wounded.

The death list after 32 months of violence stood at 301.

Former prime minister Brian Faulkner claimed the British government "was averting its eyes from IRA aggression."

In his most trenchant blast at London yet, Faulkner declared: "The British government seems determined to give the gunmen and the bombers a free hand."

Faulkner was hitting at British army policy of containing IRA strongholds like Londonderry's Bogside and Creggan districts and the Falls and Ardoyne in Belfast. He wants the troops to pierce the concrete and steel barricades flung round the enclaves and weed the outlaws out.

The army believes the task would need thousands of soldiers and could result in terrible bloodshed. Tens of thousands of Roman Catholic civilians live in the sealed-off areas.

YOUTHS CHARGED

Meanwhile, two teen-age youths were charged today with assaulting a pregnant Belfast mother who was beaten and hounded from her home by a masked gang.

A court ordered William Hanna, 19, and Daniel McCashin, 17, held in custody on charges of causing grievous bodily harm to Philomena McGucken.

Both were arrested by British troops in Belfast early today.

COMMANDEERED TRUCK carries South Vietnamese airborne troops down Route 13 toward An Loc.

DRINK LAW JUNE 1

British Columbia's new get-tough laws for drinking drivers will go into effect June 1.

Amendments to the Motor Vehicle Act passed at the last legislative session will enable the motor vehicle branch to require heavy drinkers with bad driving records to demonstrate they have changed their habits.

The new legislation makes mandatory a one month licence suspension on first conviction for impaired driving and at least six months' suspension on second conviction.

The "at least" provision will allow the branch to hold back a licence for longer periods.

Cong Rockets Blast Saigon

Times News Services

South Vietnamese paratroopers flown into action by helicopter today drove North Vietnamese troops out of An Loc, 60 miles above Saigon, but the Communist offensive rolled on elsewhere and Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airbase came under fire tonight.

Military sources said Communist gunners fired three rockets at Tan Son Nhut on the northwestern outskirts of Saigon but missed the sprawling base itself and killed 11 civilians and wounded four when the explosives hit a market place.

It was the first attack on the Saigon area since the Communists launched their offensive March 30 and the first since last Dec. 20 when a small rocket attack hit inside the city and wounded a number of persons.

With the North Vietnamese offensive in its 16th day, the South Vietnamese command reported a total of 107 Communist attacks across the country between 6 a.m. Thursday and 6 a.m. today. It was the highest number for a 24-hour period since the 1968 Tet offensive, and 60 were rocket and mortar attacks.

Coming from the south, a government armored column of 40 tanks and 20,000 soldiers moving along Route 13 from Saigon to relieve An Loc was stalled again today. The South Vietnamese force has not moved more than about six miles in the last three days.

It has been pounded by constant rocket and mortar fire by northern troops on both sides of the road where it now is halted about 11 miles south of An Loc.

Meanwhile President Nixon has sent a major general on his White House staff to Vietnam to assess the military situation. But Nixon's press officer said the mission did not mean the president has any increased misgivings about the battle.

NIXON, PM TALK TRADE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon agreed today to review their positions in the trade dispute between the countries, with a view to getting the deadlocked discussions started again.

Ron Ziegler, White House press secretary, told reporters after the morning meetings that "the attitude was one of moving toward getting these talks started again."

The prime minister and the president met for an hour and 45 minutes, including a half-hour session with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and William Rogers, U.S. secretary of state.

The president later spent 25 minutes with Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

Addressing a joint sitting of the Canadian Commons and Senate in the crowded green Commons chamber later, Nixon pledged his administration to respect Canada's desire to develop socially and economically in its own way.

He called for a new era in U.S.-Canada relations that spurns "sentimental rhetoric" and recognizes separate identities and significant differences between the two countries.

★ ★ ★

"Let us recognize once and for all that the only basis for a sound and healthy relationship between our two proud peoples is to find a pattern of economic interaction which is beneficial to both our countries — and which respects Canada's right to chart its own economic course."

The visiting U.S. president also urged Canada to support the United States in efforts "to build a permanent post-war era — an era of lasting peace" in co-operation with China and Russia.

During the two-mile motorcade from Government House, where Nixon is staying, to the parliament complex, small groups of Ottawa residents turned out in curiosity to see the American president whiz by. One city bus driver was seen saluting.

Nixon's appearance was marked by unprecedented security in Ottawa. He walked through a line of scarlet-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police after departing from his limousine on the hill.

The only disruptive incident occurred behind the crowd barriers as Nixon left his limousine to enter the Parliament buildings. A young protester was hauled back by plainclothes RCMP officers when he began yelling, "Pig, pig," in the president's direction.

NEWS BRIEFS

4 Assassinated

MONTEVIDEO (UPI) — Terrorists assassinated four persons in three synchronized attacks this morning, only 48 hours after 15 left-wing Tupamaro guerrillas escaped from a maximum security prison. One of those killed was former vice-minister of the interior, Armando Acosta Y Lara, 54, who was shot as he left his home by gunmen in a moving car.

Ships Collide

DUISBURG, Germany (UPI) — A Dutch motor barge collided with a German tanker on the lower Rhine River today spilling the tanker's 21,000 gallons of gasoline into the water, police said.

Students Protest

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — About 900 students, half the enrolment at Dawson Creek's three public high schools, walked out of class today to stage a protest demonstration in support of private school teachers who have been denied busing privileges.

U.K. Trade Deficit

LONDON (AP) — Britian showed a deficit of $208 million in its trade with the rest of the world in March, the government announced today. It was the second large monthly deficit in a row after a year of nearly unbroken trade surpluses.

Avalanche Buries Climbers

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Fifteen Asian climbers have been killed in the worst tragedy in the history of Himalayan exploration.

Four South Koreans, a Japanese cameraman and 10 Napalese Sherpa guides were buried Monday by an avalanche that crashed down on the camp of a South Korean expedition attempting to scale 26,752-foot Mount Manasiu, the world's eighth-tallest peak.

Seven Koreans and two Sherpas survived.

The expedition leader, Jung Jung Sup Kim, was lifted from a glacier by helicopter and flown back to Katmandu along with Hae Yun Byong, a 33-year-old Korean newspaper man in the party, and one of Kim's brothers who was critically injured in the avalanche.

'UN Threatened'

HARRIMAN, N.Y. (UPI) — Arthur Goldberg warns that relations between the United States and the United Nations are so strained that the survival of the world organization is threatened.

"Never, since its creation in 1945, has the United Nations been so downgraded as an important component of American policy as it is today under the present administration," the former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said Thursday.

Strikers Parade Before Bourassa

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Thousands of striking civil servants demonstrated for more than an hour today outside the nation assembly buildings in Quebec City, while staff shortages in provincial hospitals posed "a threat to life."

The demonstrating civil servants met outside the building where Premier Robert Bourassa has been staying since the four-day strike started and then moved on to the streets, parking cars across roadways under the eyes of police.

Police said the demonstration was orderly.

The Quebec government described the situation in the hospitals as "serious but not critical" and leaders of the three common front unions which called the walkout said their members would provide essential services.

But Dr. Edouard Henri Letellier, medical director at Charles Lemoyne Hospital in suburban Montreal, said the situation there had deteriorated to the point where it posed "a threat to life." In declaring a state of emergency he cited the rapid drain of such vital supplies as food and the fatigue of those employees still on the job.

The indefinite strike, which followed a 24-hour walkout March 28, has also shut down government offices, hundreds of schools, licence bureaus, courts, highway maintenance, liquor outlets and tax bureaus.

In Toronto, secret negotiations were reported continuing today to end that city's five-day-old civic strike which has resulted in rotting garbage in plastic bags piling up in Toronto parks.

The walkout by 4,000 civic outside workers has halted garbage collection in the city and the boroughs of York and East York since Monday. On Thursday the borough of Scarborough after an emergency council meeting also halted garbage pickups. By Monday collection in North York and Etobicoke may be reduced to once a week.

The behind-the-scenes negotiation were said to be conducted by independent sources trusted by both Local 43 and the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Metro-city bargaining team.

'Nuclear Talks' Stir Japanese

TOKYO (WP) — Despite categorical American denials, opposition charges that the U.S. Navy is secretly negotiating with Japan to establish a "bilateral nuclear force" provoked a national uproar Thursday after Socialist leaders unveiled an alleged Navy cablegram in the Diet (Parliament).

Socialist deputy Yanosuxe Narasaka confronted Prime Minister Eisaku Sato with a copy of a purported secret message from the secretary of the navy to the commander of U.S. naval forces in Japan, urging that negotiations for a bilateral force be pressed "as one of the measures in the prevention of nuclear blackmail by a third power."

Dated Jan. 5, 1972, the alleged document cites "China's efforts to increase her nuclear power and the strengthened naval presence of the Soviet Union in the Pacific" as the key arguments for the proposed force, adding that "with the reduction of the American military in Japan, the importance of mobile and nuclear forces has increased."

An American embassy statement promptly dismissed the cable as "faked." Declaring that "no such message was either sent or received," the embassy said that "there has been no discussion with the government of Japan of any kind, preliminary or otherwise, concerning any kind of military or naval co-operation involving U.S. nuclear weapons."

The socialist charges acquired an aura of ready credibility with the public against the background of Defence Secretary Melvin Laird's controversial visit here last July and the recent appearance of an article in a government-subsidized journal paralleling the purported U.S. plan.

'Toil of Poor' Pays for U.S. Affluence

SANTIAGO (WP) — Chilean President Salvador Allende opened the third U.N. Conference on Trade and Development Thursday with an impassioned denunciation of industrial states for creating a world where "the toil and resources of the poorer nations pay for prosperity of the affluent peoples."

Before 1,500 delegates from 141 nations, Allende singled out the United States, international corporations and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as flagrant perpetrators of "unfair international division of labor, based on a dehumanized concept of mankind."

Playing host to UNCTAD, as the five-week conference is known, Allende offered numerous local examples to document his indictment of the developed world:

"Experience, often a hard taskmaster, has taught us that in order to meet our people's needs and provide each one with the means of full self-realization, it was essential to leave behind the capitalist regime of dependence and forge ahead along a new road, the socialism we are starting to build."

Despite the tough-talking Marxist's picture of a world in which the greedy maintain rigid control, Allende concluded his 70-minute speech by suggesting that over all, conditions are favorable for a new economic order.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim then spoke briefly in what seemed to be an effort at softening the criticisms of the industrial states, whose co-operation is needed if the conference is to achieve its objective of aiding more balanced development.

Allende's only conciliatory move was to avoid in most cases specifically naming the United States in his attacks, though the target was obvious to all.

Said Allende: "This economic, financial and trade order, as prejudicial to the third world as it is so beneficial for the affluent countries, is defended by most of these with bulldog tenacity — through their economic might, through their cultural influence, and, on some occasions, and by some powers, through almost irresistible forms of pressure, through armed interventions which violate all the commitments assumed in the charter of the United Nations."

Later he enumerated U.S. military interventions over the years in this hemisphere and specified economic pressures mounted against Peru and Chile to protect American interests.

As for the international corporations, he said: "They have their own objectives, their own trade policies, their own shipping policies . . . a world of their own."

Allende noted "the plundering indulged in by these consortia, and their powerful corruptive influence on public institutions in rich and poor countries alike," and suggested they were a burden on U.S. taxpayers.

Salmon Hatchery Program Is Beginning to Blossom

Salmon catches for both sports and commercial fishermen are bound to improve as a result of a long-range hatchery program envisioned by the federal fisheries department.

Scope of the program was outlined earlier this week at a meeting between the amalgamated Conservation Society and a four-man delegation from the department: Dick Crouter (manager, southern operations branch), Ian Todd (chief of Fraser River, Johnstone Strait and Juan de Fuca Strait districts), Bob Humphries (herring biologist) and Harry Grainger (Victoria-area inspector).

Basically, the system, which still required funding from Ottawa for its latter stages, will consist of six hatcheries with an initial annual production target of one million adult coho and 300,000 adult springs.

Eventually this production will expand to four million adult coho each year.

"In a matter of time we'll develop fish that will stay inside the Gulf of Georgia," said Crouter.

The department also expects to produce steelhead smolts "for the stream that the hatchery is located on."

Another facet of the program involves the production of coho fry for release in waters above natural obstructions where there are presently no salmon. These waters, which are now barren, will provide the vital coho rearing areas while "natural impoundments such as sloughs and lakes can be used for rearing springs."

Like the recently-announced Washington State hatchery program for Puget Sound, Crouter stated that "we also will have the capability of releasing grilse-sized fish into areas that need it."

The first hatchery of the system, located on the Capilano, is expected to attract from 200,000 to 400,000 visitors this year.

★ ★ ★

Cold Creek, a tributary of the Quinsam River near Campbell River, has been chosen as the site of the second hatchery, now in the final design stage. Actual construction is expected to begin as early as Sept 1 — which would place the completion date around February, 1974.

This $4 million facility is destined to produce approximately $1.25 million worth of salmon annually for both sports and commercial fishermen. It's yearly operating cost is expected to run in the neighbourhood of $250,000 to $300,000.

Other streams under consideration for hatchery sites include the Vedder and Cheakemus on the mainland as well as Koksilah and Cowichan on southern Vancouver Island.

Other points brought out by federal officials at the meeting:

- There will be no change in the Juan de Fuca sport-fishing preserve "this year."
- The department is building two rearing ponds adjacent to the Puntledge River spawning channel to help bring back the fall runs of spring salmon that once provided a mainstay for fishing in Comox Harbour.
- A "pitch in conjunction with the provincial fish and wildlife branch" has been made to MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. in connection with habitat protection on the White River.
- Interest is still high in developing a commercial fishery for the German market" before giving up . . . Transportation costs are high and government subsidies would have to be made available . . . One Strike, Two Losers Before the Opening Pitch

By The Associated Press

A shortened baseball season will finally get under way 11 days late Saturday, but before the first pitch is thrown the sport has two losers and a count of one strike.

The first general walkout in the history of the major leagues ended Thursday on two fronts — in Chicago, where baseball club owners voted to pick up the season beginning Saturday and cancel all games called off by the strike, and in New York, where the player representatives agreed.

The pennant races thus will be decided on a percentage basis, since not all teams will play the same number of games. Technically, the races always are decided on percentage, but games affecting the final standings usually are made up.

In the American League East, Baltimore Orioles have 154 games remaining, Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees 155 and Cleveland Indians, Detroit Tigers and Milwaukee Brewers 156. In the American League West, Chicago White Sox, Kansas City Royals, Minnesota Twins and Texas Rangers will play 154 games, California Angels and Oakland Athletics 155.

Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East show 155 games left while Montreal Expos, New York Mets, Philadelphia Phillies and St. Louis Cardinals have 156. In the National League West, Houston Astros and San Diego Padres have 153, Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds 154 and Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants 155.

ALL LOSE HOME GAMES

All 24 teams will lose at least one home game.

The only dispute still remaining — until the year-end negotiations between players and owners on a new basic agreement — involves Kansas City and Chicago in the American League West. Ewing Kauffman, owner of the Royals, says he will protest any games his club has to play against Chicago this weekend because the White Sox disregarded a league directive and allowed their players to work out in White Sox Park during the strike.

Saturday's opening-day schedule looks like this:

American League—Minnesota at Oakland, Texas at California (night), Chicago at Kansas City, Boston at Detroit, Milwaukee at Cleveland, New York at Baltimore.

National League—Pittsburgh at New York, Montreal at St. Louis, Philadelphia at Chicago, Los Angeles at Cincinnati, San Francisco at Houston (night), Atlanta at San Diego (night).

The players went on strike April 1 in a dispute with the owners over the amount of money owners would contribute to the players' pension plan. That wiped out the last four days of spring training and the walkout continued into the regular season, scheduled to start April 5. Today would have been the 10th day of the campaign.

PLAYERS LOSE PAY

Finally, the owners decided to start the season Saturday. Since the players are paid on the basis of a 182-day campaign rather than a 162-game season, they will each lose 10-182nds of their salary. For those earning the $13,500 minimum, it will amount to $740. For those at the major league average of $32,500, it's $1,780. For Hank Aaron, who pulls down a record $200,000 a year, it comes to a loss of $10,980.

The owners were losers, too. Some estimates place the loss at $5 million, including gate receipts, parking concessions and one cancelled television game.

Victoria Soccer Clubs Shoot for High Stakes

Money and glory will be on the table Sunday at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Triumph for Victoria West-United would give Wests the Pacific Coast Soccer League crown and $750 prize that accompanies it.

Victory for Victoria Gorge Molsons would slip them into the fourth and final playoff spot. That's worth $150.

Post-season play could mean even more cash. Playoff winner grabs $325 and the runner-up is awarded $200.

United winds up its league schedule at 1 p.m. with a match being made up against Firefighters, who earlier claimed victory by default when the Victorians failed to show up because of a scheduling mixup.

United trails first place Paul's by one point so a Sunday tie would leave the two clubs tied for first place, forcing a sudden-death playoff.

Gorge faces New Westminster Blues in a special playoff for the fourth place at 8 p.m. Both teams split a pair of one-goal decisions during the season and if it gets any closer Sunday they'll play 30-minutes of overtime.

If the teams are still deadlocked the game will be decided on penalty goals.

Gorge is healthy but United has centre-half Jim Irving listed as a doubtful starter with an injured knee. Peter Robarts will fill in if Irvine isn't ready.

United will catch the 9 a.m. ferry Sunday and fans wanting to make the trip should contact Gil O'Malley at 382-0553.

Castaways, Saxons Chase Provincial Rugby Crowns

Provincial rugby champions will be declared Saturday as Vancouver Island and Mainland champions clash at Macdonald Park.

Castaways tangle with Vancouver Meralomas in the feature game at 2:30 p.m. for the B.C. first division championship and Rounsfell Cup.

Castaways beat out last year's B.C. champs, University of Victoria Vikings, for the first half crown in the Victoria Union, then downed James Bay Athletic Association 18-13 last weekend for the Barnard Cup.

UVic Saxons meet Vancouver Red Lion at 1 p.m. for the second division crown and Province Cup. Saxons, second half winner of the Victoria Union, stopped Nanaimo 22-11 in the league final to win the Times Trophy.

Although the championship will be decided Saturday, there will be more rugby action for Victoria fans.

VISITING TEAMS

Two international clubs will play Victoria Union clubs in May at Centennial Stadium and Royal Athletic Park.

Limerick Bohemians of Ireland meet Oak Bay Wanderers on Thursday, May 18. Two days later Bridgend of Wales play Victoria Union champion Castaways.

Union officials hope Bridgend, the Welsh champions, will field two teams in a special seven-a-side tournament at St. Michael's University Schol Monday, May 22.

Bridgend, which has national sprint champion John Williams on its roster, concludes its Victoria visit taking on James Bay Athletic Association under the lights at Royal Athletic Park, Wednesday, May 24.

Wanderers are in Portland Oregon, to play Peninsula Ramblers of San Francisco, Saturday in their first game of the Portland Invitational Tournament.

The B.C. Rugby Union is holding its first full-scale meeting in Victoria tonight.

In their world, we're No.1

Among fishermen, no other outboard outsells ours. Maybe that's because no other fishing outboard outperforms ours.

Take our 9½. We made it whisper quiet because you'd rather hear the sound of the outdoors than the outboard. We gave it a stylish, low silhouette so you can fish over it, not around it. We added an automatic trolling adjustment, so you can concentrate on fishing, instead of navigating. And we built in 8 separate tilt-out positions so that your outboard can take you everywhere the fish go, including the weeds and shallows.

If you take your fishing seriously, you'll appreciate what we've put into the 9½. And with speeds up to 20 mph., you'll get a lot of fun out of it too!

The Evinrude 9½ is just one of the outboards in the world's No. 1 fishing line. See it along with our 2, 4, 6 and 18 hp. models at your Evinrude dealer's.

How to Love the Mafia —A Slick, Sick Film

Now that the final verdict is in, indicating that 99 out of every 100 film critics in the United States and Canada have unstintingly praised The Godfather ("The Italian-American Gone With the Wind": Time Magazine) I should like to murmur a small dissenting opinion.

It is a slick, sick, sprawling motion picture, in my opinion, made callously, calculatingly to cash in on the current cinema-goers' insatiable appetite for violence, just as Mario Puzo's dreadful book was hand-tooled for the same unwholesome market.

The only other dissenting critic I've read calls it "lust theatre — blood, genital and mawkish lust." That is exactly what it is.

It would hardly be surprising, now, in view of the tornado of praise, and box-office line-ups, if the producers didn't have in mind a sequel to be called "The Godmother." This could be the real-life story of Elsa Koch, known as the Bitch of Belsen, fondly remembered as possessor of the only lamp-shade ever made of human skin.

★ ★ ★

Just as The Godfather explicitly, lovingly depicts in Technicolor gore a succession of close-up murders, so The Godmother would show us, in full, glorious color, a succession of explicit scenes showing how six million Jews were consigned to the gas ovens.

Again, as in The Godfather, there could be the paralleling story of The Godmother, Elsa Koch, to show that she was a real, live human being with warmth and heart, playing with her adorable children (each with their own little human-skin lamp-shades, perhaps), and cooking pig's knuckles and apple strudel in the kitchen, a Nazi Ma Perkins.

The notion is certainly no more preposterous than the cynical, perverse premise upon which The Godfather is built, a premise that, astonishingly, has been so accepted by critic and public that the film and its star, Marlon Brando, are already considered shoo-ins for the next Academy awards.

The film asks us to accept the proposition that the Corleone family possesses admirable qualities of loyalty, affection, sentimentality, even, in the case of Don Corleone, a genuine dignity.

★ ★ ★

It asks us to accept that the fictional Corleones lived to a dynastic code that was somehow a private, tightly-knit inter-familial affair, that the Mafia was truly folksy, worthy of sympathy, admiration, even pity.

It asks us to accept that its effect upon society was largely internecine, that murder was merely a matter of a competitive businessman's solution to a problem, that they were motivated by a concept of morality that, for example, distinguished "nice" gambling from "dirty" drug-pushing.

Such is the impact of film and, in this case, a brilliant film technically, overpoweringly authentic in its reconstruction of an era, that it's hard to resist the invitation to feel involved in an entirely contrived story. The Godfather's death in the sunlit garden is played for pathos. The denouement of his son's inheritance of the dynasty, though he has just master-minded a blood-bath, becomes a happy ending. In short, we have been theatrically brain-washed to an acceptance of the absurd.

The point is well made by Robert Hatch in his review in The Nation, the single commentary on the picture that recognizes its exploitive, hypocritical theme.

"The success of The Godfather is deplorable," he writes, "if you believe that popular entertainment both reflects and modifies social morale. In a sentence, the picture forces you to take sides, to form allegiances, in a situation that is totally without moral substance. It chilled me to hear an audience roar its approval when a young gangster on 'our' side blew the brains out of two gangsters on 'their' side. The ethical problem is to choose between typhus and cholera and I found that flogging about for three hours in that quagmire was spiritually debilitating and a crazy waste of time."

In my view the device of sentimentally humanizing the Corleone family can only have been conceived for its shock effect, contrapuntal to the scenes of sadistic violence, and while that may be an effective theatrical mechanism it is also an abuse of the responsibility and integrity involved in any film that pretends to social significance.

Any reading of any history of the Mafia confirms, if it needed to be confirmed, that these men were and are mad dogs, the jackals of society, sordid merchants of vice through corruption and terror. Their violence was no mere vendetta of one family against another, but a savage, mindless violence that shadowed the lives of countless thousands of innocent citizens. They were and are murderers, pimps and drug-pushers. They were and are beneath contempt.

The Godfather, purely in the interests of box office receipts, rationalizes, forgives and apologizes for these animals. It lacks even the guts to identify them as the Mafia. It glorifies an evil every bit as sickening as Belsen.

CBRT in 'Bad Mood'

Slam Teamsters Over Pickets

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

A long-simmering dispute between two trucking unions broke into the open today over the three-week strike at Butler-Lafarge Ltd.

Joseph Simpson, a staff representative of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, said the striking International Brotherhood of Teamsters should not be picketing the company's Duncan operation because "I don't see the need for it."

★ ★ ★

He said eight to 10 CBRT members at Duncan have been left without income although not directly involved in the strike. The Teamsters Union has been picketing Victoria and Nanaimo operations, where it has members and also in Duncan where CBRT members have refused to cross picket lines.

"It is a terrible situation ofr our people," Simpson said in an interview.

"They have no quarrel with the company, it is not a bread and butter issue but we understand over restrictive clauses, and we do not feel that operation (Duncan) could affect Victoria or Nanaimo.

"So they are in a pretty bad mood about it all."

The Teamsters Union Local 213 is striking to have Butler-Lafarge sign the standard industry agreement. Wages are not an issue but there are 26 items in which there is a difference between the two sides.

These items include clauses which would permit drivers to refuse to make deliveries to "unfair" job sites and to restrict sub-contracting of work to only Teamster-organized companies.

Frank Peters, business agent for Teamsters Union Local 213, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Simpson said his union's position on restrictive clauses is that the B.C. Labor Relations Board decides whether certification is to be granted for bargaining rights.

"No one should be allowed to come along and say you are not recognized in that field and you can't operate," he said.

The CBRT and the Teamsters have been at odds for a number of years in the transportation and trucking fields.

★ ★ ★

The recently-dropped Bill 88 arose from difficulties over access to building sites, which the Teamsters Union claims is its exclusive jurisdiction.

There have been no negotiations since the strike started March 27. The union has said it is ready for talks and the company has said it is willing to negotiate — provided the union withdraws its restrictive clauses proposals.

'STAY COOL'

Capital Regional District chairman Hugh Curtis appealed today for "calm and cool heads" in what appeared to him could be a repeat of the 1970 labor-management difficulties in British Columbia.

He added that his remarks are not directed more to one side or the other "but I do urge responsible people in labor and management to avoid the very difficult situation that happened so recently."

During 1970, time loss from strikes and lock-outs hit a record 1.6 million working days. The same major contracts which were negotiated in 1970 are up for renegotiation this year.

"We all have the records and memories of the summer of 1970 and the impact on the community and its total well being. And we have just recently pulled ourselves out of the pit and it would be so unfortunate to see the whole thing happen again," he said.

SHROUDED SEATS and long-necked crane lend a strange, slightly surrealist perspective to Memorial Arena, as a workman in his lofty basket sprays insulation on the arched roof. Previous attempts to get insulation to stay on the roof have failed, but now the 23-year-old problem may be over. New technique involves spraying a cellulose-based acoustic and thermal insulation on to the underside of the concrete, where it adheres to a liquid cement sprayed at the same time.

Hospitals Near 'Breaking Point'

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark cited Victoria's two general hospitals as models of efficiency and service Tuesday but both hospital directors said today the economic pinch is threatening patient care.

Loffmark named both Queen Victoria and Royal Jubilee as well as Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster as examples of hospitals with operating surpluses last year still able to deliver good patient care.

All three immediately responded that budget cutbacks have pushed their staffs to the limit.

"I don't think we can do more than we have," said Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, executive director at Queen Victoria, on the matter of further economies.

Nurses are so hard-pressed they no longer have time to teach patients how to live with their troubles, he said. And that is an important part of care.

"We're managing but we'd like to do better." All the niceties have been stripped from hospital care.

Queen Victoria, formerly St. Joseph's, finished last year with an operating surplus of about $6,000 from a budget of $8 million. Jubilee's surplus was about $50,000 on an operating budget of $13 million.

Only additional effort and "damn hard work" by hospital staff and doctors enabled Jubilee to maintain the quality of patient care in the face of government economies, said Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director.

"Now how long can you go on with people working harder and harder? I think there's a point of diminishing returns, when people get too tired or sick, and I think we're near that point.

"There's a point you can't push people beyond."

Dr. R. G. Foulkes, executive director at Royal Columbian, said he has been short of staff since a wage settlement for hospital employees in 1969. At that time the province forced cutbacks by telling hospitals it would only provide funds to meet 70 per cent of the wage increases.

Currently the hospitals are worried about what setlement will come out of a contract dispute before the Mediation Commission.

Hospital employees are pushing for a 12.5 per cent increase but the province has said it will not share in wage increases beyond 6.5 per cent.

Pollen Sure Ratepayers Would Approve Pay Hike

A pay increase for Victoria city council appears certain, following an eight-to-one vote Thursday supporting the move.

The increase called for is 6.5 per cent of the present salaries, which for aldermen amounts to less than $20 a month. The present aldermanic pay is $3,600.

The mayor's pay is $15,000 a year so his raise will amount to $975.

Council passed a motion that will produce a bylaw for consideration at council's next meeting in two weeks.

Some members of council expressed annoyance that the provincial government placed the 6.5 per cent limit on raises.

Mayor Peter Pollen said it was "ridiculous" that elected representatives were unable to set the limits and justly their pay rates to their voters.

"I'm sure the citizens would approve," he said, if Victoria aldermen got deserved raises.

Pollen even suggested that another pay increase be put to referendum ballot at next December's municipal elections.

Ald. Percy Frampton, who had earlier hesitated to endorse the 6.5 per cent increase, said his hesitation was because of the provincial government's intrusion.

Only Ald. Harold Olafson put his hand up to oppose the motion, but he made no comments to support his stand.

Nicholson Won't Act On Professors' Appeal

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson has decided not to act on an appeal by two dismissed University of Victoria professors that he, in his capacity as Visitor of the university, investigate their cases.

The professors involved are William Goede and J. P. Graff, whose contracts with UVic were not renewed last June 30. Goede formerly taught in the English department and Graff in philosophy.

The two appealed to Nicholson last year. Nicholson said then he would not act on it until a three-man advisory board considering their cases made its recommendations to the board of governors.

The advisory board held hearings in June and July but recommended no change in the administration's decision to dismiss Goede and Graff, along with a third professor, Tikam Jain of the chemistry department.

In a letter to Goede and Graff's lawyer dated March 21, Nicholson's solicitor says the lieutenant-governor was "so unconvinced" that he has the jurisdiction to act on the matter that he will not act on it until he is directed to by a proper court of law in B.C.

Although the position of "visitor" is largely ceremonial and honorary, the Universities Act makes mention of the role of the visitor as having "authority to do all those acts which pertain to visitors."

A Webster's dictionary definition of "visitor" is "one who visits officially for the purpose of inspection or supervision, in order to prevent or remove abuses or irregularities."

ONE-YEAR IN JAIL FOR HEROIN USER

A 28-year-old heroin user was sentenced to one year in prison today after Judge William Ostler ruled deterrence must be a prime consideration in sentence.

David George Williams, of 1710 Denman, was arrested at home Jan. 25 after he had just injected the drug. Sixteen caps of heroin were found in a balloon in the man's possession.

Ostler imposed the one-year term despite a pre-sentence report by a probation officer which suggested a fine would be adequate punishment because of improvements in the accused's outlook.

Williams had a criminal record including a two-year sentence for armed robbery in 1969.

Dr. Douglas Sparling will lead member of Victoria Natural History Society on a birding field trip to Francis Park on Saturday, April 15. Meet at the Oak and Roderick corner of the Mayfair Lanes parking lot at 9:30 a.m. and bring a lunch. The public is welcome.

SURPRISE!

After Shock of Sympathetic Ear Wears Off, Job-Hunter Lets Go

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A new approach to job-hunting is being greeted with some surprise by jobless at the local unemployment insurance office.

The chief reaction of those responding to the Clients Assistance Program is "surprise that someone is willing to sit down and listen with understanding," said interviewer Norman C. Hopper, one of three attached to the Victoria UIC office.

Since the program was set up last fall with revision of the Unemployment Insurance Act, letters have gone to all persons who have been getting unemployment benefits for five or six weeks.

The letters invite people, on a voluntary basis, to appear for an interview which they are assured will be confidential, not reported to any other government department or office and has no strings attached.

So far in the program about half of those who have received invitations have accepted the chance to talk over their problems. Last month 61 per cent of recipients went for interviews.

People that long out of a job — many for the first time in their lives — are beginning to really worry.

Often the problem lies in the fact that because they are emotionally upset they can't organize their job hunt, CAP points out.

If they don't know what a resume is — a capsule presentation of a man's capabilities and experience — CAP will help him draft one and make Xerox copies for him if that is what he needs.

CAP also can put him in touch with other agencies for which he may qualify for help, such as social welfare, DVA, John Howard Society.

The program was initiated in the east on a pilot basis and has spread to larger centres.

Hopper said there may be some misunderstanding of CAP, that it du;licates a Manpower role.

"Manpower is merely a training and placement agency; this is a self-help thing, the human side of UIC," he said.

About 20 interviews a day are handled by the office here, each interview lasting about 45 minutes.

When the first shock of having a sympathetic listener passes, the individual then "pours out" his problems, Hopper said. It is a novel experience for those used to dealing with bureaucracy.

Although the people involved may be very sophisticated, perhaps well educated, they are upset because of their situation and "can't organize themselves to sell themselves in the labor market. It's a kind of self-analysis we help them with," Hopper said.

Bram Kitson, chief of claimant assistance, is head of CAP, whose other interviewers are Mary Brizan (an MA in counselling), and Albert Canning, who is an ex-teacher. Hopper is a UVic graduate in education with a counselling major.

New Terror Wave Launched by IRA

COMMANDEERED TRUCK carries South Vietnamese airborne troops down Route 13 toward An Loc.

BELFAST (CP) — About 30 terrorist bomb explosions rocked Northern Ireland Thursday night and today in the worst guerrilla offensive since Britain took over direct control of Ulster exactly three weeks ago.

Few parts of Ulster's six counties escaped blasts during the last 24 hours of bombings that left one civilian dead, eight injured and an estimated $2.6 million in property damage.

The costliest blast damaged a dozen buses in a depot in central Belfast Thursday. The wave of bombings continued through the night and into today.

Security officials blamed the bombings on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

IMPOSE BAN

Security forces reacted to the bombing wave by announcing that as of Monday a large part of Belfast's city centre will be sealed off to all traffic from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The traffic ban is designed to cut down the number of bombs left in parked cars.

Shops and factories in the area were ordered to take deliveries before 11 a.m. The ban runs Monday through Saturday.

Belfast police theorized that IRA had intensified its bombing campaign probably as a result of a new shipment of gelignite. About 1,000 pounds of gelignite were used in the latest blasts, police said.

The casualty toll included one dead woman, whose home was turned into an inferno by a time bomb, and one man, two women, three soldiers and two police officers wounded.

The death list after 32 months of violence stood at 301.

Former prime minister Brian Faulkner claimed the British government was averting its eyes from IRA aggression.

In his most trenchant blast at London yet, Faulkner declared: "The British government seems determined to give the gunmen and the bombers a free hand."

Faulkner was hitting at British army policy of containing IRA strongholds like Londonderry's Bogside and Creggan districts and the Falls and Ardoyne in Belfast. He wants the troops to pierce the concrete and steel barricades flung round the enclaves and weed the outlaws out.

The army believes the task would need thousands of soldiers and could result in terrible bloodshed. Tens of thousands of Roman Catholic civilians live in the sealed-off areas.

YOUTHS CHARGED

Meanwhile, two teen-age youths were charged today with assaulting a pregnant Belfast mother who was beaten and bounded from her home by a masked gang.

A court ordered William Hanna, 19, and Daniel McCashin, 17, held in custody on charges of causing grievous bodily harm to Philomena McGucken.

Both were arrested by British troops in Belfast early today.

DRINK LAW JUNE 1

British Columbia's new get-tough laws for drinking drivers will go into effect June 1.

Amendments to the Motor Vehicle Act passed at the last legislative session will enable the motor vehicle branch to require heavy drinkers with bad driving records to demonstrate they have changed their habits.

The new legislation makes mandatory a one month licence suspension on first conviction for impaired driving and at least six months' suspension on second conviction.

The "at least" provision will allow the branch to hold back a licence for longer periods.

Cong Rockets Blast Saigon

Times News Services

South Vietnamese paratroopers flown into action by helicopter today drove North Vietnamese troops out of An Loc, 60 miles above Saigon, but the Communist offensive rolled on elsewhere and Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airbase came under fire tonight.

Military sources said Communist gunners fired three rockets at Tan Son Nhut on the northwestern outskirts of Saigon but missed the sprawling base itself and killed 11 civilians and wounded four when the explosives hit a market place.

It was the first attack on the Saigon area since the Communists launched their offensive March 30 and the first since last Dec. 20 when a small rocket attack hit inside the city and wounded a number of persons.

With the North Vietnamese offensive in its 16th day, the South Vietnamese command reported a total of 107 Communist attacks across the country between 6 a.m. Thursday and 6 a.m. today. It was the highest number for a 24-hour period since the 1968 Tet offensive, and 60 were rocket and mortar attacks.

Coming from the south, a government armored column of 40 tanks and 20,000 soldiers moving along Route 13 from Saigon to relieve An Loc was stalled again today. The South Vietnamese force has not moved more than about six miles in the last three days.

It has been pounded by constant rocket and mortar fire by northern troops on both sides of the road where it now is halted about 11 miles south of An Loc.

Meanwhile President Nixon has sent a major general on his White House staff to Vietnam to assess the military situation. But Nixon's press officer said the mission did not mean the president has any increased misgivings about the battle.

NIXON, PM TALK TRADE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon agreed today to review their positions in the trade dispute between the countries, with a view to getting the deadlocked discussions started again.

Ron Ziegler, White House press secretary, told reporters after the morning meetings that "the attitude was one of moving toward getting these talks started again."

The prime minister and the president met for an hour and 45 minutes, including a half-hour session with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and William Rogers, U.S. secretary of state.

The president later spent 25 minutes with Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

Addressing a joint sitting of the Canadian Commons and Senate in the crowded green Commons chamber later, Nixon pledged his administration to respect Canada's desire to develop socially and economically in its own way.

He called for a new era in U.S.-Canada relations that spurns "sentimental rhetoric" and recognizes separate identities and significant differences between the two countries.

★ ★ ★

"Let us recognize once and for all that the only basis for a sound and healthy relationship between our two proud peoples is to find a pattern of economic interaction which is beneficial to both our countries — and which respects Canada's right to chart its own economic course."

The visiting U.S. president also urged Canada to support the United States in efforts "to build a permanent post-war era — an era of lasting peace" in co-operation with China and Russia.

During the two-mile motorcade from Government House, where Nixon is staying, to the parliament complex, small groups of Ottawa residents turned out in curiosity to see the American president whiz by. One city bus driver was seen saluting.

Nixon's appearance was marked by unprecedented security in Ottawa. He walked through a line of scarlet-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police after departing from his limousine on the hill.

The only disruptive incident occurred behind the crowd barriers as Nixon left his limousine to enter the Parliament buildings. A young protester was hauled back by plainclothes RCMP officers when he began yelling, "Pig, pig," in the president's direction.

Avalanche Buries Climbers

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Fifteen Asian climbers have been killed in the worst tragedy in the history of Himalayan exploration.

Four South Koreans, a Japanese cameraman and 10 Napalese Sherpa guides were buried Monday by an avalanche that crashed down on the camp of a South Korean expedition attempting to scale 26,752-foot Mount Manaslu, the world's eighth-tallest peak.

Seven Koreans and two Sherpas survived.

The expedition leader, Jung Jung Sup Kim, was lifted from a glacier by helicopter and flown back to Katmandu along with Hae Yun Byong, a 33-year-old Korean newspaper man in the party, and one of Kim's brothers who was critically injured in the avalanche.

'UN Threatened'

HARRIMAN, N.Y. (UPI) — Arthur Goldberg warns that relations between the United States and the United Nations are so strained that the survival of the world organization is threatened.

"Never, since its creation in 1945, has the United Nations been so downgraded as an important component of American policy as it is today under the present administration," the former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said Thursday.

Strikers Parade Before Bourassa

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Thousands of striking civil servants demonstrated for more than an hour today outside the national assembly buildings in Quebec City, while staff shortages in provincial hospitals posed "a threat to life."

The demonstrating civil servants met outside the building where Premier Robert Bourassa has been staying since the four-day strike started and then moved on to the streets, parking cars across roadways under the eyes of police.

Police said the demonstration was orderly.

The Quebec government described the situation in the hospitals as "serious but not critical" and leaders of the three common front unions which called the walkout said their members would provide essential services.

But Dr. Edouard Henri Letellier, medical director at Charles Lemoyne Hospital in suburban Montreal, said the situation there had deteriorated to the point where it posed "a threat to life." In declaring a state of emergency he cited the rapid drain of such vital supplies as food and the fatigue of those employees still on the job.

The indefinite strike, which followed a 24-hour walkout March 28, has also shut down government offices, hundreds of schools, licence bureaus, courts, highway maintenance, liquor outlets and tax bureaus.

In Toronto, secret negotiations were reported continuing today to end that city's five-day-old civic strike which has resulted in rotting garbage in plastic bags piling up in Toronto parks.

The walkout by 4,000 civic outside workers has halted garbage collection in the city and the boroughs of York and East York since Monday. On Thursday the borough of Scarborough, after an emergency council meeting also halted garbage pickups. By Monday collection in North York and Etobicoke may be reduced to once a week.

The behind-the-scenes negotiations were said to be conducted by independent sources trusted by both Local 43 and the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Metro-city bargaining team.

'Nuclear Talks' Stir Japanese

TOKYO (WP) — Despite categorical American denials, opposition charges that the U.S. Navy is secretly negotiating with Japan to establish a "bilateral nuclear force" provoked a national uproar Thursday after Socialist leaders unveiled an alleged Navy cablegram in the Diet (Parliament).

Socialist deputy Yanosuxe Narasaka confronted Prime Minister Eisaku Sato with a copy of a purported secret message from the secretary of the navy to the commander of U.S. naval forces in Japan, urging that negotiations for a bilateral force be pressed "as one of the measures in the prevention of nuclear blackmail by a third power."

Dated Jan. 5, 1972, the alleged document cites "China's efforts to increase her nuclear power and the strengthened naval presence of the Soviet Union in the Pacific" as the key arguments for the proposed force, adding that "with the reduction of the American military in Japan, the importance of mobile and nuclear forces has increased."

An American embassy statement promptly dismissed the cable as "faked." Declaring that "no such message was either sent or received," the embassy said that "there has been no discussion with the government of Japan of any kind, preliminary or otherwise, concerning any kind of military or naval co-operation involving U.S. nuclear weapons."

The socialist charges acquired an aura of ready credibility with the public against the background of Defence Secretary Melvin Laird's controversial visit here last July and the recent appearance of an article in a government-subsidized journal parallelling the purported U.S. plan.

'Toil of Poor' Pays for U.S. Affluence

SANTIAGO (WP) — Chilean President Salvador Allende opened the third U.N. Conference on Trade and Development Thursday with an impassioned denunciation of industrial states for creating a world where "the toil and resources of the poorer nations pay for prosperity of the affluent peoples."

Before 1,500 delegates from 141 nations, Allende singled out the United States, international corporations and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as flagrant perpetrators of "unfair international division of labor, based on a dehumanized concept of mankind."

Playing host to UNCTAD, as the five-week conference is known, Allende offered numerous local examples to document his indictment of the developed world:

"Experience, often a hard taskmaster, has taught us that in order to meet our people's needs and provide each one with the means of full self-realization, it was essential to leave behind the capitalist regime of dependence and forge ahead along a new road, the socialism we are starting to build."

Despite the tough-talking Marxist's picture of a world in which the greedy maintain rigid control, Allende concluded his 70-minute speech by suggesting that over all, conditions are favorable for a new economic order.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim then spoke briefly in what seemed to be an effort at softening the criticisms of the industrial states, whose co-operation is needed if the conference is to achieve its objective of aiding more balanced development.

Allende's only conciliatory move was to avoid in most cases specifically naming the United States in his attacks, though the target was obvious to all.

Said Allende: "This economic, financial and trade order, as prejudicial to the third world as it is so beneficial for the affluent countries, is defended by most of these with bulldog tenacity — through their economic might, through their cultural influence, and, on some occasions, and by some powers, through almost irresistible forms of pressure, through armed interventions which violate all the commitments assumed in the charter of the United Nations."

Later he enumerated U.S. military interventions over the years in this hemisphere and specified economic pressures mounted against Peru and Chile to protect American interests.

As for the international corporations, he said: "They have their own objectives, their own trade policies, their own shipping policies . . . a world of their own."

Allende noted "the plundering indulged in by these consortia, and their powerful corruptive influence on public institutions in rich and poor countries alike," and suggested they were a burden on U.S. taxpayers.

EDITH PIAF

'I Regret Nothing . . .'

THE UNFORGETABLE VOICE OF EDITH PIAF, France's most beloved singing star is featured in I Regret Nothing, an hour-long colour documentary on Friday, April 14 on Channels 2 and 6 at 9.

A Tribute to France's Little Sparrow

The French called her "the little sparrow" — an apt title for the delicate, lively songbird with the extraordinary voice. She soared to international fame as if on the wings of a bird, but those wings were clipped, and she left behind her a jagged and absorbing drama.

Such was Edith Piaf, France's most beloved singing star, who crammed in to her 47-year life adventure that was reflected in passionate song on the stage, and in her private life, a world of lovers, alcohol and drugs.

More than 20 of her unforgettable songs, and deep, probing interviews with her closest friends, are featured in I Regret Nothing, an hour-long musical documentary on Piaf and her turbulent life to be telecast Friday, April 14, at 9 p.m. (in color) on CBC television.

Unlike many documentary-type interviews about departed stars, the words of Charles Aznavour and Eddie Constantine (her "proteges"), Michel Emer, who wrote several of her greatest hits, her close friend Bruno Coquatrix, and her first husband, Jacques Pills, are refreshingly free from the usual "soft soap" of show business.

Blindness

Born in 1915 in a lower-class district of Paris, Piaf grew up with the underworld, cared for by the girls of a brothel in Normandy. Blindness and other problems plagued her childhood years, and after a miraculous cure during a religious pilgrimage, left her with a child-like devotion to the Church.

By the time she was 14, the young Edith had become a popular street-singer and amateur prostitute, the latter as much from inclination as need, she later recalled. During her turbulent life, her adoring public doted as much on her numerous affairs and marriages (her first to Jacques Pills, ended in divorce) in 1956; her second, to Greek hairdresser Theo Sarapo, 20 years her junior, lasted until her death) as on her fame as an entertainer.

Ironically, her only child, a daughter born in the 1930s, died at the age of two. Piaf, shattered, could never bring herself to have another.

With fame came noteriety: involved in a wildly sensational Paris murder in 1937, Piaf found herself nearly back in the gutter — but she pulled herself up even higher into the limelight within the year. An air of drama clung to her for the rest of her life, and it was from this point that she became one of those stars gloatingly admired for her dangerous public life.

Love of Life

By the mid-1940s she had become one of the best-known singers in France, and the star of several films. Success upon success followed, and the public idolized her more and more. Marcel Cerdan, the French boxing star with whom she had an affair for several years, died in 1950; by 1956, her stormy four-year marriage with Jacques Pills had ended in divorce; other affairs brought disaster; and finally, her surprise marriage to Theo Sarapo, a young Greek 20 years her junior whom she turned into a singing star, made her the most talked-about entertainer in Europe.

Extravagant and wildly flamboyant, Piaf covered her loneliness and desire to return to unpretentious anonymity behind a solid cloak of fast living. "With her, every impulse was a command," commented her first husband (who died in 1970, as did Theo Sarapo). "Her love of life took its toll on her health — she explained her drug-taking by her illnesses."

Producer Michael Houldey, who wrote and directed the hour-long documentary special, was able to obtain rare and seldom-seen films of her unforgettable performances and other highlights of her life. Especially fascinating is a newsreel clip filmed in 1937 — an interview with the young and stunningly beautiful Piaf, who angrily berates the newsmen for having suspected her of the aforemmentioned crime, and, at the end, breaks into floods of tears.

Burned Out

Utterly burned out, Piaf died in 1963 at the age of 47, and her public gave her one of France's most flamboyant funerals. Today, the mention of her name brings forth tributes not only from an older generation, who worshipped her, but from the young who know her by reputation, and from her surviving records — unparalleled tributes to the little songbird who brought so much happiness, but found little of it for herself.

I Regret Nothing is a BBC-TV production, sponsored on CBC television by Shell Canada, and narrated by Yves Montand.

By PENNY PENCE

Q: Please set us straight. Didn't another actor play in Harvey on Broadway years ago before James Stewart was in the role? Everyone talks of it as Stewart's role but I don't believe the part was his at the start. — D.W.

A: You are correct. Frank Fay was the originator and Stewart stepped in for the summer when Fay went on vacation in 1948 In 1950, however, Stewart won an Oscar for his portrayal in the film version and then again last year he and Helen Hays reunited on Broadway in the play.

Q: Please tell me if Carroll O'Connor of All in the Family is as unreasonable in real life as he is in the series. — S.L.

A: O'Connor admits that he does have his moments of being unreasonable, as most of us do, but his Archie Bunker portrayal is no more than the work of a very good actor.

Q: Please tell me if there is a recording of the theme from the Wednesday night NBC Mystery Movie Available. — W.G.

A: The latest recording of that theme is one by Henry Mancini.

Q: Has Kam Fong of Hawaii Five-O always been an actor? — Y.R.

A: No. He used to be a policeman.

Q: Where's Tommy Smothers these days? — U.G.

A: Tommy is here in Hollywood, has been signed to appear in a cameo role in the upcoming feature, Another Day at the Races.

Q: Read that Lucille Ball broke her leg. What will that do to her show?—R.D.

A: Nothing much, she claims. Her writers will, no doubt, key the scripts around the accident, permitting her to recupe in front of the cam-

Q: If Johnny Carson moves his show to Los Angeles, what will he do with his home in Manhattan—F.S.

A: Johnny has already offered his New York pad in the UN Plaza for sale. He's asking $175,000. We suspect that's an indication Carson is serious about his move to the West Coast.

Q: You can help me win a bet. I said Flip Wilson was married and had four children. Was I right?—T.R.

A: You were, but you aren't any more. Flip Wilson WAS married, but he isn't anymore. He's divorced. He does, however, have four children.

Coverage of the Flight Of Apollo 16 on CBC TV

CBC television will give extensive coverage to the flight of Apollo 16 on its 13-day mission to land the fifth set of American astronauts on the moon's surface. Coverage begins with blastoff Sunday, April 16 at 12:30 p.m. EST and ends with splashdown Friday April 28 at 3:00 p.m.

In between, astronauts John W. Young, Thomas K. Mattingly and Charles M. Duke Jr. will have the adventure of their lives as they spend more time exploring the moon's surface than man has ever before, with three moonwalks in the offing.

The CBC-TV feed will come from CBS, with news correspondent Walter Cronkite anchoring special reports from the Florida space centre and CBS headquarters in New York. Cronkite will be joined by former astronaut Walter Schirra who will give special analysis throughout the flight of Apollo 16. The CBC television commentators will be announced shortly.

The journey by navy Captain Young, and rookie astronauts Lieutenant Commander Mattingly and air force Major Duke, is the next to last in the Apollo program, which began in October 1968 with a flight under the command of Walter Schirra.

Young and Duke will pilot Apollo 16's lunar module to a landing in an area called Descartes, a plan surrounded by rugged lunar highlands. They will survey the area in the latest model of the Lunar Rover, conducting experiments and collecting material.

WALT DISNEY'S ageless characters Mickey Mouse and Pluto help to celebrate Donald Duck's birthday on Sunday evening, Channel 2 at 6.

MICKEY MOUSE, PLUTO AT DONALD'S PARTY

It has often been said that man's best friend is his dog and Mickey Mouse's friend, Pluto, is no exception to that axiom.

Mickey's faithful pet has been seen and enjoyed by millions in theatres and on TV since his conception by Walt Disney in the 1930 cartoon, The Chain Gang.

In that animated short, Walt considered the yellow, long-eared pup a bloodhound. Today, after years of maturity, Pluto is just an ordinary hound who pays a return visit to "the Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday evening, April 16, for Donald Duck's birthday celebration in the animated hour, At Home With Donald Duck.

During the party, Pluto is seen in one of his many cartoon adventures, Pluto's Blue Note, when Donald's nephews, Huey, Dewey and Louie, run home movies to entertain the guests.

Pluto's popularity stems from his ability to generate havoc in any given situation as he did in his second film for Disney, The Picnic. His antics so convincingly broke up a serene pastoral setting that a young Walt Disney realized his new cartoon character had the makings of a Hollywood star. The master animator decided to cast the frolicking canine as Mickey's permanent pet.

As the faithful friend to the world famous mouse, the mischievous dog still lacked a name. Walt casually dropped the name Pluto to the Pup during one of his story meetings at the Disney Studios during the early 1930s and the appellation stuck. The rubbery-legged hound was soon making cartoons with his name above the title.

Canadian Role

Rob Iscove, a 24-year-old Toronto dancer, will choreograph the movie version of Jesus Christ Superstar being made by Canadian Norman Jewison in Israel this summer.

In addition to forty-eight cartoons of his own, Pluto has appeared in numerous films with other Disney personalities like Minnie Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy. He frequently appears on World of Disney and most recently has become a regular on the new half-hour TV comedy series, The Mouse Factory. In his spare time the lovable dog travels to Disneyland and Walt Disney World to greet visitors as the parks' official mascot.

Popular B.C. Outdoors Show Returns for Eighth Season

Klahanie means, "the great outdoors" in the Chinook trading language of the Pacific, and it is a word that has come to symbolize the deep love of many Canadians for their country's majestic wilderness areas.

For seven seasons, Klahanie has signified many enjoyable hours for CBC-TV viewers. The popular Vancouver film series returns Saturday, April 15 at 1:30 p.m., with new and fascinating film footage on nature, wildlife and the environment in Canada. As in past years, the emphasis will again be on conservation.

Don White, a well-known B.C. outdoorsman who has long been closely involved with wildlife and conservation, is the series' new host. His particular field of interest centres around outdoor life and activities that preserve the wonders of the environment.

Quetico, on April 15, is a film saga of Rochelle and Richard Wright's adventurous journey by canoe and on foot through picturesque Quetico Park, in Ontario.

Other programs to be featured on Klahanie in the coming weeks include the story of a lighthouse keeper and his family, on the north coast of B.C.; a visit to Death Valley, U.S.A.; the delights of springtime in the Okanagan Valley of B.C.; a film on Cannary Channel, at the mouth of the Fraser River; a visit to Wells Gray Provincial Park in Eastern B.C.; a feature on killer whales; and a gala tour of isolated communities on the B.C. coast and how they are served by helicopter.

Welby Wins Award

The Myasthenia Gravis Foundation has cited the American Broadcasting Company for the support given the foundation in bringing attention to the efforts to combat the disease with the recent telecast of the All the Pretty People episode of Marcus Welby, M.D.

A spokesman for the foundation in making the award, said: "On behalf of the entire Myasthenia Gravis Foundation membership, we salute the American Broadcasting Company for giving this gigantic push in bringing nearer the day of conquest over this cruel neuro-muscular disease.

Future Guaranteed For Disney's World

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ron Miller leaned his massive frame back in his black leather chair, smiled and said: "People think if it's clean it's Disney. But we require story and conflict just like everyone else."

Miller, 245-pound former end for Los Angeles Rams, has a lot to smile about as executive producer for Walt Disney Productions.

At a time when production is at a standstill for many series while they await their fate in the fall network schedules, Miller's crews are hard at work on The Wonderful World of Disney. Not for next season, but the season after that.

The show is signed with NBC through the 1973-74 season and has an option for the following year. The long lead time is needed for the nature-study films, which take up to 1½ years to complete.

After 18 years, the Disney formula remains the same: warmth, pathos, visual comedy, high adventure.

It is difficult to tell from a look at the series that Disney, who died in 1967, is not still at the helm. At the studio he is still spoken of as though he were in the next room and might walk in at any minute.

"If we tried to change our image I think we'd be in real trouble," said Miller, who is married to Disney's eldest daughter, Diane. Disney persuaded Miller to give up football and accept a job as an assistant director in 1957 on Old Yeller.

"When I come to an area in a script that I question, I try to iamgine how Walt would have handled it. I try to go in the direction I think Walt would have taken."

Unlike other studios, there is a close alliance at Disney's Burbank operation between television and feature films. Sometimes, when a production is begun no one knows whether it will appear first in the theatre or on the home screen.

The philosophy is to pump a little extra money into any two-part TV story that looks especially promising. That was the case with The Biscuit Eater, which started out for television and is now in theatres.

But never mind; one of these years it will be sliced up for the television series, as are all Disney films except such highly profitable perennials as Snow White, Mary Poppins and a few others. The studio's syndicated children's show, The Mouse Factory, is largely pieced together from old cartoon shorts.

Song Competition

The Canadian Conference of the Arts is sponsoring a song-writing competition to encourage and discover Canadian talent, with a $10,000 first prize.

CBC CORRESPONDENT TOM EARLE is on the scene making first-hand reports on events in Northern Ireland for CBC Radio's The World At Eight and CBC-TV's The National.

Our Man in Ireland

Last August Tom Earle's ambition of 25 years was finally realized. He was transferred to London to become CBC's foreign correspondent there. Since his posting he's spent a good deal of time in Ireland, reporting on the strife in Ulster for CBC Radio's The World At Eight and CBC-TV's The National.

While he is enjoying his overseas stint immensely, he admits that covering the scene in Belfast with award-winning photographer Phil Pendry has sometimes been hazardous and that it's depressing to tour the rubble-filled streets. The day after one of his visits to Belfast, the hotel where he had been staying was blown up. Such is the life of a foreign correspondent which, these days, is almost akin to being a war correspondent.

Before his posting to London, Tom Earle was the CBC's first Parliament Hill Bureau Chief in Ottawa. He was president of the Press Gallery in 1967. Earle joined CBC News in 1953, left for a year, and when he came back in 1955 was transferred to Ottawa, his home for the next 16 years. He confesses that among the things he misses most is "Ottawa in the winter."

A Montrealer by birth, Earle was born April 4, 1927. He began his journalistic career as press agent for a steamship line when he was 19. For five years he was press agent for Canadian Pacific. This background served a useful purpose when he was en route to England last fall on the final voyage of CP's Empress of Canada. A fire broke out on board and Earle covered the incident for CBC News.

Married, he has two daughters, Stephanie, 13, who attends the Royal Ballet School, and Leslie, 15. He says it took some time to adjust to their new life, just getting "used to the effort to do ordinary things" in a city the size of London.

When he's not out on assignment, he reports in each day to the London CBC office on Great Titchfield Street, where he usually feeds a story to The World At Eight for broadcast the following morning. Because of the time element, he rarely does much for The World At Six.

Earle does the occasional feature item for the News or Weekend. Besides the continuing battle in Belfast, Earle reports regularly on the European Common Market and the implications Britain's entry will have for the Commonwealth, and the state of the British economy, (one million are presently unemployed).

Last month Earle was joined by CBC correspondent Tom Leach who now shares the heavy load of reporting.

Earle's previous overseas assignments had him covering Commonwealth Conferences and European Market meetings. In January 1971 he toured East Asia with Prime Minister Trudeau as a radio reporter. A year ago he accompanied External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp on his visit to Africa. He had also subbed for David Halton during his Paris tenure (Earle is bilingual), and relieved others in London.

To keep informed on his many areas of reporting, Earle reads a lot: four British newspapers, the airmail edition of The Globe and Mail (Toronto), Maclean's, Saturday Night, plus personal correspondence with friends back home in the Press Gallery and Canadian Press. He does, after all, have to interpret the British scene for Canadian listeners.

Friendly and enthusiastic, Earle obviously enjoys his job. For him, there is no place he'd rather be, except perhaps Ottawa when his London term is over.

The Man From Dakota (xx), on 4 at 9:30. Wallace Beery stars in this 1940 Civil War drama.

Bullet For a Badman (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. A violent tale of revenge and Indian uprisings starring Audie Murphy and Darren McGavin.

The Comancheros (xxx), on 5 at 7:30. A rough-house western comedy about a Texas Ranger whose problems are aggravated by a rambunctious gambler. Excellent cast with John Wayne, Stuart Whitman, Ina Balin and Nehemiah Persoff.

Jacques Cousteau, on 4 at 7:30. Octopus, Octopus sets the record straight for a misunderstood species. Cousteau finds the octopus to be shy, intelligent, courageously protective of her young and definitely not ferocious. Narrator is Rod Serling. (60 mins.)

CBS News Special, on 7 and 12 at 7:30. You and Your children have a special interest in this report on traditional vs. open classrooms. Narrator Charles Kuralt says the traditional classroom creates "boredom and anxiety, leading to indifference and failure." On the other hand, a 1969 poll showed most parents preferred the traditional school, as preparation for competitive adult life. (60 mins.)

NBC News Special, on 5 at 9:30. Thou Shalt Not Kill — how six people were killed in cold blood. During Christmas week in 1966, two men murdered six people in Salt Lake City. They're now on Death Row in Utah State Prison — their fate resting with a pending Supreme Court decision on the issue of capital punishment. Why interview two convicted murderers? To provide, says NBC New vice president Donald Meaney, "a fascinating and frightening insight into the minds of two killers and their rationalization for their acts." (60 mins.)

What Is Successful—And Why?

THE WASHINGTON POST

Mirror, mirror on the wall, which is the fairest TV show of them all?

Unless 40 million American viewers are wrong — a possibility not to be lightly dismissed in this case — the most gratifying network evening programs are a trio centring around an endearing bigot, a smiling, sympathetic sawbones, and a hip, black funnyman.

The three prime-time series —All in the Family, Marcus Welby, MD, and The Flip Wilson Show — have captured the highest audience ratings, with remarkable consistency, since the start of the 1971-72 season last September.

Perhaps by the mechanisms of competitive enterprise, or perhaps through sheer, even-handed coincidence, each of the three major networks can claim one blockbuster apiece. CBS' All in the Family is the parvenu of the lot, having been introduced last January as a mid-season replacement. The longest running entry is Welby, now in its third season on ABC, while Flip Wilson, which made its debut for NBC in the fall of 1970, holds the middle ground with respect to longevity.

Two-Way

The mirror that reflects these successes, of course, is a two-way affair. If we could ask the little man at the business end of the picture tube what he sees looking out at us viewers, we'd undoubtedly gain deep insight into the current state of the American psyche. His read-out might tell us much about our common hopes and qualms, about the way we feel about ourselves and others, about how we view today's turbulent world.

One might get the same thing by asking what is it that gives Wilson, Welby and Archie Bunker, the rabid hero of All in the Family, their persistent appeal.

No doubt part of the explanation lies in habitual sticktuitiveness, the inertia that makes us cling to the familiar, once we are hooked in the first place. But why do these three particular shows succeed in hooking so many? Are they truly superior to the competition, and if so in what way? Or is there simply something in their substance that answers national psychic or emotional needs of the moment more efficently?

The evidence of the style and content of the series suggests a combination of factors. The immediately striking thing about the top-runners, though, is that between them they relate directly and obviously to the gravest and most abiding popular concerns of the past year, with the lone exception of the war in Southeast Asia — too touchy a subject, perhaps, to serve as the butt of mass entertainment.

The country's shaky economy, however, along with racial unrest, health problems, the generation gap and other factional divisions, are hardly minor or peripheral issues these days. They are the topics that most trouble the nation's conscience, that provoke our wildest flights of rhetoric and rancor. They occupy the foreground of nearly everyone's anxieties. What could be more natural, then, than for the television audience to devote itself to precisely those factions which might mollify these anxieties, or siphon them off in cathartic release?

It's easy, however, to go overboard with such explanations, or to get overly psychoanalytical about them. The fact is that virtually every show on television can be readily saddled with implications beyond its surface, if one has a mind to do so. Clearly they all function as escape, or anodyne, or wish-fulfillment — from Mod Squad and The Odd Couple to Gunsmoke, Here's Lucy and Ironside.

It must be the packaging, then that puts Archie, Flip and Marcus so far out in front. In simple show-biz terms, their shows are winners, a conclusion certainly supported by their popularity. And if one starts from the premise that mass diversion rules out profundity, and automatically insures a certain degree of blandness and insipidity, then critical comparison of the top three with each other and their rivals leads to the same verdict.

Assets

The assets of All in the Family are the most conspicuous. If it were nothing else, it would be one of the freshest bits of material to come along in a considerable while. Even though it is modelled on an overseas success (the BBC's Til Death Do Us Part), it still qualifies as the first real innovation in prime-time entertainment since Laugh-In.

The show's notorious frankness, moreover, extends not just to bigotry, but also to such matters as sex, politics and money, all of which are treated in so unbuttoned a fashion as to make conventional situation comedy seem even more pecksniffian than ever. For conceptual novelty, comic ingenuity and distinctive characterization, the series plainly merits its laurels.

The distinctions of Marcus Welby are rather more subtle, especially since there are so many precedents and parallels, including at least one, CBS' Medical Centre, which has been logged steadfastly high on the charts as well. Generally taut, slick scripts, adroit casting, editing and camerawork, and the charisma of the star, Robert Young, probably account for Welby's edge. Above all, there's the character of the hero. Wise, indulgent, compassionate, open-minded, generous, expert and indefatigable, Welby is, in short, the dream doctor Americans remember or fanticize from days of yore, the kind of physician who now seems as hard to find as an alchemist.

The appeal of The Flip Wilson Show, being far more generalized than the other two, is a bit more elusive, but perhaps it's best summed up in the star's sobriquet — a quick, breezy, with it flippancy that's topical enough to strike immediate response but never cuts so deep as to hit sore spots.

The production is further buoyed up by a brisk revue format, a steady supply of big guns on the guest roster, and the manipulative but crisp formula humor. Of the three, the Wilson show clearly comes closest to being pure, frothy escape.

Reruns Really Are Earlier

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

WASHINGTON— We have been bombarded these past three weeks with complaints from viewers who have discovered— again this season — that re-runs have begun earlier than — it seems — they used to begin.

This has been particularly disturbing to those who describe themselves as "captive viewers." This includes the disabled, the retired or old and a group describing itself, usually, as "night workers" with "nothing else to do."

Many viewers still hold to the notion that a U.S. television season begins the week after Labor Day and continues for 39 straight weeks with new episodes for each series. The summer, then, consists of 13 re-runs. The notion became implanted in the 1950s and it absolutely refuses to die. Actually, the 39-13 season went the way of the five cent cup of coffee or a quick trip to and from work in the 1960s.

Production costs for programs went up and as the price soared so did the ratio of repeated programs. An I Love Lucy episode could be done in the 1950s for about $20,000; now one costs $100,000. A full hour adventure episode was budgeted at $60,000 in the 1950s and now costs, usually, over $200,000.

In the early 1960s, the number of original programs in a season slipped to 36, then to 30. By the late 1960s, the numbers were 26 originals and 26 repeats. And, beginning in 1970, the pattern had been fixed that holds today: 24 originals, 24 repeats and four pre-emptions for some sort of special programming.

The season that once ran from September to June, now runs from September to March. The abbreviation hasn't hurt the volume of television viewing, but it has added greatly to the number of people who complain that "there's nothin' to watch."

There is plenty to watch. First, there are all those programs that compete with your favorites and which you haven't seen.

All this past season more than 50 per cent of those watching television between 8 and 8:30 p.m., Saturdays, have attended to Archie Bunker and All In The Family. Now, he's repeating his aphorisms, malapropisms and prejudices and nothing will be lost by sampling Emergency (NBC) or by taking a final look at Bewitched (ABC).

Or those "with nothing to watch" might take this opportunity to discover public, or non-commercial, television. Some surveys indicate that the public channels are ignored by most viewers about 80 per cent of the time.

Even in the worst of times, the most discriminating viewer can find five hours of commercial television each week that is rewarding. First, there are the news and public affairs programs, which everyone says he wants to see and which few will attend. The weekly 60 Minutes (Sunday) continues to be entertainingly done non-fiction and The Sunday news interview programs merit the attention of any person who wants to fulfill his simple obligations of citizenship.

And, finally, there's baseball on Saturdays. As Jimmy Cannon once wrote after looking at Baseball's attendance figures: "Today's a nice day for a ball game. I think I'll move the TV set out to the sun porch."

Swedes Fight Sex And Violence on TV

By IAN WESTERGREN

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — It began as an isolated action by a Baptist pastor and his flock in the tiny south Swedish village of Aneby last January.

Today the boycott against Swedish television — in protest against sex and violence on the screen — is spreading across the nation.

"We didn't mean to start a national campaign against the Swedish Broadcasting Corporation (SR)," said Goethe Henriksson, the 36-year-old mild-mannered and soft-spoken pastor of Aneby Baptist Church.

"We are just a group of Christians who are getting fed up with the sex and violence they are putting out and decided to try to do something about it."

Today Henriksson estimates that more than 50,000 Swedes have joined the boycott movement. He keeps an informal count through the forms he and his supporters have printed up for all participants to fill in.

The boycott proper will start July 1, 1972, and last for three months. The participants will cancel their TV licenses for a three-month period and put their TV sets away.

In Sweden, like in many other European countries, the owner of a TV set pays a license fee of $40 a year for the privilege of watching SR's two TV channels. There is no commercial network.

SR, which enjoys a monopoly on TV and radio broadcasting in the nation, has for long been a controversial operation. The company, which is — in practice if not in theory — state-owned, also runs three national radio networks and a number of local stations.

It derives its operating funds from the TV and radio license fees.

Not until Henriksson came along with his call for an end to "sex scenes, violence and swear words, which SR feeds us and our children day out and day in, night after night."

Henriksson and his group conducted an investigation of sorts, monitoring both TV channels for a period of 10 days. The investigation yielded three instances of sexual intercourse, dozens of cases of "brutal violence" and "scores of swear words" used in various SR programs, he said.

"As Christians and as parents we cannot just sit back and accept this state of affairs," Henriksson said. "We want SR to stop transmission of these permissive things and give us more and better Christian programs instead."

Henriksson and his supporters are also making plans for some form of legal action against SR.

"We have a new law in this country against undue exposure of pornographic pictures in store windows and against sending such pictures in the mail to people who have not ordered them.

"To me SR's transmission of pornography into our homes, without us having ordered it, appears to be a violation of this law," Henriksson said.

In the middle of the controversy sits Otto Nordenskioeld, the director general of SR, a former labor union chief.

Nordenskioeld, who was confronted by Henriksson on a popular SR TV show the other day, does not accept the criticism.

"I can understand that some people are offended by certain things in our programs," he said. "But that doesn't mean that I am prepared to act as a judge of taste and ban these programs."

"SR being a monopoly, we have a responsibility to cater to all tastes, within limits. I get letters from Henriksson's group every day. But I also get letters from people, who want more westerns with more violence.

"Sex and violence are part and parcel of our times. These things are to be found in almost all modern movies and plays. Should we then ban all modern movies and plays for SR? No, we cannot do it and I am not going to do it," he told Henriksson in a passionate exchange.

Mary Tyler Moore Tells Us All

A consensus of the letters Mary Tyler Moore has received in the two years "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" has been on the air boil down to half-a-dozen general questions that her fans seem to ask over and over. Following are some of the questions and the way Miss Moore answers them:

Question: "If you started out as a dancer, what took you from dancing to comedy acting?"

Answer: "Actually, I didn't go from dancing direct to comedy. I played a lot of straight roles in every half-hour series on television — at least it seemed that way at the time. Then came the role of 'Sam' on the 'Richard Diamond' series which was sort of on its way to comedy, but 'Laura' on 'The Dick Van Dyke Show' was really the first chance I had to do comedy."

Question: "How did you land your first TV role?"

Answer: "Well, if you mean the usual star roles, and featured bits and so forth, it was the usual way, through agents and auditions but it was kind of funny the way I got the part of Laura.

I had auditioned about a year before for Danny Thomas to play the role of his daughter on his series. After my audition, Danny said, 'Honey no one in the world would believe you were my daughter with your nose alongside mine!' When Danny and Sheldon Leonard and Carl Reiner were all considering actresses for the Van Dyke Show Danny said, 'Get the girl with the beautiful nose and the three names."

Question: "What did you learn by working with Dick Van Dyke for five years?"

Answer: "There's only one answer to that one and it's 'everything.' Seriously, Dick is not only the most talented actor but one of the nicest people I've ever met. It's amazing but it's the truth that in all those five years I don't remember Dick ever raising his voice. With that kind of harmony from the star of the show it made learning not only easy but pleasant. Of course, we all learned from working with Carl Reiner who created the show, wrote a lot of the script and was an inspiration to all of us. Now, when ever I feel a little tense I remember how Dick never lost his cool, and it helps. It really does."

Question: "What sold you on the idea of doing a series of your own?"

Answer: "I'd wanted to do movies, but the movies they were doing at that time were not for me, and I found the method of filming movies a bore compared to our 'three camera, in-front-of-a-life-audience technique which is the same as we used on the Van Dyke Show. Working from early in the morning to late at night in makeup and wardrobe day after day is a drag compared to our situation where we rehearse for four days in old clothes and no makeup and then shoot it on the fifth day. It's like doing a little play every week and I like it. I found out I really missed doing television."

Question: "Did you decide to do a show before you actually had a format?"

Answer: "I must say CBS was very good about that. After Dick Van Dyke and I did a special on CBS the network heads asked me if I'd like to do a series. I said yes. Then they told me I could put together my own package and do any kind of show I liked, so Jim Brooks and Allan Burns worked out our format and everyone was happy.

P.S. We still are."

MARY TYLER MOORE, successful start of her own TV show Tuesday nights on Channel 2 and 6, answers questions from her fans.

Please Don't Knock the Accordion Player

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tell Jimmy Stewart he stutters a little bit, knock his acting techniques, rap his defunct television series, but don't belittle his virtuousity as an accordionist.

The long-time, gangling movie star is touchy when he comes to his musicianship, not that he will ever be a threat to Lawrence Welk — or even Tiny Tim.

Asked if he actually played the accordion on his unlamented series, Stewart was instantly offended.

"What are you implying?" he asked, his color rising.

Did he or did he not play the squeezebox on the show?

"Well, er, ah," he mumbled defensively, "you might say it was a mixture. I played some of the tunes and some of them were dubbed." Informed that he was no Myron Floren, Jimmy once again took umbrage and ordered another Bloody Mary.

"Don't think I haven't had audiences who thought of me as a fine musician," he said.

"One night Henry Fonda and I were playing small roles on Broadway in 1930s.

"The play folded after five dismal days. On closing night I took my accordion to the party and about three in the morning we started for our hotel in Madison Square."

Jimmy acknowledged they had imbibed a copious amount of champagne.

PASSED THE HAT

"We got about half way home and Hank dared me to start playing the accordion to see if I could draw a crowd. We were in the middle of Times Square and there wasn't a soul in sight. It was bitter cold.

"Well I began playing some of my repertoire — Ragtime Cowboy Joe, Dinah, Wait Till The Sun Shones Nelly and part of Rhapsody in Blue.

"Wouldn't you know four or five people appeared from nowhere and stood around listening."

Thus encouraged, Jimmy began playing with more volume and confidence. In a short time the bystanders had swelled to 20.

"I was pretty young at the time, and the success went to my head," Stewart said, ducking his head modestly.

"What really made the recital a great triumph for me was the fact that one of the poor souls requested a particular song. I can't remember the title, but by God I know it.

"After that some of the others began making requests and I was playing up a storm. Singing too."

At best Stewart's voice is little more than a croak. He took this observation with dubious grace and continued.

"Henry Fonda was really surprised. And because we weren't exactly rich at the time he began passing the hat among our audience. I might add that was his only contribution. He didn't even sing.

"You know how stories grow over the years. A man tends to forget or exaggerate a little bit.

"But as I recall, Henry offered the hat to everyone standing there.

FINAL HUMILIATION

"I claim to this day he collected exactly 18 cents, cash money. But Hank has been going around telling people he didn't get a single penny. "Now you know that's not right. I mean, I play the accordion a lot better than that."

The proud musician polished off another Bloody Mary in anticipation of retelling his final humiliation that long ago pre-dawn.

"About four o'clock in the morning a guy hit me on the back of the leg with something hard. When I turned around it was one of New York's finest with a nightstick. He was furious.

"Look, it takes me hours to get all these drunks off the streets and bedded down in doorways. Now you come along making them awful noises with that musical machine and singing. Now I got to get them back to sleep."

Cult Surrounds Defunct Series

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Nothing fades faster than a cancelled television series, they say. So how come Star Trek won't go away?

This show about galaxy-hopping spacemen of the future went off the network nearly four years ago, yet enthusiasm still waxes hot among its fans.

Star Trek, which featured Montreal-born actor William Shatner, has engendered a cult unlike any other series, and for thousands of people the Star Ship Enterprise is still out there exploring new worlds.

Nearly 4,000 people attended a Star Trek convention in New York last January and conventions are planned next year for New York and Santa Barbara, Calif. Enthusiasts in Manchester, England, started a Star Trek festival.

In Boston, episodes are used in graduate seminars at Emerson College to get students talking. Other colleges and high schools also use the show, and a few hospitals show certain episodes to mental patients.

Ask for Movie

Several community playhouses have put on original Star Trek plays, including the one in Denham Springs, La., which staged The Romulan Encounter last Nov. 15-19.

More than 100 privately-published fan magazines are devoted to this series and its characters.

NBC has asked its creator, Gene Roddenberry, to do a Star Trek Returns movie, which in turn would be a pilot for a new series. Star Trek is syndicated to about 125 stations in the United States, reruns are seen in 60 foreign countries.

Gave Kids Hope

"I think the thing people dug was that Star Trek was one show that was optimistic about the future," he says.

"Kids today are growing up at a time when people are saying there is no tomorrow, that it all may be over in 20 years. Star Trek said there is a tomorrow and that it can be as challenging and as exciting as the past. It said there are things to be done, places to be explored, that things are not at a standstill."

Roddenberry poured a lot of his own philosophy into the series.

"The series constantly asked is this good, is that bad, is this beautiful? We had themes that to be different is not to be bad. Star Trek emphasized that we shouldn't interfere in the lives of other people. Maybe the kids saw something about Vietnam in that."

Another factor, undoubtedly, is that Star Trek appealed enormously to the imagination. It was the first space age series to tackle realistically the intriguing possibility of intelligent life on other heavenly bodies. That thought alone has become a career for scientists around the world.

The care that went into the creation not only of the hardware but the premises for other civilizations won the show a loyal following.

Fans write episodes, poetry, and music, and some cannot resist the godlike opportunity to create new — and perhaps more perfect — worlds. Inspired by Mr. Spock, the Vulcan officer with pointed ears, one fan created a Vulcan musical scale, a Vulcan book of songs, and a Vulcan dictionary.

Roddenberry said: "The thing you cannot do is shrug and say it's science fiction. You have to worry about things as small as what do people in advanced civilizations drink out of. Do kids and taxi drivers notice things like they do."

Film Premiere

The Rowdyman, a film written by and starring native Newfoundlander Gordon Pinsent and filmed in that province, will have its premiere there May 18.

Wyatt Earp Lured Back By Science

By DAN LEWIS

"The time is right for me to go back into television," said Hugh O'Brian, who has spent the last 10 years attempting to mount a movie career but still is best remembered for his TV role as Wyatt Earp.

For nine years, O'Brian steadfastly maintained that nothing in the world could lure him back to the grind of a television series.

"When I kept saying that," O'Brian contended, "it was because I felt it wasn't the time to come back. Now, the time is right. It's been 10 years and a whole new set of kids are watching TV now."

O'Brian will return next season in an hour-long action series, Probe, on NBC, Wednesday nights at 10. He will play a detective with an electronic-age flare for solving his cases. There will be as much technical creativity as action in the series, according to O'Brian.

He is now rationalizing the years he spent resisting television. "While this is the time to go back," he declared, "it wouldn't have been possible without the right show. This (Probe) is the right show because it relates to the thing I'm interested in, technology."

In fact, O'Brian's keen interest in space technology has led to a television special, Space in the Age of Aquarius, an hour's program which was aired nationally through the Hughes Television Network over 150 stations.

O'Brian is a space-program supporter and he has used some convincing methods to hammer home his points.

O'Brian's point is that the space program is not merely a race between powers to get there first, but an exploration that will be of enormous benefit to mankind in medicine, locating hidden resources, fight against pollution, and communication.

"I'm convinced that, thanks to the space program, there are certain things that positively will result within a few years," O'Brian contended. "We'll be able to eliminate the threats of hurricanes and push them out to sea, we'll be able to make early earthquake detection, and save all sorts of tragedies by being able to detect from space what can't be observed from earth even with the most sophisticated equipment."

O'Brian, who was far more anxious to discuss the special than his next-season series return, said he undertook the project because he felt there was such a big gap in public understanding of the real benefits of the space program.

Because he takes such a positive stand, O'Brian acknowledged, he failed to interest any of the three networks. "It took a lot of doing to get this show together and on the air," he said.

His interest in the space program already has brought him just reward. He is a winner of the 1972 Freedom Through Knowledge Award, a high tribute from the space community. The only other winner of the award was Bob Hope.

Now, about Probe.

"It's the type of character who will be very much involved in the things I'm interested in. I certainly didn't want to go back into TV in another Old West series, but I did want something that had action and is intelligent," O'Brian said. The pilot film was impressive enough for an early commitment from NBC, even before the network announced its new fall schedule.

Since the Wyatt Earp series, O'Brian made many movies, oddly enough, most of them around the world — everywhere but in Hollywood.

He was a victim of the old thinking among movie studios years ago that television stars couldn't make it in movies, that people wouldn't pay to see stars they could see for nothing on television. Oddly, the situation reversed this past year when a host of super movie stars learned that people wouldn't watch the stars they were accustomed to paying for at movies when they got them for free on TV.

O'Brian also will buck another tide. Very few television stars have made successful comebacks in new series. Stars like Vince Edwards, Danny Thomas, Chris George, George Maharis, James Garner and David Janssen all discovered this to be true.

HUGH O'BRIAN best remembered for his TV Role as Wyatt Earp returns to TV in a new series called Probe slated for the fall season.

Duty Bound

TORONTO (CP) — Radio and television, yielding "to the dictates of the market place," follow a youth-and-consumer orientation in program policy, to the dertiment of senior citizens, says the Toronto area presbytery of the United Church of Canada.

In a news release outlining what it will suggest to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission at the commission's meeting in Niagara Falls, Ont., the presbytery said Wednesday:

"The commission should consider using its regulatory powers to ensure that the programming needs of the elderly are met by the broadcasters.

"Public radio owes a higher duty to senior citizens because it is liberated from the profit orientation . . . CBC radio is urged to provide regular and more in-depth informational and community programming, between 15 minutes and one half-hour in length, which would be of particular interest to senior citizens."

Profile of 'King-Maker'

Richard J. Daley . . . a man who has been mayor of Chicago for 17 years . . . a man who has lived in the same blue-collar neighborhood for all his 70 years . . . a man who has been called a king-maker and described by the late Robert F. Kennedy as "the whole ball game" . . . and a man whose most recent political experience, the Illinois Primary, has caused a debate about whether he will continue to wield his great power . . .

CBS REPORTS examines this man and the political machine he has engineered for nearly 40 years on "Mayor Daley: A Study in Power" Thursday, April 20 (8:00-9:00 p.m., PT) on the CBS Television Network. CBS News Correspondent Charles Kuralt is the reporter.

"The broadcast studies the many factors which have made Daley one of the most powerful political figures in the 20th century," says producer Robert Markowitz.

Daley talks candidly to Kuralt about how his working class background has influenced his political decisions and how he has viewed his role as a major national power in the Democratic Party. Daley also discusses his role in the 1968 convention and his reputation as "king-maker."

RICHARD J. DALY
Mayor of Chicago

"In a way," says Markowitz, "a study of Daley is a civics lesson, revealing the way politics really works at the power centre. On the broadcast the Daley machine, the Cook County Democratic organization, is viewed from the bottom up, from the precinct captain and the ward boss right up to the top — and Richard Daley is the dynamic force, the power behind it all."

Canadian Composer on CBC Radio

A documentary by and about composer Harry Somers will be featured on Musicscope on CBC Radio at 8:03 p.m. on Thursday, April 20 (on CBC-FM at 8 p.m., Friday, April 14).

"Harry Somers has been described as "one of Canada's most provocative, searching, yet satisfying composers." On April 12 he will be recognized for his contribution when Governor General Michener will present him with the Order of Canada. Companions of the order are invested on the basis of "outstanding merit of the highest degree, especially service to Canada or humanity at large."

The documentary on Harry Somers was produced by Irving Glick for CBC Radio's Musicscope. Prepared and narrated by Norma Beecroft, it is a stereophonic soundscape of words and music. The program has interviews with composers John Weinzweig and Norman Symonds, conductor Victor Feldbrill, pianist Reginald Godden, and actress Barbara Chilcott (Mr. Somers' wife).

Excerpts of Harry Somers' music will be heard during the soundscape. Some of the compositions include the opening sequence from the opera Louis Riel, two movements from the North Country Suite, the third movement from Suite for Harp and Orchestra, and an excerpt from String Quartet No. 3. Also included will be miniatures for Flute, Cello, Spinet and Soprano; Wonder Song for Chorus; and the Prelude to Symphony for Winds, Brass and Percussion.

Love and Marriage

The Comedians — Love and Marriage, a comedy Channel 7 special discussing what just about everyone agrees are two of the most important things in life — love and marriage — will air Friday, April 14 at 7 p.m. on KIRO TV.

With versatile Carl Reiner as host, the show features laugh master Mel Brooks, Tony Randall, Toti Fields, Nipsey Russel and Albert Brooks, each of whom lends his or her wit and whimsy to the sixty minutes of fun and laughter.

In the special, Nipsey Russel rhymes his way into your heart and stirs your laughter from the start with everyman's solution to the problems of love and marriage in iambic pentameter. Mel Brooks adds hilarious comments and pokes fun at just abut everyone as only the "2000 year old man" can.

Tony Randall is the man with sage advice for married men who hold hands with a machine. Albert Brooks explains how women are attracted to him. And Toti Fields and Mel Brooks let everyone in on the secret of how sex and marriage affected their respective lives, and why they enjoy it.

The light and lively discussions are punctuated by antics which almost cost Carl Reiner his celebrated toupee. The show's host later confided that while he enjoyed working with the cast, "I've never worked with such a bunch of crazy nuts in my life. It was a madhouse from start to finish."

Of the special, David Susskind said it was one of the best he has ever produced, "and certainly the funniest hour ever aired on video."

I Just Walked Over On My Bike

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — One expects strange things on a Goldie Hawn set. So it was of no surprise when she excused herself in the middle of a conversation to talk to her plumber on the phone.

"We've just moved into a new home," said Goldie. "Boy, what troubles. I don't think any of the pipes are working right."

Somehow, one imagines that in Goldie's house, water comes out of gas jets, and gas from water faucets. She once huffed and puffed into a London studio commissary for a lunch interview, explaining why she was out of breath: "I just walked over on my bike."

That was during the filming of There's a Girl In My Soup. Now, she's working for producer Mike Frankovich, doing the movie version of the Broadway hit play Butterflies Are Free. The girl who created the role of Blythe Danner. Ironically, she's also working at the Columbia studio, but with a leading role in 1776, another big hit on Broadway in which Blythe had no part.

Goldie is the star of Butterflies Are Free because she has the marvellous quality of always looking young.

Leonard Gershe, who wrote the play and adapted it for the screen, told me why Blythe and Keir Dullea, who played the blind boy on Broadway, weren't picked for the movie version.

"Keir and Blythe were both marvellous on stage. But for the movie, Keir's too old. You can get away with playing a younger person on Broadway, but not in a movie."

Keir, Gershe revealed, is 34. "The youngest we could have made him look on the screen would have been 30—maybe. In the scene where his mother comes for him, it would have looked foolish for her to be taking a 30-year-old home."

As for Blythe, she's only 25, but she's a mature-looking 25, Gershe said. Here again, the role called for a younger-looking girl, especially since the male picked to play the blind boy (the Dullea role in the play) is Edward Albert, 20-year-old son of veteran actor Eddie Albert.

"Goldie has that little-girl quality," Gershe declared. "Sometimes she looks 15."

Young Albert was in his dressing room when I caught up with him on the set. Jars of fresh fruit and nuts cluttered the shelves. The refrigerator was filled with juices and health foods.

"I'm not an organic nut," he hastened to explain. "I watch my diet, and of course the family is all wrapped up in organic growing."

His father, Eddie Albert, has become a leading exponent on ecology and owns close to 20 organic farms.

The younger Albert is making his debut as a movie actor, and has landed one of the plum roles of the year.

He's a bright, articulate young man, who lives at home, believes in being prepared (he spent days walking around Los Angeles and taking buses wearing smoked glasses to virtually blind himself).

Sauntering back to the set, we encountered Goldie who by this time had gotten a very sad story from her plumber.

"We would have to go for the bigger house," she complained to herself.

This is the third feature film for Goldie; all have been for Mike Frankovich, former head of Columbia Pictures, now an independent producer. She won her Oscar as best supporting actress in her first film (Cactus Flower), but got mixed reviews for There's a Girl in My Soup, which co-starred Peter Sellers.

She's quite friendly on the set, but reluctant to give official interviews. Someone said her manager feels she has been overexposed in the press, and that she should hold back for a while — saving interviews for when the picture is released.

GOLDIE HAWN, Oscar winner for Best Supporting Actress in Cactus Flower, stars in her third feature, The Butterflies Are Free.

Raises Funds

In the first month of its fund-raising campaign, the Canadian Opera Company has collected $24,763.

And Her Co-Star Is Son of Famous Father

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Edward Albert is 21 years old. He is handsome, tall and starring with Goldie Hawn in his first motion picture.

He is Edward Albert Jr., son of Eddie (Green Acres) Albert and Margo.

In his film debut young Edward plays a blind boy-man in Butterflies Are Free. It is the first time he has ever acted on stage, screen or tube. Yet he appears serenly confident and poised.

More than anything else responsible for Albert's success is his proximity to where the action is. Neither of his parents was instrumental in helping their son win the role.

But the very fact that his mother and father are well known Hollywood figures is solely and directly the reason for the lad's good fortune.

The way Albert tells it, "Mary Loos — she's the niece of Anita Loos — has known me all me life. And Mary was the story editor for Mike Frankovich, the producer at Columbia.

"It seems they were looking for a young actor for the role and weren't having much success. Then Mary talked to me about it."

The story would seem logical enough if Eddie Albert's son had been an aspiring actor. It would be more plausible if he had an agent and hung around the in spots or haunted casting offices.

But No. Edward (he doesn't like being called Eddie because it confuses identities with his father) was a third-year student at UCLA.

He studied psychology, sociology, languages and literature.

"I avoided the drama department with a passion. I wanted a well-founded education."

Young Albert did work, however, as a slunky or gofer for producer Frank McCarthy on Patton. He'd also visited sound stages all his life wherever his father worked. But if he had acting ambitions they were latent and certainly unfulfilled.

Edward is young for 21, and naive. He still lives at home with his parents. He has a pleasing personality and gracious manners.

Perhaps it was these qualities that attracted Mary Loos and Frankovich. But it was three months before they signed Edward. Other young men were tested for the part.

"They thought I looked too young to play opposite Goldie," said Edward. "But finally when we worked in a scene together they agreed it would be all right. And it is.

"Goldie gives the best performance of her career. She's really terrific. Goldie will be a great star for many years."

What about Edward's future?

"I don't know," he said. "I've had more offers at Columbia, and some other picture possibilities elsewhere. But I'm not signed for anything.

"I plan to go back to school and finish up. I look on acting as more of a craft or a profession than I do an art. I've done a lot of photography. Even had my own shows. To me that is much more of an art."

But will Edward continue to act now that he's started?

"Yes, it's really great. I look forward to acting again," he said.

Edward Albert Jr. is hooked.

CBS News Correspondent Eric Sevareid began his news career at 18 on the Milwaukee Journal, worked for the Paris Herald-Tribune and United Press before joining CBS News.

Jack Lord, star of Hawaii Five-O on the CBS Television Network, became interested in motion picture techniques while making training films for the Maritime Service.
